International Greeting

By Eugene V. Debs

The American Appeal sends its greetings to all the workers of all nations this paper owes allegiance and will give its place in the power of its struggle to all the hearse, however small or big, and to all who have in it the true colors of the international flag. Workers of all nations, this paper is yours, and you are the workers of all nations.

The American Appeal is the expression of the international Socialist movement as well as the official mouthpiece of the Socialist party of America, and as such it favors and will encourage and support all other Socialist political parties in the world. The Socialist party of America workers as the essential means of developing power upon the economic, political, and social fronts. This is called for by the international activity for their industrial emancipation.

The appeal is not limited, however, in its educational work to the more economic and political phases of the international struggle to abolish capitalist tyranny and misery. This paper will urge the necessity for education of the workers wherever they may be, as a means of liberating them from their economic slavery, and as a means of improving them as human beings, and of achieving a civilization worthy of the name on this planet.

American Appeal

MELLON TAX BILL WINS

WASHINGTON, D.C., JANUARY 1, 1912.

The Mellon Tax Bill has been passed by the House of Representatives, and it is expected to be signed by the President shortly. The bill is a measure to reduce the national debt and to provide funds for the federal government.

The bill, which was introduced by Representative Mellon, provides for the creation of a new revenue source to replace the expired income tax. The revenue generated by the new tax would be used to pay off the national debt and to fund various government programs.

The bill has been controversial, with some arguing that it is a step towards increasing the federal government's power and influence. However, supporters of the bill argue that it is necessary for the nation's economic stability and growth.

AMERICA FINANCES

The current state of America's finances is a topic of great concern to both government officials and the public. The national debt continues to grow, and there are calls for more efficient spending and tax policies.

Despite these challenges, the American economy remains strong, with a consistently low unemployment rate and a high gross domestic product. However, there are concerns about the long-term sustainability of current fiscal policies.

In recent years, there have been efforts to address these financial issues through policy changes, such as increased taxation and reduced government spending. These efforts have been met with mixed results, and there is still much work to be done.

In conclusion, the state of America's finances is a complex and multifaceted issue. While the economy remains strong, there are challenges that need to be addressed to ensure the nation's long-term stability.

(Continued on page 3)
Nation-Wide Support Is Pledged The Appeal

Faith Chervilier

The American Appeal, as you know, is an organization of progressive citizens who are working for the betterment of the working class. The Appeal is a weekly newspaper published in New York City. It was founded in 1877 by John D. Wright, who was one of the leaders of the Labor Movement in the United States.

John D. Wright

The Appeal was started in 1877 as a weekly newspaper in New York City. It was founded by John D. Wright, who was one of the leaders of the Labor Movement in the United States.

Upton Sinclair

Upton Sinclair, a muckraking journalist, wrote many articles for the Appeal. He also wrote several novels, including The Jungle, which exposed the poor working conditions in the meatpacking industry.

Lydia G. Wentworth

Lydia G. Wentworth, who was a former editor of the Appeal, wrote an article about the Appeal in the January 1, 1906 issue. She wrote about the Appeal's history and the work that it was doing for the working class.

Julius Augustus Wayland

Julius Augustus Wayland was a former editor of the Appeal. He wrote an article about the Appeal in the January 1, 1906 issue. He wrote about the Appeal's history and the work that it was doing for the working class.

Emil Herman

Emil Herman, a writer for the Appeal, wrote an article about the Appeal in the January 1, 1906 issue. He wrote about the Appeal's history and the work that it was doing for the working class.

W. F. Richardson

W. F. Richardson, a writer for the Appeal, wrote an article about the Appeal in the January 1, 1906 issue. He wrote about the Appeal's history and the work that it was doing for the working class.

American Appeal

The American Appeal is a weekly newspaper that was founded in 1877. It was started as a weekly newspaper in New York City. It was started by John D. Wright, who was one of the leaders of the Labor Movement in the United States.

The Appeal was started in 1877 as a weekly newspaper in New York City. It was founded by John D. Wright, who was one of the leaders of the Labor Movement in the United States.

The Appeal was started in 1877 as a weekly newspaper in New York City. It was founded by John D. Wright, who was one of the leaders of the Labor Movement in the United States.

The Appeal was started in 1877 as a weekly newspaper in New York City. It was founded by John D. Wright, who was one of the leaders of the Labor Movement in the United States.

The Appeal was started in 1877 as a weekly newspaper in New York City. It was founded by John D. Wright, who was one of the leaders of the Labor Movement in the United States.
Sinclair Introduces Hero of His "Letters to Judd"
The Human Race Has Arrived

By George R. Kirkpatrick

The American Appeal
2532 Washington Boulevard, Chicago, Ill.

SUBSCRIPTION LIST

NAME

Post Office or Street Address

City

State

Amount Paid

January 1, 1926

The Great Preparation

The recent brusque move and the human race is here.

A new world, a new race, and a new way of life. He is ready. This is the dawn of a new age. Man is now newly furnished and manufactured. He is ready to build his home, to cultivate his agriculture, to build his factories, to make his factories

products, to grow his crops, to control his traffic, to manage his traffic, to handle his business.

Man has been given a chance to be more, and more, and more. He is ready. This is the dawn of a new age. Man is now newly furnished and manufactured. He is ready to build his home, to cultivate his

agriculture, to build his factories, to make his factories

products, to grow his crops, to control his traffic, to

manage his traffic, to handle his business.

Man has been given a chance to be more, and more, and more. He is ready. This is the dawn of a new age. Man is now newly furnished and manufactured. He is ready to build his home, to cultivate his

agriculture, to build his factories, to make his factories

products, to grow his crops, to control his traffic, to

manage his traffic, to handle his business.

Man has been given a chance to be more, and more, and more. He is ready. This is the dawn of a new age. Man is now newly furnished and manufactured. He is ready to build his home, to cultivate his

agriculture, to build his factories, to make his factories

products, to grow his crops, to control his traffic, to manage his traffic, to handle his business.