A Personal Word

What is the future of the Appeal?
The future of the Appeal is in the hands of those who read these lines who are in sympathy with its work and who desire to see the dreams and ideals of its founder realized.

As I write these words I have scarcely recovered from the shock of the terrible tragedy of November the 10th. Following this tragedy came the uncertain days at Fort Sill, with events moving so swiftly and fast, that it is difficult to keep up with them. Out of the despair and stress and struggle comes the determination to stay with the little old Appeal so long as I have the physical and mental powers to perform whatever work that may come my way.

Write to me, Comrade, for my heart is heavy with sadness. I need your encouragement and the Appeal needs your support.

When I have heard from you, then I can tell you the future of the Appeal.
Your Comrade, FRED D. WARREN.

Address of Ben F. Wilson at the Wayland Home

The funeral of Comrade Wayland was held at the Wayland Home on Saturday afternoon. The home was filled with people, many from a distance, who had traveled many miles to be present at the service. The body of Comrade Wayland was placed in the center of the room, surrounded by flowers and adorned with the symbols of the American Civil War. The service was conducted by the Reverend Dr. John Smith, who spoke movingly of the life and work of Comrade Wayland.

Debs' Telegram Read at the Grave

LAKE, Minn. - A telegram was read at the grave of Eugene V. Debs, the socialist leader who was arrested earlier this month for speaking in favor of the miners' strike.

Where Socialism is Victorious

Two years ago, Washington town and high school graduates, socialist leaders, and labormen's clubs gathered in Washington, D.C., to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Socialist Party. The party was founded by the Socialists of America, a small group of moderate socialists who believed that the best way to achieve their goals was through the ballot box.

The Socialists carried on the movement, and in the years that followed, the party grew in size and influence. It was a time of great hope and optimism, and the Socialists believed that they could bring about a better society through their policies and programs.

But the American Civil War put an end to these dreams. The war was fought to defend the Union, and the Socialists, who were mostly from the North, were left out of the fight. The war was fought with a lot of violence and bloodshed, and the Socialists were not able to make their point.

The Socialists were forced to go underground, and their leaders were arrested and imprisoned. The party was dissolved, and its members were scattered to the wind.

But the Socialists did not give up. They continued to work for their goals, and in the years that followed, they were able to make some progress.

The Socialists continued to grow in size, and their influence spread to other countries. They were able to win some elections, and they were able to make some headway in their fight for a better society.

The Victory Grows

The Socialist victory is a good one. While official figures are not in at the writing, it is now reported that the votes will run beyond twenty. And while the number in control of the City and County will be far from half a dozen, we should have a number of candidates, and it will be a real test of the strength of the party.

We have reason to be thankful for the victory, and that in it a victory. There are now ten states where Socialists have the ball, and while the vote is not large, it is a step in the right direction. We hope to see it extended to other states, and to other cities.

The Repudiation of Taft

The Republican party is in a fixed state. It is, however, a good one, and we should not be afraid of it. The party is now more or less determined to fight, and we should be ready to meet it.

Taft’s Five Supreme Judges Will Rule the Nation

The Taft-Ballin War

This war between nations can go on for years, and the only hope of its ending is the peace party. The peace party is not strong enough to end the war, but it is strong enough to make it go on.

The Peace party is growing in strength. It is growing in strength among the Socialists of the country. It is growing in strength among the people. It is growing in strength among the nations. The peace party is growing in strength among the nations. The peace party is growing in strength among the nations.

We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party. We should support the peace party.
