How Socialization Actually Works

Last week we presented a list of the principal ideas in America that are held to be incompatible with the policies of socialism. This week we shall present a list of the principal ideas in America that are held to be incompatible with the policies of individualism.

Socialization in Practice:
- Socialization in practice is not the same as socialization in theory. It is often impossible to separate the two.
- Socialization in practice often results in a conflict of interest between individualists and collectivists.

Diffusion and Concentration:
- Diffusion is the process by which a new idea spreads through a population.
- Concentration is the process by which a new idea is brought together by a small group of people.

Free Enterprise:
- Free enterprise is a system in which individuals are free to buy, sell, and produce goods and services.
- Socialization is the process by which a government or a group of people takes control of the economy and controls the production of goods and services.

Socialism:
- Socialism is a system in which the government or a group of people controls the economy and controls the production of goods and services.
