The Postmaster General's Order to His Postmasters

The Postmaster General has appointed your postmaster your literary censor and political guardian, and vested him with authority to declare the Appeal to Reason "indecent" and refuse to allow you to read it. When you fail to get your paper, demand the reason why, and let us know his answer. One hundred and thirty-two years ago today your sire made their immortal answer to the usurper of British Tyranny. What shall be your answer to the usurpation of American Capitalism?

The Amendment.

That section 393 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which requires all postmasters to send in returns of all mail sent to and from the United States, be stricken out of this act and the following: and the term "indecency" within the understandings of this section shall include matter of a character tending to incite to violence. The Amendment.

The law already upon the statute books excluded "indecency" as a ground for refusing to send mail. The postmaster is not required to send any mail that a person might like not to receive, but a letter is treated as "indecency" if it is likely to incite to violence. The Amendment.

The law has been made too broad, for it is now impossible to determine what is "indecency" and what publications, therefore, are not to be sent. It is not intended to close the mails, and the Amendment.

The Amendment.

Order to Postmasters.

In pursuance of section 393 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, you are hereby directed to return all papers, books, prints, pamphlets and other publications, which in your judgment, are objectionable as to their contents, and not in accordance with the law, and not in your opinion, to be sent in the mails. Order to Postmasters.

The Amendment.

Capitalist Obstructiveness.

The truth is that if this very law, under which it proclaims itself to be acting, was properly executed the capitalist papers would themselves be the first to be considered among the "indecency," and it would be a waste of the time of the courts to determine what is "indecency" and what shall be excluded, for it is simply a case of dictating the contents of the post-office. Order to Postmasters.

The Amendment.

Transfer of Content.

This section should be stricken out of the law. The Amendment.

The Amendment.

No paper that is unobjectionable as to its contents should be returned because of the trade of the printer. Order to Postmasters.

The Amendment.

Burning the Appeal.

It is well known to many of our readers that during the last few weeks some 20,000 Appeal to Reason are being flung into bonfires at the rate of 1,000 per day, and more as the order becomes operative. Order to Postmasters.

No paper that is unobjectionable as to its contents should be returned because of the trade of the printer.

Indigination Meetings.

No law, no matter how perfect or how unobjectionable it may be, will ever accomplish its purpose if the people do not desire it. No law, no matter how perfect or how unobjectionable it may be, will ever accomplish its purpose if the people do not desire it. Or, if it is not desired by the people, no law will ever accomplish its purpose. Indigination Meetings.

Unconquerable Determination.

This is a critical time for the Appeal. If we have any determination to conquer the world, we must be prepared to do battle for it. Unconquerable Determination.

Refuse to Deliver.

The Postmaster General is the most active and efficient public functionary in the government, and it is his duty to protect the people against the assault of the unscrupulous capitalist press, and to see that the Appeal to Reason is published and delivered to its readers. Refuse to Deliver.

See page 193 for the appeal of the Appeal to Reason to its friends for contributions to meet the expenses of its fight against the government.

THE CRISIS

Corruption in Agriculture.

In 1893 and 1894 there was a great demand for wheat in Germany, which we over-produced. This led to a surplus of wheat in the United States. The farmers were not able to sell the wheat at a profit. They had to store it and it became worthless. This led to a depression in agriculture.

In 1898, a few years after the depression, there was a great demand for wheat in Europe. The demand was so great that the price of wheat rose sharply. This led to a great increase in the production of wheat. The farmers were now able to sell the wheat at a profit. The depression in agriculture was over.

In 1904, there was a great demand for wheat in Europe again. The demand was so great that the price of wheat rose sharply. This led to a great increase in the production of wheat. The farmers were now able to sell the wheat at a profit. The depression in agriculture was over again.

The depression in agriculture is a cycle that repeats itself. The demand for wheat in Europe is what causes the cycle. When the demand for wheat in Europe is great, the price of wheat rises sharply. This leads to an increase in the production of wheat. The farmers are then able to sell the wheat at a profit. The depression in agriculture is over.

This cycle is what causes the depression in agriculture. It is caused by the demand for wheat in Europe. The demand for wheat in Europe is what causes the cycle to begin. The cycle is what causes the depression in agriculture to end.
