JUDGE PETER S. GROSSCUP, THE HOME WRECKER

PATRISTIC STORY OF GEORGE DOUGHERTY

As Related to Eugene V. Debs Sixteen Years Ago by the Man Whose Home Had Been Destroyed by Grosscup, a Domestic Tragedy With a Moral: "How to Qualify for the Federal Bench.

Theisz.—Our story is of the man who led the breadless workers to parole and the nightingale of the 20th century. In 1910, Eugene Victor Debs, who had been inspired by Grosscup, the home wrecker, was arrested for塌 heaved in a federal prison. The story is as follows:

"The day was warm and bright. Eugene Debs, the labor leader, was walking in the park. Suddenly, he came upon a group of men, dressed in suits of clothes, who were engaged in the peaceful occupation of playing cards. Debs approached the group and began to talk with them. He had heard that they were planning to break into a bank and rob it. Debs, knowing well the consequences of such an act, decided to put a stop to it. He began to explain the harm that such an act would do to society. The men were impressed by his words and decided to cancel their plans. Debs, having accomplished his goal, continued on his way, smiling to himself."

The End.

The Crime of Spokane

TALLING LIKE THE APPEAL

The Third Assistant Takes a Hand

The Appeal has been notified by Mr. Llewellyn third assistant postmaster general, that the Appeal will be included in the list of first-class post offices to be held in the United States. As many comrades know, the Appeal has been giving a debt lecture to the public, and the postmaster general has asked them to subscribe to the funds of the Appeal—"the number being determined by the size of the city." The lecture is to be held on January 8th, 1910, at 7:30 p.m., and the postmaster general has said that the money will be used to sustain the Appeal and that the notice received above is the result. The department maintains that these subscriptions are required as a matter of public policy, and therefore those who make such subscriptions to the funds of the Appeal should remember that the Appeal is a first-class post office.
