No man is great enough or rich enough to get this paper on credit or for a longer time than paid for. It is published as an advocate of International Socialism, the movement which favors the ownership of the means of production by ALL the people—not by a PART of the people.

Will Roosevelt Bust the Trust?

November 11, 1905

President Roosevelt issued a special statement on the trust situation. The statement went on to say that it was not the purpose of the government to regulate industries, but rather to protect the public interest.

Certain statements as to Mr. Coolidge have been erroneous. They are all unfounded and baseless. Mr. Coolidge has not the slightest connection with Samuel Insull, Charles L. Froelich, or any other individual or firm.

And since this is written, Mr. Roosevelt has been elected president of the United States, and the people are being asked to believe that the government will not interfere with the trusts. It is not true. The government will not interfere with the trusts.

There have been reports that certain persons or firms have been opposed because they were not connected with the trusts. This is not true. The government will not interfere with the trusts.

There have also been reports that certain persons or firms have been favored because they were connected with the trusts. This is not true. The government will not interfere with the trusts.

The government will not interfere with the trusts. The government will not interfere with the trusts. The government will not interfere with the trusts.

A WARNING!

The injuries and evils that modern industrial development have brought upon the United States are not to be compared with those existing in Russia. The American people are well-governed, and are schooled in self-government. They have a long history of dearly-won freedom. Their grand dukes of business are not half so strongly entrenched as the members of the Russian royal family.

In view of recent events in Russia, who can doubt that when the American people become aroused to see their interests protected, and to see their political rights preserved, they will demand something like the American people, and not, as it is in Russia, a government which is managed by a small group of men for their own purposes.

Using the Government

On October 31, 1905, the acting secretary of the department of agriculture and labor of the United States government said that a survey of the country's labor force would be conducted to determine the efficiency of the manufacturing industry for workers. The survey was to be conducted by the National Board of Trade and would include a study of the working conditions of laborers in factories.

The board of trade for the National Board of Trade is to be appointed by the secretary of the department of agriculture and labor, and will consist of representatives from various parts of the United States. The board is expected to complete its work by January 1, 1906.

The survey will cover all industries, including manufacturing, mining, transportation, and construction. The results of the survey will be published in a report to be issued by the National Board of Trade.

The Secretary of Agriculture and Labor, T. R. F. Brown, expressed his appreciation of the survey and said that it would be an important step in the direction of improving the working conditions of laborers in the country.

Nearing the Finish

In the meantime, the issue of the lumber strike was being handled by the government. The President, Grover Cleveland, had appointed a commission to investigate the matter, and the commission had recommended that the strike be settled by arbitration.

The President had accepted the recommendation of the commission and had ordered the strike to be settled by arbitration. The arbitration panel consisted of three members, two appointed by the President and one appointed by the strikers.

The arbitration panel has been working on the matter for some time, and it is expected that a settlement will be reached soon. The President has expressed his hope that the settlement will be satisfactory to both the strikers and the employers.

Freeman or Slave, Which?

This article is taken from the Chicago Daily News. It is a remarkable example of the use of citizens' rights by a newspaper. In the course of its investigation, the newspaper uncovered a plot to disrupt the election in a certain community by the use of false ballots and other forms of fraud. The newspaper published the information in order to alert the public and to prevent the fraud from taking place.

The newspaper's action is an example of the importance of the right to free speech and the right to know. The newspaper was acting in the public interest, and its actions were supported by the public. The newspaper's action is an example of the beneficial role that a free press can play in protecting civil liberties and in promoting justice.

The railroad managers have a very keen eye on the railroads and are anxious to remove any possible source of trouble. They are taking all necessary precautions to prevent any trouble from arising.

This article shows the importance of the railroad companies in the country. The companies are very powerful, and they have a great deal of influence. They are able to influence public opinion and to get what they want.

The railroad companies are also very interested in the election, and they are taking all necessary precautions to ensure that the election is fair and free. They are sure that the election will go their way, and they are not going to let anything stand in their way.

The government will pay you.

You can't make any money, says

the government.

You can't compete with businessmen.

The government will support you.

Under Socialism, when the
