In the World of Labor

By Paul G. Stevens

A Sharp Split in the Communist Party of the Indian Workers

The Communist Party of India, the dominant Indian political organization, has been split into two rival factions. The split is significant because it is the first of its kind in the party's history and because it may have far-reaching consequences for the Indian national movement.

The split was precipitated by a disagreement over the party's strategy and tactics. The faction on the left, led by the former general secretary of the party,主张 a more radical and aggressive approach to the national struggle, while the faction on the right, led by the current general secretary,主张 a more moderate and conciliatory approach.

The split is expected to have a significant impact on the political landscape of India. It could lead to a fragmentation of the left and a weakening of the Communist Party's influence in the national struggle. It is also possible that the split could lead to a more fragmented left, with smaller and less effective factions.

Rumblings in the C.P. of the Mother Country Also

In Britain, a similar split has been developing in the Communist Party of Great Britain. The split is significant because it is the first of its kind in the party's history and because it may have far-reaching consequences for the British labor movement.

Stop Fascism In America!

When an anti-fascist is in conflict, he must first recognize his principles, no matter how small or local in character, with the same concern and intensity that he feels for the principles of every other person. If a person works hard to make his principles realized, it will be realized and recognized as a principle by all.

...the struggle for freedom in Germany is a struggle for freedom in all parts of the world, and our principles are the same for all people, no matter where they live.

In conclusion, we must all stand together to fight for freedom, for principle, and for justice. Our principles are the same, regardless of where we live or what our background. We must all work together to achieve our goals and to ensure that our principles are realized.
