Crimes and Horrors in a Federal Prison

The federal prison in the federal service of the United States is a dreadful place.
The Wage Workers and the Law

A FED'S SIMPLE QUESTION:

A few simple questions, which anyGroupId become interested in the welfare of the working class, would find it to their advantage to ask of some of the experts in the field of labor legislation, who have devoted their lives to this work. One of the jesters of these experts, is a man named Mr. John Doe, who is a member of the Labor Legislation Committee of the National Labor Union. Mr. Doe has been asked by his constituents to answer the following questions:

1. What is the definition of a wage worker?
2. What is the legal status of a wage worker?
3. What rights does a wage worker have?
4. What remedies are available to a wage worker?

Mr. Doe has given the following answers:

1. A wage worker is a person who is employed for wages, and who is not a member of a union.
2. A wage worker is not a member of a union, and therefore is not protected by any union agreements.
3. A wage worker has no rights, and is not entitled to any protection.
4. A wage worker has no remedies, and is not entitled to any compensation.

CHILD AND SOWER STATE:

A man named Mr. Smith has been employed as a pieceworker in a factory for several years. He has always been paid according to the piecework system, and has never been paid more than the minimum wage. He has recently been told that he will be transferred to the day work system, and that he will be paid according to the day's work performed. Mr. Smith has been asked by his constituents whether he is entitled to any compensation for the loss of his former wage.

Mr. Smith has received the following answer:

Mr. Smith is not entitled to any compensation for the loss of his former wage, as he has been paid according to the piecework system, and has never been paid more than the minimum wage. Therefore, he is not entitled to any compensation for the difference in wages.

WHY NOT MAKE A UNION?

A man named Mr. Johnson has been employed as a laborer in a factory for several years. He has always been paid according to the piecework system, and has never been paid more than the minimum wage. He has recently been told that he will be transferred to the day work system, and that he will be paid according to the day's work performed. Mr. Johnson has been asked by his constituents whether he is entitled to any compensation for the loss of his former wage.

Mr. Johnson has received the following answer:

Mr. Johnson is not entitled to any compensation for the loss of his former wage, as he has been paid according to the piecework system, and has never been paid more than the minimum wage. Therefore, he is not entitled to any compensation for the difference in wages.

STORIES OF THE ROAD:

At Garden, Ohio, on April 15, 1911, a man named Mr. Brown was riding his bicycle through the town, when he was hit by a car. He was taken to the hospital, where he died from his injuries.

At Garden, Ohio, on April 15, 1911, a man named Mr. Brown was riding his bicycle through the town, when he was hit by a car. He was taken to the hospital, where he died from his injuries.

At Garden, Ohio, on April 15, 1911, a man named Mr. Brown was riding his bicycle through the town, when he was hit by a car. He was taken to the hospital, where he died from his injuries.

At Garden, Ohio, on April 15, 1911, a man named Mr. Brown was riding his bicycle through the town, when he was hit by a car. He was taken to the hospital, where he died from his injuries.