Cleveland Trudges 'Gene Debs in McClure's Magazine

McClure's Editor Refuses Comrade Debs Space to Reply.

In the McClure's Magazine for July Grover Cleveland, confident that his capitalist supporters controlled all avenues of public communication, told how he "Put Down the Debs Rebellion" in 1894, during the great A. U. U. strike.

"Gene Debs, hard pressed with the work of the approaching campaign, has taken the time to write a history of that memorable occasion when united labor had the railway magnates whipped, only to see the fruits of a dearly earned victory snatched from its hands by means of United States soldiers, under the direction of Cleveland.

This article, a calm, truthful record, backed by the official report of the Strike Commission appointed by Cleveland himself, was offered to McClure's Magazine for publication. It was promptly turned down. The following correspondence between Comrade Debs and the Editor of McClure's Magazine will prove interesting, as showing how Capitalismpolitically closes the door to Labor:

Terre Haute, Ind.,

July 16, 1904.

Eugene V. Debs, to Mr. S. S. McClure, McClure's Magazine, New York, N. Y.

My Dear Sir:

I must tell you frankly that your article.

"'The Federal Government and the Chicago Strike,'" is a great disappointment to us. We looked for a sober statement of the other side of the case, a statement in the same spirit that Mr. Cleveland gave the Government side. Instead of giving a plain narrative of the strike scene from your point of view, you have begun upon a platonic calling to witness the unfairness of the other side and abusing the same. Now, we should like very much to print an article from you on this question if you would write it very soberly and with the full realization that nothing is so eloquent as the facts; let them speak for themselves. Perhaps upon reading the article, which I herewith return, you will see our point of criticism. With appreciation, believe me,

Very sincerely yours,

Eugene V. Debs.

A BIT OF INTERESTING HISTORY.

Note the striking contrast between the unsupported utterances of Roosevelt and the statements backed by sworn testimony of the Chicago Strike Commission--Side lights on the great A. F. of L. strike of 1894.

To refer again for a moment to the time when the country was in the throes of the Pullman strike, we reproduce a part of a letter written by Mr. George W. Norris, president of the Chicago Strike Commission, to Mr. Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in September, 1894.

The letter reads:

"In the present state of the public opinion of this country, the strike of the Pullman Company seems to be a very serious matter. The strike is a matter that is likely to cause a great deal of harm to the Pullman Company. The strike is a matter that is likely to cause a great deal of harm to the Pullman Company. The strike is a matter that is likely to cause a great deal of harm to the Pullman Company. The strike is a matter that is likely to cause a great deal of harm to the Pullman Company."

The Pullman strike was a significant event in labor history, and the letter reflects the growing tension between labor and management during this period. The Chicago Strike Commission was a temporary labor arbitration board established by the American Federation of Labor to handle labor disputes.

The letter also contains a statement from Mr. Norris to Mr. Gompers, which reads:

"In the present state of the public opinion of this country, the strike of the Pullman Company seems to be a very serious matter. The strike is a matter that is likely to cause a great deal of harm to the Pullman Company. The strike is a matter that is likely to cause a great deal of harm to the Pullman Company. The strike is a matter that is likely to cause a great deal of harm to the Pullman Company. The strike is a matter that is likely to cause a great deal of harm to the Pullman Company."

The letter is a reflection of the challenges faced by labor organizations in the late 19th century, as they struggled to gain recognition and improve working conditions for their members.

Which Side Will the Worker Take?

The recent revelations of the principles under which various labor organizations are working, together with the open and secret activities of some of these organizations, make it evident that the worker must decide where he will stand if he is to avoid the disastrous consequences that will inevitably follow if the wrong course is followed. This is a critical moment in the history of the labor movement, and it is imperative that every worker make a clear and decisive choice.

The Appeal, under the leadership of its able and devoted editors, is working unceasingly to make the worker understand the issues involved and to guide him to the right path. The Appeal has always taken a stand for the principles of Marxian socialism, and it has always endeavored to educate the worker in the true spirit of internationalism.

The Appeal is the organ of the Socialist Party of America, and it is the party of the worker world-wide. The Appeal is the voice of the working class, and it is the voice of the future.

"The Struggle for Existence"

The Price of the Book is $2.50, Postpaid

And This Is the Way
Beginning with Monday, August 7th, 1922, and continuing for one hundred and one weeks, we shall publish in the Appeal a complete and detailed account of the struggle for existence of man as it has been experienced in the past one hundred and one years. This will be the most important and valuable book ever written on the subject of human existence. It is the book that every worker should have.

COMING NATION

AN EXPERIENCE MEETING.

One of the most important meetings of the future may be held in the coming years. It is the meeting of the working class and the employers, at which the workers will decide the fate of their class. The meeting will be held in the coming years, and it will be a meeting of the working class and the employers, at which the workers will decide the fate of their class.

MUST GO INTO POLITICS

The workers must not only organize for the betterment of their condition, but they must also fight for the right to have a voice in the making of the laws. On to Washington!

A little more than a decade ago there was a Social movement in the United States. It propagated the idea that a reform of the political system was needed, and it got a little over half a million people to sign petition and parley in the streets of the nation's capital. The movement died out; and today there is no movement to substitute for it.

The problem touched the root of the nation's ills. Our national finances are out of order. Our foreign policy is not right. Our domestic policy is not right. Our industrial system is not right. Our finances are out of order. Our foreign policy is not right. Our domestic policy is not right. Our industrial system is not right. Our finances are out of order. Our foreign policy is not right. Our domestic policy is not right. Our industrial system is not right.

The problem is not a new one. It has been considered for many years. But it has not been solved. The solution is not easy. It requires a great deal of study. It requires a great deal of thought. It requires a great deal of action.

Note the striking contrast between the unsupported utterances of Roosevelt and the statements backed by testimony of the Chicago Strike Commission—Side Lights on the Great A. F. L. Strike of 1894.

It is a remarkable thing that just at the time when the country is in the grip of a great national strike movement, it is the most popular subject of discussion. The strike was begun by a number of strikers in the Western States, and it has now spread to the East. The strikers are determined to carry out their demands, and they are not afraid of a long struggle.

Which Side Will the Worker Take?

The recent elections of the Pittsburgh Federation of Street Railway Employees, which is of course covered in the weekly issue of this newspaper, brought to the fore the question of what the worker is to do.

The union is a democratic organization, with membership from the rank and file, and it is under the direction of its members. The results of this election show the strength of the worker's organization in the community.

It should be noted that the workers have the right to organize and to bargain collectively for the purpose of improving their working conditions. This is the right of the worker under the law.

We, the workers, are fighting for our rights. We are fighting for better wages, better hours, and better working conditions. We are fighting for a better life for ourselves and our families.

The workers must unite and fight for their rights. They must not allow themselves to be divided by the employers. They must stand together and fight for their rights.

The workers must support their union. They must support the workers' movement. They must support the workers' strike.

The workers must not be afraid. They must be strong. They must be united. They must fight for their rights.

We, the workers, are fighting for our rights. We are fighting for a better life for ourselves and our families. We are fighting for our future.
