Scientific Socialism.

The world today is dominated by a single idea - the idea of Socialism. It is the idea that the only way to achieve real progress and true freedom is through the elimination of class inequality and the establishment of a society in which all members of society have equal access to the means of production and distribution. The goal of Socialism is the creation of a society in which everyone has the opportunity to contribute to the common good and share in the benefits of that contribution. This is a goal that must be pursued with determination and courage, and we must do our part to help bring about this vision of a better world.

The Race and the Class Struggle.

The race and class struggle are two of the most important issues facing society today. The race struggle is about the fight for equality and justice for all races and ethnic groups. The class struggle is about the fight for economic justice and the eradication of poverty and inequality. Both struggles are intertwined, and both must be fought in order to create a just and equitable society.
