Latest News from Mother Jones

Two more months here

The Appeal today received a letter from John Henry Lewis, brother of Mother Jones, giving the following news:

"I received a letter from Mother Jones two weeks ago, in which she said she was filed with the local authorities and was no longer at liberty. She was taken to the hospital for treatment, but her health is said to be improving. She will be transferred to a new location in the next few days."

J. K. Turner to Write of West Virginia

A note as John Kenneth Turner escaped from the clutches of Felix Daz, by whom he was thrice lined up to be shot, the Appeal put him into the field to get the story of the outrages of West Virginia, feeling sure it was no less horrible and sensational than condition of the men now in the military service. The story was said in the paper, and the story was a lie. We realized that if the men had been misled and the story published, the men would have instantly been deported or thrown into prison. We sent in a postcard for his story, but the story was discovered by the Appeal.

The day before he left, the men of West Virginia, agents of the mine owners, were in the midst of this campaign. They immediately organized this paper. They are being informed by the men that when he was taking a bath, and were ready to slug him, but Turner had been up against that game before, and the men had discovered that this new paper was not the one that came from the Appeal, smashed it to the ground, and said it was the Appeal's greatest loss.

The Appeal is able to announce the beginning of Turner's story next week. So bitter has been the attack on this paper that for nearly two years it has been kept on the defensive. It is now the official organ of the miners. The Appeal is in the process of becoming a new organization, and is making great disclosures about the conditions in West Virginia. The Appeal will be by far the greatest thing published since the Lizzie McColloch exposure. Watch for them!

No Place in West Virginia for a Military Tribunal

The majority opinion holds that the guarantees of our state constitution may be set aside and wholly disregarded on the plea of necessity. It has long been supposed that such a doctrine has been forever condemned and foreclosed in the state. It has been believed that any attempt to give effect to such a doctrine in the courts or legislature, or by any other means, would lead only to further outrage to the people of West Virginia and the Appeal is glad to report that the Appeal is now on the offensive.

"Leaving was never pleasant, but when you are out of a job, it is worse."

AUGUSTA, PA.-A retired farmer, Mr. John White, who was forced to leave his home because of the depression, returned to his home yesterday after a 10-year absence. He had left the area during the depression, and although the economy has improved, he found his former home unrecognizable. The house was in ruins, and the surrounding area was desolate. Mr. White said he had worked hard to save enough money to return to his home, but it was not enough. He said he was grateful for the help of friends who had assisted him. Mr. White plans to rebuild his home and start a new life in Augusta, PA.

Pennsylvania

The Great Depression

The Great Depression, which started in 1929, had a severe impact on Pennsylvania. Many farmers lost their land, and the state's economy suffered. The state government implemented several measures to help farmers, including loan programs and construction projects. Despite these efforts, the economic situation continued to deteriorate, and the state's economy did not recover until the end of World War II.

WASING WAR IN ENGLAND

The women of Great Britain are not just women of the war 1 day or night. But perhaps it is considered better to have the women of Great Britain be doing something during the war than to be doing nothing.
Ordinary conditions of the country are against employment of women in any except the most menial positions. The women of Great Britain are forced to work in factories and on farms, but they are not suffering for this. The women of Great Britain are working hard to support the cause of their nation.

What Would You Do?

The above picture is one of several pictures and characteristic illustrations of the present season, in the close

I had an opportunity of hearing Mr. Walker, a local newspaper editor and publisher at the time, and I was very impressed with his enthusiasm and patriotism. Mr. Walker was very much a patriot and a great advocate of the war, and I was impressed with his ability to present his arguments in a clear and convincing manner.

The picture shows Mr. Walker holding a piece of paper, which he was reading to the audience. He was wearing a suit and tie, and he was speaking in a confident and authoritative manner.

The sugar trust has been profitable for the
