ECHOES Along the Way.

The latest thing in society circles is the "crumpled note," says a dispatch from New York. These are written on creased paper and often have the appearance of being torn to pieces. At the slightest touch they fly open, exposing the message. Only the most informal society could be expected to approve of such a mode of correspondence. These "crumpled notes" are made particularly attractive by the use of colored inks. There are those who enjoy the novelty of the crumpled note, but many others prefer the security of the typewriter and the ease of folding."
