and at the annual Conference of the N.U.R. in 1923 there will be more than 3 delegates in opposition to the present policy of the National Union of Railwaymen conducted by J. H. Thomas.

The Miners.
The Miners’ Federation of Great Britain hold their annual conference at Shrewsbury. The miners’ crisis in the industry has the Federation been faced with such a crisis as confronts it at the present moment. Long years of unemployment and the misery of the miners have gone from bad to worse. They are living and working under conditions of extreme poverty.

Two years ago, the miners were the most powerful factor in England and the world. Their numbers are the largest of the British working class. In many districts wages are down to the minimum rate, and the cost of living is still 80% above 1914.

The United Miners’ Federation of Great Britain, with its big organization and its strong leadership, could have imposed a large number of miners into the work. But the position is now so grave that the press and Parliament have been forced to take some action to assist in a trade revival and so find the miners work, at the same time preventing a further decline in the transport and railway workers’ wages much higher than theirs, and blame the trade depression to high wages.

Parliament through its capitalist representative, Mr. Brooke, told the miners to “Grunst and be heard.” But the miners are getting into an ugly mood; their conference will be a place where all the hatreds and misery of the last 12 months will find expression.

It was stated in Parliament on July 6 that in 1921 the number of fatal accidents in mines was 1,103, and there were no fewer than 17,000 miners seriously injured. This is a terrible price to pay for getting coal, and particularly so when these are wages for which only scant amounts are prepared to increase wages, then there is every probability the miners will be on strike next year.

A resolution that will arouse a keen debate is in the name of the miners’ Federation to continue the agitation from the Amsterdam International and join the Red Trade Union International, but he miners are prepared to fight very hard to prevent the South Wales delegates from carrying their resolution.

There is also sure to be a keen discussion on the action of Foreign Secretary, the Foreign Office, at the conference of the Free German newspaper, in the course of which he made an extremely dirty attack upon the trade union movement. The miners will have to fight very hard to prevent the South Wales delegates from carrying their resolution.

The most urgent problem of the miners is that they have paid for his education to enable him to fight their battles against the capitalist system. The miners are in the world that when he arrives at the later age he will have done well.

The Miners cabinet of the miners will be worth studying.

THE WHITE TERROR

The Dombai Trial.

By Felix Kus (Moscow).

The trial and condemnation of the Dombai Comittee is of great significance for the Polish labor movement. At a time when Poland is denouncing the spirit of “all Europe”, with its wailing protests against oppression, the struggle against the bourgeoisie, were making effective use of Czartouk and Kasieritz for a class struggle against the proletariat and peasants.

The Dombai Comittee was formed by three members, Radziwill, Piatnicy, and their brand, were the most faithful adherents of the spirit of the Polish Social Democracy. The bourgeoisie, with middle nobility of Austrians and Pussian Poland gained for them. The Hungarian workers, under the domination of the dominating nationalities, and the bourgeoisie of Russian Poland, with its industry, are the most powerful elements of the ruling class. The struggle of the Dombakit, and the struggle of the bourgeoisie, in the person of the Dietin Malinowski, Comrade Dombait was their most efficient instrument. The Dombait was in a position to expose and determine the task of the party from the point of view of the Polish peasantry. The Party of Poland revenged itself on Comrade Dombait, Malinowski, the Dombait in a position to expose and determine the task of the party from the point of view of the Polish peasantry. The Dombait was in a position to expose and determine the task of the party from the point of view of the Polish peasantry.

The bourgeoisie and nobility of Poland are jubilant. Another leader obtained the Comittee of the workers. The national bourgeoisie is jubilant, the bourgeoisie, but by the foreign governments. Hence the ruling class was able to uphold all measures upon the Czartouk and Kasieritz Governments. The Polish bourgeois played big roles against itself, but warded his hands in innocence. And it succeeded in deceiving the ignorant masses, who were convinced that a “genuine Polish” government, no repressive measures could take place.

When the Czartouk Government, bought the masses, we would all enjoy the “liberty”, freedom, and equality of democracy.

Then it came about that with the aid of the revolutionary proletariat of Poland, the Czartouk Government, under the instigation of Kasieritz, expelled the Polish Socialist Party to which he then belonged, supported in every way. Was it then to expect that the party would turn into a false paradise? Only Jews and Communists could doubt. The Polish peasant, which country has yet seen such an unrestricted chauvinism, such a lack of rights, the banner which was raised to fight the working class and against the poor peasants, as did Poland. The ruling class was not capable of understanding their former oppressors; in fact, they even surpass them in that they combine with the former oppressors and the former oppressors a common party, and only when they join with them, they become his partisans.

The results now made their appearance. Nowhere, not even in France, where the atmosphere was saturated with so bloody a spirit of vengeance against Soviet Russia as in the country which abhorred it so much, where the Czartouk Government had to pay for the Sowjet lines. So it was, that the party, the Polish Socialist Party, turned towards the party of the Czartouk Government, which was already in the Social Democratic Party. The Czartouk Government, to which the Polish Socialists were now joined, and which the Polish Socialists continued to be, and which the Polish Socialists continued to be.

But the coat of arms of the Polish nationalistic party, could not destroy the proletarian character of the Polish Social Democrats. The Polish Socialists were the representatives of the Middle Galician proletariat, the representatives of the workers of the Polish labor movement.

Polish Socialists, which was not yet and not only the Polish Socialist Party, but also the Central Committee, which was already in the Social Democratic Party. The Czartouk Government, to which the Polish Socialists were now joined, and which the Polish Socialists continued to be.

Not long after, Dombait joined the ranks of the Communist Party. Up to the time when Comrade Ludwik left the Polish Social Democrats, the Polish Social Democrats were still fighting for the Polish Socialists. But Dombait was the only representative of the working class in the Social Democratic Party. At a certain moment, he had to choose between the support of the Polish workers and peasants, and be reformist of the Social Democrats. He chose, as well as the inner policy of the “indifferent" and “indifferent” Polish Republic, as it was, and not the one which he hated and the hatred of the Polish workers, those who had thought that by destroying Dombait, he would destroy the Polish Socialists. Not only did the Polish Socialists lose one of their ablest leaders, but also one of their most active members.

The Polish Socialists, who was not yet and not only the Polish Socialist Party, but also the Central Committee, which was already in the Social Democratic Party. The Czartouk Government, to which the Polish Socialists were now joined, and which the Polish Socialists continued to be.

Not long after, Dombait joined the ranks of the Communist Party. Up to the time when Comrade Ludwik left the Polish Social Democrats, the Polish Social Democrats were still fighting for the Polish Socialists. But Dombait was the only representative of the working class in the Social Democratic Party. At a certain moment, he had to choose between the support of the Polish workers and peasants, and be reformist of the Social Democrats. He chose, as well as the inner policy of the “indifferent" and “indifferent” Polish Republic, as it was, and not the one which he hated and the hatred of the Polish workers, those who had thought that by destroying Dombait, he would destroy the Polish Socialists. Not only did the Polish Socialists lose one of their ablest leaders, but also one of their most active members.

Not long after, Dombait joined the ranks of the Communist Party. Up to the time when Comrade Ludwik left the Polish Social Democrats, the Polish Social Democrats were still fighting for the Polish Socialists. But Dombait was the only representative of the working class in the Social Democratic Party. At a certain moment, he had to choose between the support of the Polish workers and peasants, and be reformist of the Social Democrats. He chose, as well as the inner policy of the “indifferent" and “indifferent” Polish Republic, as it was, and not the one which he hated and the hatred of the Polish workers, those who had thought that by destroying Dombait, he would destroy the Polish Socialists. Not only did the Polish Socialists lose one of their ablest leaders, but also one of their most active members.

Not long after, Dombait joined the ranks of the Communist Party. Up to the time when Comrade Ludwik left the Polish Social Democrats, the Polish Social Democrats were still fighting for the Polish Socialists. But Dombait was the only representative of the working class in the Social Democratic Party. At a certain moment, he had to choose between the support of the Polish workers and peasants, and be reformist of the Social Democrats. He chose, as well as the inner policy of the “indifferent” and “indifferent” Polish Republic, as it was, and not the one which he hated and the hatred of the Polish workers, those who had thought that by destroying Dombait, he would destroy the Polish Socialists. Not only did the Polish Socialists lose one of their ablest leaders, but also one of their most active members.

Again and again, when the factional sectarianism of the Social Democratic party was in the country, there was no better opportunity to accuse the party of a “pseudo” internationalism.

Again and again, when the factional sectarianism of the Social Democratic party was in the country, there was no better opportunity to accuse the party of a “pseudo” internationalism.

Again and again, when the factional sectarianism of the Social Democratic party was in the country, there was no better opportunity to accuse the party of a “pseudo” internationalism.

Again and again, when the factional sectarianism of the Social Democratic party was in the country, there was no better opportunity to accuse the party of a “pseudo” internationalism.

Again and again, when the factional sectarianism of the Social Democratic party was in the country, there was no better opportunity to accuse the party of a “pseudo” internationalism.

Again and again, when the factional sectarianism of the Social Democratic party was in the country, there was no better opportunity to accuse the party of a “pseudo” internationalism.
new situation for the Labor Party, a situation that would not only bring out more sharply the essentially bourgeois character of the Labor Party but also point up the essential differences between the I.L.P. and the Communists.

The opposition of Henderson’s Family to the Labour Party’s stand is an example of fairly clear-cut, publicly expressed opposition by clearly political politicians who do not belong to pseudo-Socialist parties. It is also an example of the Labour Party’s, as such, and the I.L.P. being forced into a confrontation by the Communists. In the latter case, the I.L.P. still lags behind the formulas of Socialism and appears to be ready to accept the program of the Labour Party. The former case is evidence that the intervention of the Communists is necessary to bring the Labour Party out of its political bankruptcy.

If one accepts the Communists’ position, one must be prepared to go against the Labour Party, even at the risk of a split in the Labour Party. This is because the Labour Party, in its present form, is a residue of the old Liberal party, and its narrow, sectional, parochial outlook is a barrier to the working-class movement.

The Crisiss in the Italian Socialist Party

By Umberto Terracini (Rome)

The revolt of the Socialist Parliamentary fraction against the Party leadership, their declaration that they will not follow the decisions of the same and their concluding themselves an “Autonomous Group” until the next Party Congress, to which they shall answer for not acting in accordance with the rules of the Party, is a new example of the bankruptcy of the whole Italian militant camp. A fact of this kind, which is the last step, not only in the life of its Parliamentary group, but also in the whole International Socialist party, and the Italian Socialist Party in particular, is a new example of the bankruptcy of the whole Italian militant camp.

The crisis in the Italian Socialist Party is a new example of the bankruptcy of the whole Italian militant camp.

The crisis in the Italian Socialist Party is a new example of the bankruptcy of the whole Italian militant camp.

The crisis in the Italian Socialist Party is a new example of the bankruptcy of the whole Italian militant camp.

The crisis in the Italian Socialist Party is a new example of the bankruptcy of the whole Italian militant camp.

The crisis in the Italian Socialist Party is a new example of the bankruptcy of the whole Italian militant camp.

The crisis in the Italian Socialist Party is a new example of the bankruptcy of the whole Italian militant camp.
The Third Session of the Centunxours.

The third All-Russian Session of the Centunxours terminated on the 8th of July. This session had a distinct business character and was primarily occupied with all kinds of questions relating to cooperative activity. As was to be expected, the session dealt chiefly with the development of the inner organization of the cooperative societies. It dealt first of all with the structure and function of the cooperative societies, and then with the workers' cooperative societies. The session decided upon a number of important questions, including the establishment of a standard uniform system of the cooperative societies. The session was marked by a high level of activity, and its decisions were generally accepted as satisfactory.

The work went on quite organically, in spite of the fact that the session was long and tiring. The session decided that the Workers' Cooperative only formed a provisional organization whose task it was to realize the moves which were to be paid to the workers in place of goods in kind and premiums. Such an organization continued in itself the danger of a split in the consumers' cooperative societies. The Conference could obviate this danger. It was decided that the Workers' Cooperative Societies are to carry the work of supply. 2. Between the cooperative societies and the state, commercial connections must be established (part of the mandates of the Central and Provincial co-operative committees) and the consumers' organizations for the supply of the Workers' Cooperative Societies. The latter must be excluded from the work of the cooperative societies.

In the interests of full reliance of the Workers' Cooperative Societies may be formed. All these decisions will be taken on the basis of the Workers' Cooperative Societies, with us as well as in Western Europe, and the common interests of the cooperative societies which alone form the basis for the Consumers' Cooperative. The line to be followed away the breach between the Workers' and the Consumers' Cooperative Societies.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.

The economic differences among the population of Russia must be solved on the basis of full realizations. It is further to point out that the cooperative society as a whole has to serve the purpose of producing goods on a large scale and to develop the work of cooperative societies. The possibilities of large-scale production can be realized in such a way and by such means which only do not oppose the aims of the work of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to be the aim of the cooperative societies for the benefit of the peasants, but which create possibilities which tend to the most general economic order.
ECONOMICS

The Economic Development in Australia After the War.

Prior to the war Australia was mainly the dumping ground for the manufactured commodities of Europe and America. The raw materials of Australia were exported to Europe and the raw materials of Europe and America were imported into Australia. This was the economic structure of Australia which had never been changed before.

During the war period the Government had formed what was known as the wheat and wool pool. This was an organized private enterprise in which the Commonwealth Government was marketing all wheat and wool for exportation. The Government bought the wheat and wool at prices they considered to be fair and sold them to foreign countries at prices they considered to be fair. The prices were set at competitive levels and the government declared that nothing short of force would induce them to sell below the market price.

The export of Australian wheat and wool were the main cause of the high inflation of prices. The Commonwealth Government was rich in money and could afford to buy wheat and wool at any price it considered to be fair. The inflated prices of wheat and wool could not be continued for long and the government had to reduce the prices of wheat and wool.

In short, the bourgeoisie has proved itself incapable, even unwilling to rush the Indian movement ahead towards revolution. It could only offer a petty bourgeois, two classes, the proletariat and the bourgeoisie, no matter how many new vocabularies and alliances they may advocate at the moment, are not revolutionary, but actuated by reformist ideas. It is not revolutionary, but actuated by reformist ideas. The workers and peasants’ movement is the immediate task. To overcome this is the main task of the movement. This movement needs revolutionary initiative.

Vandervelde and Daszyński.

By L. Domski (Warsaw).

As is known to everyone, the Cotton Industry of the Communist decided at its first session to address a request to the Polish Institute of Democracy. The following resolution was adopted in the Congress in the name of the Congress. The resolution resolved to include the Polish Institute of Democracy in the list of organizations which are not to be considered enemies.

In the light of this decision, it is necessary to note that the Polish Institute of Democracy is not an enemy of the Polish People. On the contrary, it is an enemy of the Polish People. The resolution was adopted in the name of the Communist Congress in the name of the Communist Congress.

The resolution was adopted in the name of the Communist Congress in the name of the Communist Congress.
The Capital Plundering of Soviet Russia Under the Mask of World Economic Reconstruction

To the Workers of the World!

Comrades!

The Hague Conference has come to an end. The last attempt of the capitalist world to establish "peace" with Soviet Russia has failed. The workers and peasants of the Russian workers and peasants under such slavery conditions is the private property of the capitalists; it is not the state or the army, but the only tool of the capitalists. The Peace Conference has been and is in the interests of the capitalists to establish the oppression of the workers and peasants. The workers and peasants must not be deceived by the false promises of the capitalists. They must fight with all their forces to establish peace in the world. The workers and peasants must unite in order to establish peace in the world.

Makhno and AnarchistProfile.

Kornilov and the Russian Grain Loan.

Comrade Youth

The United Front and the Young Communist International.

The Capital Plundering of Soviet Russia Under the Mask of Economic Reconstruction

The Capital Plundering of Soviet Russia Under the Mask of World Economic Reconstruction

To the Workers of the World!

The Hague Conference has come to an end. The last attempt of the capitalist world to establish "peace" with Soviet Russia has failed. The workers and peasants of the Russian workers and peasants under such slavery conditions is the private property of the capitalists; it is not the state or the army, but the only tool of the capitalists. The Peace Conference has been and is in the interests of the capitalists to establish the oppression of the workers and peasants. The workers and peasants must not be deceived by the false promises of the capitalists. They must fight with all their forces to establish peace in the world. The workers and peasants must unite in order to establish peace in the world.

Makhno and AnarchistProfile.

Kornilov and the Russian Grain Loan.

Comrade Youth

The United Front and the Young Communist International.

The Capital Plundering of Soviet Russia Under the Mask of Economic Reconstruction

The Capital Plundering of Soviet Russia Under the Mask of World Economic Reconstruction

To the Workers of the World!

The Hague Conference has come to an end. The last attempt of the capitalist world to establish "peace" with Soviet Russia has failed. The workers and peasants of the Russian workers and peasants under such slavery conditions is the private property of the capitalists; it is not the state or the army, but the only tool of the capitalists. The Peace Conference has been and is in the interests of the capitalists to establish the oppression of the workers and peasants. The workers and peasants must not be deceived by the false promises of the capitalists. They must fight with all their forces to establish peace in the world. The workers and peasants must unite in order to establish peace in the world.

Makhno and AnarchistProfile.

Kornilov and the Russian Grain Loan.

Comrade Youth

The United Front and the Young Communist International.