The Federal Government and the Chicago Strike

Eugene V. Debs' Reply to Grover Cleveland's Magazine Article.

In the July issue of McClure's Magazine, men who were made by a group of sinister interests, in the hope of creating a "strike wave" throughout the country, to occasion a "red scare," to scatter the workingmen with fear and panic, to make them feel that if they did not submit to the control of the government, they wererack a danger to the country. The Government in the Chicago Strike of 1894, which was the result of a determined and well-organized attack on the workingmen of that city, was, as far as could be determined, the work of the federal government, of which he was the agent.

This paper was published in the Chicago Tribune, and not by the government of Illinois, or by either the state or federal governments, either of which were in power during the strike. The fact that this paper was published by the state government, as it was, was made known to those who opposed it, and the strike was consequently more severe than it otherwise would have been.

Therefore, the statement in Cleveland's article that "the Government in the Chicago Strike of 1894 was the result of the efforts of the state government to control the workingmen of that city" is incorrect.

Cleveland's article makes the false statement that "the Government in the Chicago Strike of 1894 was the result of the efforts of the state government to control the workingmen of that city".

The strike in Chicago was the result of the efforts of a number of different interests, including the federal government, the state government, and the local government. The strike was the result of the efforts of these different interests to control the workingmen of the city.

Ten Years Ago and Today.

In 1891 the strike of the American Railway Union as a powerful labor labor union led to the formation of the American Federation of Labor. The strike was led by the American Railway Union, which had been founded in 1881 by a group of railroad workers. The strike lasted for 13 months and was finally settled by the courts.

Under Socialism.

The definition of a city by its size is not enough. A city must also be judged by its wealth, its education, its health, and its general well-being. Socialism is the only system that will bring about these changes.

For President.

Under Socialism.

In a city, the government must be the people, and the people must be in control. The people must have the power to make decisions about their lives. Socialism is the only system that will allow the people to have this power.
