Socialists Have Real Peace Movement—Bertrand Russell

The American Appeal is a weekly newspaper published by the Socialist Party of America. It covers various topics including socialist politics, labor movements, and international news. The headline of the page suggests a significant victory for the socialist movement in the United Kingdom, particularly in the cities of England, where public ownership forces are facing a test fight. The article highlights the contrast between workers' poverty and the wealth of the wealthy, and the challenges faced by the socialist movement in maintaining its majority in the face of economic hardship. The paper also discusses the role of socialist candidates in winning elections, such as those in Reading and Buffalo, and the implications of military decline in Wisconsin for the socialist movement. The editorial section includes an article by Bertrand Russell, a prominent philosopher and public intellectual, who supported the socialist cause. The article also mentions the war in Europe and its impact on the socialist movement, as well as the role of philanthropy and higher education in promoting socialist ideas. The content reflects the broader social and political context of the early 20th century, including the challenges faced by the working class and the growing influence of social democratic ideologies.

From the American Federation of Labor, the headquarters in New York City, comes the following statement:

Gov't. Official for Public Ownership

DAVISON, Tenn.—Public ownership is not a dream, but a reality, says Mr. H. F. Helmsley, who is the owner of the Davenport, Tennessee, and the operator of the Big Davenport, Tennessee. The government has recently taken over the Big Davenport, Tennessee, and is now operating it as a public utility.

Yale Students in Fight for Labor

New York, Nov. 12, 1937—Ten years ago, the United States was just beginning to realize the importance of public ownership. The government has taken over many public utilities, such as the electric company, the water company, and the telephone company. The government has also taken over the railroads.

Killing Socialism

Yesterday I read that Socialism was killed because of the death of a Social Democrat. This is not true. Socialism is alive and well. It is still growing. It will continue to grow, regardless of what happens to the Social Democrats.

Government of the People, by the People, for the People

In IV Articles

Alfred Baker Lewis

Secretary, New England District, Socialist Party, New England

One of the greatest problems facing the United States is the question of government. The United States, as a democracy, is a government of the people, by the people, for the people. This means that the people have the power to make laws and to elect their representatives. This is a great advantage of democracy.

Political Rights Vanishing

Even in the political government of the United States, the people have lost many of the political rights that they once had. This is due to the influence of big corporations and the wealthy.

Plutocracy and Wage Slavery

Once before, the plutocracy of the United States was able to keep the people in ignorance and slavery. Today, however, the people are more aware of their rights and are willing to fight for them.

Corporation Lawlessness Back of Coal Labor War in Colorado

The L. W. W. uprising in southern Colorado marks the beginning of a new era in the history of the Colorado Coal Federation and its affiliated unions. Probably an industrial revolution in this century is wrought from the ashes of this conflict for coal miners' liberty and democracy.

The railroad strike was shown as far as history goes, to be as much a defeat for the capitalists as a victory for the miners. The workers showed that they were as courageous and strong as any other workmen in the country.

In 1911 the legislature passed a law abolishing the coal mining law. This is known as the Fair Labor Law. It is designed to prevent strikes and to protect the miners from the use of force and violence.

The miners are now on strike, and the employers are refusing to negotiate with them. The miners, therefore, have no choice but to strike in order to protect themselves.

When the strike began, the miners were well prepared. They had a well-organized union, and they had the backing of the people. The employers, on the other hand, had no such organization. They were, therefore, in a weak position.

The miners have been fighting for their rights for many years. They have fought for safe working conditions, better pay, and the right to organize.
