ARouse, ye slaves!

In the latest and boldest stroke of the plotocracy, but for the kindness of the people, would have startled the nation. Murder has been plotted and is about to be executed in the name and under the forms of law. The plot is to be carried out by the government, and the currency of the country is to be used to finance the operation. The people are being deceived and are about to be made the victims of a great fraud.

Charles Moyer and Will D. Haywood, of the Western Federation of Miners, and their official co-workers, men, of whom, every inch of them—are charged with the assassination of ex-Governor Frank Stengele of Idaho, yesterday. They were arrested, brought from out of the state by special train, under heavy guard, and are now in the penitentiary, convicted them upon the testimony of witnesses, and then sentenced them to death with the longest term.

It is a foul plot; a damnable conspiracy; a bloody outrage.

The governors of Idaho and Colorado say they have the proof to convict them. They are being held in New York. The miners, the veritable tools of the mine owners who, themselves, if anybody does, secure the directors.

Moyer, Haywood, and their comrades had no more to do with the assassination of Stengele than I have to do with the murder of any man. They are innocent men who are too weak to betray their trust and too courageous to succumb to threat and intimidation. Labor leaders that arise before the plotocracy and do its bidding are apostates; they lose the benefit of the laws, the benefits of the miners’ unions, who, for a time, give them a bearing on the interests of the miners. They are the pawns of the system.

Personally and intimately do I know Moyer, Haywood, Petitchone, St. John and their official co-workers, and I will stake my life on their honor and integrity; and if the governors say they are guilty, I will work to free them. I will work to free the red-handed murderers of innocent men and the arch-enemies of the people.

Moyer and Haywood are our comrades, staunch and true, and if we do not stand by them, we are not men and our blood is in vain; we are disgraceful forever and deserve the fate of burning in hell.

The crisis is come and we have got to meet it. Upon the issue involved the whole body of organized labor can unite and every enemy of plutocracy will join us. From the farms, the factories, the mines and the offices, from everywhere, the workers of this country, the workers of the world, will meet the red-handed destroyers of freedom, the murderers of innocent men and the arch-enemies of the people.

They have driven us to the wall, and now let us rally our forces and face them right.

If they attempt to murder Moyer, Haywood, and their brothers, a million revolutions will follow. They have their worst and their best to cause and we, so will we be dealt with at the pleasure of these tyrants.

We are not responsible for the issue. If it is not our seeking, it has been forced upon us and we shall be prepared for it. If we can be murdered without cause so can we, and we will be dealt with at the pleasure of these tyrants.

Closing Up the Ranks.

It is the custom of the country to deliberately plan a season in the hectic world in which we live to give a little thought to the subject of self-maintenance. This is a healthy practice, and it is even more so when they find themselves dealing with the world of advertising. Survival of the Fittest.

The survival of the fittest is a theme that has been explored in various forms throughout history. This concept is often associated with Charles Darwin's theory of evolution by natural selection, where the most fit individuals are better able to survive and reproduce, passing on their traits to the next generation. This idea has been applied in various fields, including economics, politics, and even in the context of social norms and behaviors. The survival of the fittest can also be seen as a metaphor for the idea that those who adapt and thrive in challenging conditions are more likely to succeed. However, this concept has been debated and criticized, with some arguing that it oversimplifies complex social dynamics and ignores the role of external factors in determining success.
Great Public Meetings.

Every city, every hamlet, in every shop and farm and every factory where there are two or more wage earners there should be told the story of the great public meetings. From the corner street corner, where the newsboy shouts out the story of the meeting, to the big departments of the city, where the clerks and workers listen to the story, every public trade union should be an endless battle against the public indifference. The great public meetings should be held in every city, every town, every village, and every hamlet where there are two or more wage earners. These meetings should be the greatest public meetings of the day.

DEADLY DESERTS OF THE FLAG OF HIS PATHEM.

Joseph M. Patterson, of the World's Club, who is one of the leaders of the movement to raise the flag, said to the World's Club, "The flag of the United States is a symbol of the country. Come, Let's Reason Together

I

HAVE a great many requests to answer, but without the desire that your readers should remain ignorant of anything, I am not sure that I could. I do not consider that these gentlemen are doing social justice, although they may feel that they are doing it under their guidance, because they insist upon their right of silence. They say that their religion calls for silence, and that as they are the only ones who can understand their religion, they will not let others speak. I believe that is the reason why they are so afraid of others speaking.

However, an analysis of the statements of the English and American newspapers shows that there are very few enemies of Socialism, and that the great majority of them are either Socialists or advocate some form of Socialism. But what is the use of analyzing the opinions of the newspapers, when the facts are that there are very few enemies of Socialism, and that the great majority of them are either Socialists or advocate some form of Socialism.

When you say that "America will not be willing to become a Socialist nation," you are not likely to have read the works of the great Socialists. You have not read the works of Marx, Engels, Lenin, or the great Socialists of the past. You have not read the works of the great Socialists of the past. But you have read the works of the great Socialists of the past. You have not read the works of the great Socialists of the past.

I have been reading the works of the great Socialists of the past. I have read the works of Marx, Engels, Lenin, and the great Socialists of the past. I have read the works of Marx, Engels, Lenin, and the great Socialists of the past.

What are Socialists? They are men who believe in the socialization of property, in the abolition of the class distinctions, and in the establishment of a society in which all men are equal.

The Socialists believe that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world.

The Socialists believe that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world.

The Socialists believe that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world.

Thus, I believe that the Socialists are the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the Socialists are the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the Socialists are the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the Socialists are the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the Socialists are the only class that is capable of governing the world.

I do not believe that the working class is the only class that is capable of governing the world, and that the working class is the only class that is capable of治理的制度。
The Mystery of Steunenberg's Death...

The sensational stories went out that it had not been captured by the Idaho authorities. But there were many who believed that neither Pomeroy nor Harrow was the man to have the bullet. General Wells, the Idaho authorities, and the railroad people were of the opinion that it was.
