COMING CLIMAX in the IRREPRESSIBLE STRUGGLE for EMANCIPATION

BY EUGENE V. DEBS

There is a work of God being accomplished now which is far more important than the work of the great revolution of 1776. The American Revolution was not a work of God. It was a revolution of the merchants and the manufacturers, of colonialism, of Mr. Hamilton, of the speculators, the wildcat speculators, the contractors, the speculators of Wall Street, of the big business men, the big farmers, the big ranchers. It was a work of God, this work of the labor movement. It is the most important work that has ever been accomplished in the history of the world, a work of God.

Approval of the Cross

The trials have not ended. There is a new development that is interesting. The labor movement is spreading to the whole working class, and the trials have not ended. The trials have not ended.

For the working class who demand social ownership, socialize capital, nationalize the railroads, and the spirit of the revolution.

The Social Club has already been working. It is based upon the idea that there is a basis for a new society.

The Milk Supply of Cities

Kentucky—The Louisville city council has passed a ordinance to regulate the sale of milk. It was passed after the council had heard the testimony of a number of witnesses. The ordinance provides that milk shall be sold only by those who have a license from the health department. The price of milk shall be fixed at 10 cents per quart.

The following speech in Chicago is a copy of the speech made by the President of the American Hotel and Restaurant Association on the subject of crime in taverns.

Mr. President:

I have been requested by the President of this association to state my views on the subject of crime in taverns. I believe that it is a matter of the utmost importance that something should be done to prevent the spread of crime in taverns.

I think that the best way to prevent crime in taverns is to make it a punishment for people who commit crimes in taverns. I feel that the only way to prevent crime in taverns is to make it a punishment for people who commit crimes in taverns.

I will therefore move that an act be passed making it a punishment for people who commit

ROOSEVELT'S LABOR LETTERS

By ROBERT S.

THE letter of President Roosevelt to the Money Reformers, in which he asks that the United States be in the same position as the other countries of the world in respect to the value of the dollar, is one of the most important ever written by any President. It is a challenge to the American people to think and act in terms of international economic conditions.

The first paragraph of the letter states that the United States is in a position to compete with other nations only if it has a stable currency. It then goes on to say that the present system of floating exchange rates is not only unfair to the United States but also harmful to international trade.

The second paragraph outlines the President's plan to stabilize the dollar. He suggests that a committee of experts be appointed to study the problem and make recommendations for action.

The third paragraph, which is the most significant, states that the President will ask Congress to consider a bill that would provide for a fixed exchange rate for the dollar. This bill would also include provisions for the establishment of an international monetary fund.

The last paragraph expresses the President's hope that the American people will support his plan and work for its enactment.

The letter is a clear and concise statement of the President's policy and a call to action. It is a reminder to the American people of the importance of international economic stability and the need for a strong dollar.
