You're missing the content of the document. Please upload the text content so I can assist you better.
The Growth of Socialism—A Reply to Mr. Bryan

Mr. Bryan, in his article reprinted in the Appeal to Reason, states that the movement of the time is socialism, and that socialism is necessarily a political organization. This is a false statement, as the movement of the time is communism, and communism is necessarily a social organization.

Mr. Bryan is in error in thinking that socialism is a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.

Mr. Bryan is also in error in thinking that socialism is necessarily a political organization. It is not. Socialism is a social movement, and its object is to establish a new social order, based on the principles of social justice and equality.

Socialism is not a political organization, because politics is a system of control, and communism is not a system of control.