THE NEXT STEP: A BENEVOLENT FEUDALISM.

By W. J. GENT

The next stage in the movement for a new economic order is the reorganization of the existing system. The present system is based on the principle of private ownership of the means of production. This system is characterized by the exploitation of the working class, by the monopoly of economic power in the hands of a few, and by the existence of economic classes.

We have no headquarters of our own, but are in the offices of various newspapers throughout the United States, and are able to secure a large number of subscriptions without charge. Our only expense is that of printing and mailing the weekly issue. We are therefore able to keep our subscriptions at a low figure.

We have no political or religious affiliation, but are entirely independent in all respects. Our only object is to advance the cause of civilization, and to promote the interests of all mankind. We believe that the best way to do this is by education, and we therefore devote most of our time and energy to the publication of educational and moral periodicals.

We are not a commercial enterprise, but are a voluntary association of men and women who believe in the cause we are promoting. We have no stockholders, and our only purpose is to advance the cause of civilization.

Labor Notes.

May 15 Cents Per Year.

There are twice as many working men as there are in the United States, but only one-half as many as in Europe. This has a direct bearing on the cost of living and the wages paid. In order to reduce the cost of living, we must produce more and pay less for the things we need. The more we work, the less we need to buy. By reducing the cost of living we can live better and have more leisure time.
