511 Comrades have volunteered for a year's campaign of 5 subscribers a week to make a million circulation. 5,000 called for. Will you be one?

200,000
A Week
This is Number 352.
25 Cents A Year.

Appeal to Reason
Girard, Kansas, U. S. A., August 30, 1902.

OWNERSHIP OF THE EARTH
By ALL the People, and Carried by Part of the People.

144th Editorial.

Russell Sage predicts a revolt.

New York, Aug. 24.—In an interview published in the New York Post this week, Mr. Russell Sage predicts that the panic of 1907 will lead to a great movement of the people. "The people," he says, "are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government." Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

W. C. FARMER, High Priest.

Plumber Morgan's private club in the Catskill Mountains was rudely interrupted by the police last night, when one who claimed to be a member called the attention of the officers to the fact that some of the members were playing cards. The members, who were not on hand, were forced to leave the club, and the police took the cards and other articles belonging to them. It is believed that the members of the club were engaged in an illegal activity, and that the police were acting under orders from higher authorities.

A. WATLING, High Priest.

Plumber Morgan has been一栋 in the leader of the club, and is said to be a wealthy man. He has been accused of being a rich man, but his friends deny the charge. The police have not yet released any information concerning the case.

RUSSELL SAGE PREDICTS A REVOLT.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.

The people are the great commercial and financial power of the country. They are the owners of the money, and they will not be satisfied to be treated as inferiors. They will demand the control of the government. Mr. Sage predicts that the government will be compelled to give the people what they want, or face the danger of a great revolt. He believes that the people will demand a larger voice in the management of the country's affairs, and that they will demand a greater share of the benefits of industry.