AN OPEN LETTER

To Oscar Lawler, Assistant Attorney General of the United States

Girard, Kan., Jan. 6, 1910.

Dear Mr. Lawler:

The Washington Post of May 34th states that you have ordered the post-office department to suppress the Appeal to Reason. The Appeal is not a newspaper, but is a political tract against your government. It is the work of a foreigner, and you have no authority to suppress it. The Appeal is not a newspaper, but is a political tract against your government. It is the work of a foreigner, and you have no authority to suppress it.

Sincerely yours,

J. W. Wayland.
Court of Appeals Speech. Whenever capitalism undermines our government, it is necessary to rely on the people to maintain it. The standing army is a necessary evil under the present system. The people are the best defenders of their government, and the best hope for its preservation.

Local Committee, M.E. Church, took some measures to care for the relief of destitute people. The committee has been working for the past few days, and has made some good progress. The amount of money collected so far is $100. This money will be distributed among the poor, with the exception of those who are able to work and have some means of support.

Americans Under tribute. A Wall street publication gives the fact that English capitalists are investing in America, claiming that the conditions and the taxes make investment here safer than any part of the world. The New York Times, Chicago, and other financial journals add their testimony to the same effect.

This is a capital mistake on the part of these English capitalists. It is to be hoped that they will not be taken in by the false promises of the American government.

THE ARMY AND LAWYER. The Army is a powerful instrument in the hands of the government. It can be used for good or evil purposes. The government should use it for the benefit of the people, and not for the benefit of a few. It is to be hoped that the government will not allow the Army to be used for its own purposes.

The Army has the power to enforce the law, and it is to be hoped that it will be used for that purpose. It is to be hoped that the Army will not be used for the benefit of the rich, but for the benefit of the poor.
