That psychological depression under which the producers are laboring does not worry you for last election.

But why? Because the producers are laboring there, too, in the business world, and there are feelings of depression over there, as well. Anyhow, the producers are laboring, and we are all here to help them.

That is to say, they produce, and a part of what they produce is the food for this great city.

But why is the depression of the producers any worse than the depression of the consumers? The producers are also being paid wages; so much for the depression of the producers.

The depression of the producers is due to the fact that the commodities are not being produced in sufficient quantity to meet the demands of the people. This is a result of the depression of the consumers. The depression of the producers is not due to any lack of capital or labor, but to the fact that the consumers have no money to spend on the commodities produced.

The depression of the consumers is due to the fact that their wages are not sufficient to meet the demands of the people.

Funnin', isn't it?

The men and women who produce goods are not the only ones who are hard hit by the depression. The producers of services are also suffering. The depression of the service-producing industry is due to the fact that the consumers are not purchasing services in sufficient quantity to meet the demands of the service-producers. This is a result of the depression of the consumers.
