ETHICAL ECONOMICS

BY WALTER L. YOUNG.

The world is full of all kinds of people, and we are none of us any better than we can make ourselves. We are all in the world to improve ourselves, and to make the best of what we can. We are all in the world to improve ourselves, and to make the best of what we can. We are all in the world to improve ourselves, and to make the best of what we can.

The world is full of all kinds of people, and we are none of us any better than we can make ourselves. We are all in the world to improve ourselves, and to make the best of what we can. We are all in the world to improve ourselves, and to make the best of what we can.
NOBODY BLAMES ANYBODY.

IN THE town where I live a story is going around about a beautiful little girl who had a baby in the hospital. She was taken out of the hospital, and put into a hotel room, and left there by persons who had no right to do so. The girl was badly hurt, and was taken to the hospital, and she died there.

She was a very beautiful little girl, and she was very popular with all the people in the town. But when she died, nobody blamed anybody. Everyone just seemed to accept the fact that such things happen, and that there is nothing anyone can do to prevent them.

Well, on doing something, you know what the story is. You can't do anything about it. The same thing has always been happening in the world, and it will continue to happen. The only thing that can be done is to try to prevent it from happening again.

The story is about a little girl named Mary. She was born in a poor family, and her parents couldn't afford to send her to school. But she was a bright child, and she learned to read and write by herself. She was very popular with all the other children in the town, and they all went to her house to play.

One day, when she was about ten years old, she went to the store to buy some groceries. As she was leaving, she saw a little boy who was crying because he had no money to buy some bread. Mary felt sorry for him, and she gave him some money to buy the bread.

The boy was very grateful, and he gave Mary a small box as a thank you. When Mary got home, she found that the box contained a few dollars. She was very excited, and she decided to buy some gifts for her friends.

She bought some books, and she gave them to her friends. She also bought some clothes, and she gave them to her friends. She was very happy, and she felt that she had done something good for others.

But then, one day, someone happened to see Mary with the box of money. They told other people about it, and soon the whole town knew about it. People started to talk about Mary, and some of them even started to blame her.

The thing is, nobody can blame anyone for doing good. Because when you do something good, you are doing it for the benefit of others, and not for yourself. And even if someone else benefits from it, it doesn't mean that you are doing it for yourself.

The story is about a man named John. He was a poor man, and he lived in a small town. One day, he saw a little girl who was crying because she had no money to buy some food. John felt sorry for her, and he gave her some money to buy the food.

The girl was very grateful, and she gave John a small box as a thank you. When John got home, he found that the box contained a few dollars. He was very excited, and he decided to buy some gifts for his friends.

He bought some books, and he gave them to his friends. He also bought some clothes, and he gave them to his friends. He was very happy, and he felt that he had done something good for others.

But then, one day, someone happened to see John with the box of money. They told other people about it, and soon the whole town knew about it. People started to talk about John, and some of them even started to blame him.

The thing is, nobody can blame anyone for doing good. Because when you do something good, you are doing it for the benefit of others, and not for yourself. And even if someone else benefits from it, it doesn't mean that you are doing it for yourself.

The story is about a woman named Jane. She was a poor woman, and she lived in a small town. One day, she saw a little girl who was crying because she had no money to buy some clothes. Jane felt sorry for her, and she gave her some money to buy the clothes.

The girl was very grateful, and she gave Jane a small box as a thank you. When Jane got home, she found that the box contained a few dollars. She was very excited, and she decided to buy some gifts for her friends.

She bought some books, and she gave them to her friends. She also bought some clothes, and she gave them to her friends. She was very happy, and she felt that she had done something good for others.

But then, one day, someone happened to see Jane with the box of money. They told other people about it, and soon the whole town knew about it. People started to talk about Jane, and some of them even started to blame her.

The thing is, nobody can blame anyone for doing good. Because when you do something good, you are doing it for the benefit of others, and not for yourself. And even if someone else benefits from it, it doesn't mean that you are doing it for yourself.
PEOPLE OF NEW ZEALAND "We have been here for ages, so we have the right to remain here." - Herbert Spencer (1820-1903)