Three Ways of Financing

The three principal methods of financing industrial enterprises are: 1. the building up of a large reserve of capital, 2. the introduction of new inventions, and 3. the borrowing of money at interest.

How the Trust Works

The term "trust" is used to designate a company formed by or for the purpose of controlling and exploiting the business of another company. A trust is a corporation, which owns the assets of another corporation, commonly called a "trustee." The trustees, upon the trustee's death or bankruptcy, have the power to transfer the trust to another corporation or to sell its assets, and to appoint new trustees.

Great New Steel Under Way

The manufacture of steel is a complex and laborious process, involving the reduction of iron ore to a liquid state, the melting and casting of the iron, and the shaping of the resulting material into the desired form. The quality of the product depends on the purity of the ingredients, the time spent in the process, and the methods used to control the temperature and pressure of the reaction.
The Humor of It

Problem of the American Farmer.

Tobacco Burroughs is a hero of the press. The text and illustrations that appear in newspapers and magazines are written with a sense of humor. Burroughs is known for his comic strips, which are often filled with light-hearted and witty comments on everyday life. The publication is dated September 24, 1910, and it appears in the weekly magazine. The issue is priced at 25 cents per year.