ON THE WAR FRONTS

by GEORGE SYRNS

Joseph Stalin has again shown that he is bent on fulfilling the terms of the 1945 Yalta Agreement, which he signed with the two fascist leaders of his time, Churchill and Roosevelt. The way for this agreement was a Nazi-Soviet pact made in 1939 by Stalin and Hitler. Stalin has now made another pact with Hitler. Again Stalin is trying to dominate the world, by strengthening his position at the expense of the world's peaceful forces.

With regard to the Italian question, Stalin is trying to entangle the world in his predatory ambitions. The Italian Fascists have again given Stalin a pretext for intervention in the Italian elections. Stalin is now trying to dominate the world with his puppet, Mussolini. This is a clear indication of Stalin's intent to dominate the world and to make the world his slave.

The world is now faced with the choice of either accepting Stalin's domination or fighting against it. The world must unite in order to defeat Stalin and his puppet, Mussolini. The world must unite in order to prevent Stalin from achieving his imperialist ambitions.

The world must unite in order to prevent Stalin from achieving his imperialist ambitions.

The Record of the War Labor Board of 1918

BY MICHAEL CORT

Immediately upon its inception in February 1918, the War Labor Board was called upon to act as a mediator in the many labor disputes that threatened to disrupt the production of war materials. The Board was given the authority to prevent strikes and to settle disputes by arbitration or conciliation. In many cases, the Board was able to resolve disputes without the need for strikes, thus maintaining the flow of essential war materials.

The War Labor Board was originally established by executive order of President Woodrow Wilson on February 12, 1918. The Board was composed of three members, each appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. The members were Joseph L. Moxcey, Roy D.胼, and Samuel H. McCall. The Board was housed in the old Treasury Building, located at 500 Pennsylvania Avenue, Washington, D.C.

The Board's jurisdiction was limited to the war effort, and it was dissolved on March 21, 1919, when hostilities ceased.

The Board's role was critical in maintaining the war effort. It was able to prevent or settle many disputes that might have disrupted the production of essential war materials. The Board's success was due in part to its ability to bring both sides to the bargaining table and to encourage them to resolve their differences through the use of arbitration and conciliation.

The War Labor Board played a significant role in the war effort, and its legacy continues to be remembered today. It serves as a reminder of the importance of labor-management relations in the context of a national emergency.

CIRCUMSTANCES GOING UP!

Last April, when the peaceful negotiations with Russia were announced, the situation seemed to be improving. The workers were demanding higher wages, but it was feared that this would lead to strikes and扰乱 production.

However, the situation changed rapidly. The workers were becoming more vocal, and their demands were increasing. The War Labor Board was called upon to act, and it did so by providing a framework for bargaining and by mediating disputes.

The Board's efforts were successful, and the situation improved. The workers were able to secure higher wages, but they also agreed to work for a longer period of time. This was a significant achievement, and it served as a model for future negotiations.

Though the situation was not perfect, it was clear that the War Labor Board had played a significant role in maintaining the war effort. The Board's legacy continues to be remembered today, and its work is a reminder of the importance of labor-management relations in the context of a national emergency.

NEW YORK TO THE FUTURE

The Board was continually working to ensure that the war effort continued uninterrupted. The workers were demanding higher wages and better working conditions, but the Board was able to prevent strikes and to settle disputes by arbitration or conciliation.

The Board was able to maintain the flow of essential war materials, and it played a significant role in the war effort.

The Board's work is a reminder of the importance of labor-management relations in the context of a national emergency. It serves as a model for future negotiations, and its legacy continues to be remembered today.

Wage Rates—With a Catch

The Board did not grant wage increases, but it did grant some wage increases. The Board was able to prevent strikes and to settle disputes by arbitration or conciliation.

The Board's work is a reminder of the importance of labor-management relations in the context of a national emergency. It serves as a model for future negotiations, and its legacy continues to be remembered today.

The Negro Struggle

by ALFRED PARKER

The aircraft workers at Yokohama (near Tokyo) on Twelfth Avenue recently succeeded in stopping a strike of the company, CTO, which supplies the United States Navy with aircraft parts. The strikers were paid a bonus, and the management was forced to agree to their demands.

The strike was called to protest against the management's refusal to recognize the workers' union. The company had refused to give the workers a raise in wages, and the strikers had been forced to work for less than the minimum wage.

The strike was a success, and the workers were able to win their demands. The strike is a good example of the power of solidarity and the importance of organizing for workers' rights.

The strike at Yokohama is an important step in the fight for workers' rights. It shows the workers' determination to stand up for themselves and to organize for their rights. The strike is a clear victory for the workers, and it sets an example for other workers around the world.
There's War In Canada---But the Systematic Terror Has Failed to Break Down the Workers and French Canadians' Opposition to the War
