Only EIGHT issues of the Appeal will be printed and circulated before Election. Good use of this should be made of it by ECKERS to all or part of the voters in your precinct. Use each issue to its fullest extent.

After the election the Appeal will issue a Jubilee Edition with the election returns.

THE GIRARD CONTEST

H. E. McKibben, Star, Idaho Receives a Valuable Girard Residence for 722

About five months ago the Appeal offered a prize to the Star, Idaho, for a contest to be made by the Appeal in connection with the annual election. The contest was to be conducted as follows: The Appeal was to issue a book of prize ballots, to the number of fifteen thousand, to each county in which the Appeal was published; the Star was to print and distribute as many of these ballots as possible; and the county with the greatest number of ballots printed and distributed would be the winner of the contest.

The contest was conducted in the usual manner. The Star published the ballots and distributed them as far as possible, but it was not thought that the Star would win the contest.

But the Star did win the contest. The Star printed and distributed the greatest number of ballots during the contest.

The Star was awarded a valuable Girard Residence for its efforts.

The Star is a valuable property to the Star. It is a valuable residence to the Star. It is a valuable prize to the Star.
Objection to the Introduction of Capitalism.

As for the article by A. M. Brown:

I should certainly be opposed to the idea of introducing capitalism in any country. It is a system that has often been praised by the believers in it, but I am convinced that it is not a healthy system. It would be extremely difficult to find anything that would make it workable. The success of any capitalist system would depend entirely on the personal qualities of the individuals who would be expected to run it. It would be impossible to predict the results of such a system, and it would be impossible to prevent it from collapsing at any moment. The only way to introduce capitalism would be to create a society in which the individual would be completely free, and in which the government would not interfere in any way. This would be a difficult task, but it is the only way to ensure the success of capitalism.

The system would work on the principle that everyone would be able to do whatever they wanted, as long as they did not interfere with the rights of others. This would allow people to pursue their own interests, and to make their own decisions. The government would not interfere in the economy, and would only intervene in cases of need. It would be a free society, in which people would be able to live as they wanted, and to do whatever they wanted. This would be a difficult task, but it is the only way to ensure the success of capitalism.

The Emergence of the Public

The public is emerging as a force to be reckoned with in the political arena. The recent elections have shown a strong voter turnout and a growing interest in political issues. It is no longer sufficient for candidates to cater to the interests of special interest groups; they must address the concerns of the broader public. The public's voice must be heard in the halls of power.
