YURUPU

Where Morgen Goes in Real, When He Goes in Real

The Near East seems to face its moment of truth. It is the moment when its peoples and its leaders must decide whether they will remain true to the principles of the Treaty of Sèvres or whether they will abandon those principles and resume their old methods of aggression and exploitation. It is the moment when the world must decide whether it will support the principles of the Treaty of Sèvres or whether it will stand idly by while the Near East is again thrown into chaos and conflict.

PELLETS.

The hiker is worthy of his hire, so the old saying goes. But there are those among mountain men who are not so sure of it. They are the hikers who have to carry their own equipment and provisions, and who have to be content with the limited food and shelter that nature provides.

At the city election at Merton, Wis., the hiker mail - hits a low of 10,400 for the population below 15,000. The hikers are among the lowest-paid workers in the world, and the hiker mail is often forced to work in order to support his family.

The hikers of the city of Merton are not alone in their struggle. They are part of a nation-wide hiker movement that is gaining momentum and strength.

GRAFENAU

A Market Village Left out by Walter Vrooman

Three miles north of Kansas City, an iron frame, a pack containing 1,500 pounds of merchandise, and an iron rail are all that remain of the market village of Grafenau. The market was established by the town in 1850, and was the center of the trade of the surrounding countryside. It was closed in 1870, and the iron frame and rail were removed.

CHLATING Rates.

The Western Conference, organized by the United States government, has been in existence since 1850. It is the organization that brings together the various railroads of the country and establishes the rates for transportation.

The Western Conference has been in existence since 1850. It is the organization that brings together the various railroads of the country and establishes the rates for transportation.

THE WATER CURS.

The Seals of the Pacific

The seals of the Pacific are some of the most interesting and unique animals in the world. They are found in a range of habitats, from the cold waters of the northern Pacific to the warm waters of the southern Pacific.

A seals' life is one of struggle and survival. They must adapt to the changing conditions of their environment and find ways to survive in a world that is constantly changing.

RIPIANS

The Smuggler's Path

The Smuggler's Path is a popular hiking trail that runs through the beautiful forests of the Pacific Northwest. It is a challenging trail that requires hikers to be fit and prepared.

The trail is named for the smugglers who once used it to transport goods across the border. It is now a popular hiking trail and is maintained by the local hiking clubs.

SEND US NAMES OF MAGAZINE READERS 80 to 1,400 a week for this issue. 10 to 14 days notice. Give name, address, and size of your magazine (old or new). 200,000 to 250,000, 25 cents. No Subscriptions Taken for Less than a Year.

The Truth About Socialism

Socialism is a system of economics and politics that seeks to replace the capitalist system with a system in which the means of production and distribution are owned and controlled by the state.

Socialism is often criticized for its alleged lack of freedom and individualism. However, socialism is not a system that suppresses freedom. It is a system that values the well-being of the community over the interests of the individual.

The Truth About Socialism

Socialism is a system of economics and politics that seeks to replace the capitalist system with a system in which the means of production and distribution are owned and controlled by the state.

Socialism is often criticized for its alleged lack of freedom and individualism. However, socialism is not a system that suppresses freedom. It is a system that values the well-being of the community over the interests of the individual.

End
At the Front

Every month in the Annual Army is in print a letter from an English soldier who has seen service in India with the British army, and who shares with us his experiences of life and work in that far-off land. This month we have the pleasure of publishing a letter from Mr. A. C. FORD, of the Bombay Staff Corps, written from his camp in the hills near Simla, where he is stationed.

Mr. FORD has been in India for some years, and has seen service in various parts of the country. He is a member of the Bombay Staff Corps, and his duties include the supervision of the works of the Indian army in the hills near Simla.

Story of a Sapper.

Mr. FORD's letter begins with a description of his duties as a sapper in the hills near Simla. He writes:

"The hills are a wonderful place, with their ever-changing moods and colors. One moment the sun is shining brightly, and the rocks are glowing with a golden light; the next it is raining heavily, and the wind is howling through the trees. But always there is something beautiful about the hills, and I love them for that reason."

Mr. FORD then describes his work as a sapper, which involves the building of roads and railways in the hills. He writes:

"Our work is not easy, but it is very rewarding. We have to work in all kinds of weather, and often we have to work in the dark. But when we see the roads we have built, and the trains that run on them, we feel that our work has been worthwhile."

Mr. FORD concludes his letter with a description of his family, who live in England, and whom he misses very much.

Direct Legislation.

Mr. FORD's letter ends with a discussion of the question of direct legislation, which is a topic of great interest at the present time. He writes:

"I agree with those who believe that direct legislation is necessary in order to improve the lives of the people. But we must be careful not to go too far in this direction, or we may end up with a system of government that is too much in the hands of the people."

Mr. FORD concludes his letter by expressing his hope that his letter will be read by those who are interested in the question of direct legislation.

---

War About Oil.

In the next issue of the Annual Army, we shall publish a letter from Mr. A. J. JOHNSON, of the London Staff Corps, which deals with the question of the war about oil. Mr. JOHNSON writes:

"The war about oil is a very serious matter, and it is likely to have a profound effect on the course of the war. We must do everything we can to ensure that our oil supplies are not cut off, and that we are not dependent on foreign sources of supply."

Mr. JOHNSON goes on to discuss the methods by which the oil supplies of the Allies are being protected, and concludes his letter with a call for more sacrifice on the part of the citizens of the Allies.

---

Greener Than A King.

In the next issue of the Annual Army, we shall publish a letter from Mr. A. J. JOHNSON, of the London Staff Corps, which deals with the question of the war about oil. Mr. JOHNSON writes:

"The war about oil is a very serious matter, and it is likely to have a profound effect on the course of the war. We must do everything we can to ensure that our oil supplies are not cut off, and that we are not dependent on foreign sources of supply."

Mr. JOHNSON goes on to discuss the methods by which the oil supplies of the Allies are being protected, and concludes his letter with a call for more sacrifice on the part of the citizens of the Allies.

---

Late Elections.

The result of the recent Parliamentary elections has been announced, and the following candidates have been returned:

Amory R. Brown, member for the Borough of Boston, Massachusetts.

John A. Brown, member for the Borough of Phillips, Massachusetts.

John B. Brown, member for the Borough of Cambridge, Massachusetts.

---

Sodium and Chlorinity.

In the next issue of the Annual Army, we shall publish a letter from Mr. A. J. JOHNSON, of the London Staff Corps, which deals with the question of sodium and chlorinity. Mr. JOHNSON writes:

"Sodium and chlorinity are two of the most important elements in the composition of the earth's crust. They are essential for the growth of plants, and without them there would be no life on the earth."

Mr. JOHNSON goes on to discuss the methods by which sodium and chlorinity are being obtained, and concludes his letter with a call for more conservation in the use of these elements.

---

Editors.

The Annual Army is in the hands of the editors, who are responsible for the content of the magazine. They are Mr. A. J. JOHNSON, of the London Staff Corps, and Mr. A. J. JOHNSON, of the Bombay Staff Corps. They are both very experienced in the field of military affairs, and have a wealth of knowledge and experience to offer to the readers of the Annual Army.

---

Subscription Rates.

The Annual Army is published six times a year, and subscription rates are as follows:

- Annual subscription: £2.00
- Half-yearly subscription: £1.00
- Single copy: 10p

---

Our New Publication.

The Annual Army is in the process of setting up a new publication, which will be called the "Monthly Army," and will be published once a month. The editors of the Annual Army are very excited about this new venture, and are looking forward to seeing what it will bring.

---

Conclusion.

In conclusion, we would like to express our thanks to all those who have contributed to the Annual Army, and to those who have supported it in the past. We hope that the Annual Army will continue to be a valuable resource for those who are interested in military affairs, and that it will continue to grow and develop in the future.