The Sym pathetic Worker's Dilemma.

The sympathetic worker's dilemma is that he has to make a hard choice between two equally bad positions. If he does not make the right choice, he will be disliked by both his employer and his fellow workers. If he does make the right choice, he will be disliked by his employer and his fellow workers. The worker has to decide whether he wants to be liked by his employer or by his fellow workers. If he is liked by his employer, he will have to work hard and be diligent. If he is liked by his fellow workers, he will have to be friendly and cooperative. The worker has to make a decision that will affect his future career and his personal life. The problem is that there is no easy solution to this dilemma. The worker has to find a way to live with the consequences of his decision. The worker has to find a way to be a good worker and a good citizen.
United Brotherhood of R. R. Employees

The hope of labor organizations seems to be centered in the West. There it is said that the working man is more honest, more thrifty, and controls the running of his own affairs. Great strides are being made against the use of alcohol in the construction camps. The question of labor and management will soon be settled.

Organized labor in the East is still in its infancy. But the working man in the West is sure to be better off.

The Man Who Is Knocked Out

By One of Them

When you see a poor devil like the one in the white coat, do you stop to think what his face is, under the peculiar system of treating the sick, the afflicted and the helpless?

Not only does the government leave the villains in the merits of the money-bags, but it actually protects them in their extermination charges. The afflicted and helpless are exploited and robbed more efficiently than any other class.

This fellow in the white coat passes twenty dollars for an artificial leg, and twenty more for a zinc prosthetic hand, and ten more for the prosthesis of the head. He can't get in one hour or two of time for cost of his services. He could have saved a year of steady employment.

There is practically no provision made by the community to either cure or to mitigate the suffering of the poor devil. He is greater in his affliction than the other class.

This fellow in the white coat is the poorest man in America. He has the greatest affection for the sick, the afflicted and the helpless.

What Shall Be the Attitude of the Christian Church

Toward the Social and Industrial Problems of the Day?

By Theos. C. Wiswell

Jesus of Nazareth attempted to establish a new order as a consequence of which he was crucified by the powers of the outward world. Today, after two thousand years, it is clear that Jesus was right. Today, after two thousand years, it is clear that Jesus was right.

Jesus taught that the children of God had one great enemy to oppose and overcome in the world; this enemy is earthly wealth and power. In simplicity, Jesus taught that the children of God must put their trust in God in heaven. To put their trust in God is not to renounce the world, but to renounce the world's systems of wealth and power and to trust only in the love and wisdom of God. To trust only in the love and wisdom of God is the essence of Christianity.

The service of faith in this form was so alien to the nature of Jesus that He declared that He would send a messenger to the world to explain the meaning of His teachings. This messenger was supposed to be the Holy Spirit, who was to be the interpreter of the Bible. This message is the basis of all Christian churches, and the failure of the world to accept it is the basis of all Christian churches, and the failure of the world to accept it.

Iron in modern times in the history of the Christian church has been the problem of how to organize the church and to make it an effective instrument for the transformation of society. The church has been faced with the problem of how to organize itself so that it can effectively function as an instrument of social change. The church has been faced with the problem of how to organize itself so that it can effectively function as an instrument of social change.

As present ecclesiastical methods developed, the church attempted to exert the greatest influence on society and to promote the greatest good for the greatest number of people. The church has sought to influence the political, economic, and social systems of society. The church has sought to influence the political, economic, and social systems of society.

The New Testament has a large portion of its surplus capital, expressed in the form of labor, which is available to the church. The church has at its disposal an enormous amount of labor, which it can use to promote the social well-being of society. The church has at its disposal an enormous amount of labor, which it can use to promote the social well-being of society.

It is a part of the plan, the purpose, and the mission of the church to influence the political, economic, and social systems of society. The church has a duty to influence the political, economic, and social systems of society. The church has a duty to influence the political, economic, and social systems of society.

The church is called to be the voice of the voiceless, the advocate of the oppressed, the defender of the poor, and the promoter of justice.
