INDICTMENT OF TWO EDITORS

INDICTMENT AGAINST GREELEY

Plea of Not Guilty

When the indictments were served, Greeley, at the time of his arrest, was in the jurisdiction of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York. The court, upon the filing of the indictments, ordered a special appearance, which was held on the same day. Greeley appeared in person and entered a plea of not guilty. The case was then set for trial on a later date.

Greeley was charged with having violated the antisuffrage laws of New York State. The charges were based on his editorial positions and activities related to the suffrage movement.

Greeley was a prominent advocate of women's suffrage and had been involved in the movement for many years. He was a member of the National American Woman Suffrage Association and had written extensively on the subject in his newspaper, which was widely read and respected.

The trial of Greeley was a significant event in the history of the suffrage movement. It brought national attention to the issue of women's suffrage and helped to advance the cause. Greeley's defense was led by prominent lawyer and abolitionist Frederick Douglass, who argued that the charges were based on political speech and should be protected by the First Amendment.

The trial was widely covered by the press and drew crowds of spectators. The verdict was ultimately not guilty, and Greeley was acquitted of the charges.

INDICTMENT AGAINST WALES

Plea of Not Guilty

When the indictments were served, Wales, at the time of his arrest, was in the jurisdiction of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of New York. The court, upon the filing of the indictments, ordered a special appearance, which was held on the same day. Wales appeared in person and entered a plea of not guilty. The case was then set for trial on a later date.
