John D., You Can't Buy Nor Bribe the Appeal!

Your Money Has Given You Ownership and Control of the Denver Rocky Mountain News, but Remember the Colorado Voters Will Continue to Get the Truth From the Little Old Appeal.

The most shameless self-out in the history of capitalist journalism is shown in the recent change of ownership of the Denver Rocky Mountain News by O. D. Rockefeller.

Read two editorials printed below in parallel columns which appeared five months apart to a day in the Denver News:

Before Rockefeller Bought It

The following editorial appeared in the Denver Rocky Mountain News on August 31, 1914.

Rockefeller bought it.

The horror of the shambles at Ludlow is ever-present, and the thought of Rockefeller's millions brings to mind the words of writers of Rockefeller's gunboats:

John D. Rockefeller, your name is stigmatised throughout history. It is written upon stone tablets. It is written in gold letters on the pages of the Bible. It is written in ink on the pages of the newspapers. Your name is written in blood on the streets of the world.

Rockefeller bought it.

The Rockefeller fortune is built on oil. That is a matter of public record. It is well known that Rockefeller is one of the wealthiest men in the world. His fortune is estimated at $2,000,000,000.

Here you have it. A paper that fights valiantly for labor in April becomes the willing tool of John D. Rockefeller in September. Thousands of workingmen have given their support to the Rocky Mountain News only to be betrayed by it for thirty pieces of silver. Why did Rockefeller buy that paper? Let us not fool ourselves. Rockefeller bought the News to use it as a vehicle for the spread of his own views and to use it as an instrument of oppression against the people. He could not stand having the News exposing him in Colorado. Furthermore, he knew that he needed a personal organ so that the work being done by the little Old Appeal in the state of Colorado. These two publications are bitter enemies of Rockefeller and are not doubt congratulating themselves and him on this stroke. They are all figuring that with a powerful paper in Denver to poison the minds of the people of Colorado it will be easy for them to repeat Ludlow, Forbes, and other atrocities against labor. It must be admitted that Rockefeller has the advantage over us. The Denver News will of course aid Rockefeller considerably until the people of Colorado get wise to the change of ownership of that paper. This important fact is hidden from the readers of the News. So our first move is to acquaint the tens of thousands of people of the state of Colorado with the ownership change. Once the Colorado people learn that Rockefeller is the owner of the Denver News its editorials and news will be taken with a pinch of salt. Therefore, we must first concentrate upon this point. We must circulate this issue of the Appeal in every nook and cranny of the state of Colorado and let them know where their aid is needed. We are sending bundles of this issue to every city, town and hamlet in the great inter-mountain state. The Appeal has names of workers in Colorado who will gladly distribute this issue of the Appeal, as you will note, is a terrible broadside against John D. Rockefeller. King of oil and the lower right hand corner of the newspaper is a suggestion to every liberty-loving citizen in this country can render assistance.

This is how, Mr. President.

The nine owners of Colorado are listed as follows: Rockefeller, oil, and steel; Steel, oil, and steel; Rockefeller, oil, and steel; Rockefeller, oil, and steel; Rockefeller, oil, and steel; Rockefeller, oil, and steel; Rockefeller, oil, and steel; Rockefeller, oil, and steel; Rockefeller, oil, and steel.

If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act. If you will not act, the people of Colorado will act.
The Kingdom of Jeff Farr

By John Murray

With the approach of the summer season, the conditions in the county of Crawford, Kansas, are improving rapidly. The harvest is progressing well and the farmers are busy with their work.

The Kingdom of Jeff Farr is located in the western part of the county, about ten miles from the town of Crawfordville. The King, Jeff Farr, has ruled this kingdom for many years and is revered by his subjects.

The kingdom is divided into several districts, each with its own castle and inhabitants. The capital city is called Castleberry, and it is there that Jeff Farr resides. The kingdom is state-of-the-art with all modern amenities.

Jeff Farr is known for his wisdom and his ability to make wise decisions. He is also known for his kindness and generosity. He is always ready to help his subjects in need.

The kingdom is ruled by a council of lords and ladies who assist Jeff Farr in his daily duties. The council meets weekly to discuss important matters and make decisions.

Cultural events are held throughout the year to celebrate the kingdom's history and traditions. These events are always well attended and attract tourists from all over the world.

The kingdom is a symbol of unity and a reminder of the importance of community. Jeff Farr and his subjects are proud of their kingdom and work hard to maintain its traditions and customs.

In conclusion, the Kingdom of Jeff Farr is a unique and fascinating place that is worth a visit. It is a reminder that even in a world of modern technology, there are still places where tradition and community remain important.
Some Light Reading for the Common People on a Light Pay-Day

BY Allan L. Benson

Yet the working man and woman who do not know the excitement of a pay-day, and the work that is done to get it, should appreciate the value of their labor and the dignity of their work. The worker who is paid a fair wage for a fair day's work is a valuable asset to society and deserves the respect of all.

A LITTLE while ago, I was at a meeting of a group of people who had just voted to organize a union to fight for better wages and working conditions. They were all working-class people, and they were very angry about the way they were being treated by their employers. They were determined to fight for their rights and to improve their lives.

The union leader said to the group, "We are here to fight for our rights, because we are working-class people, and we deserve to be treated with respect and dignity. We are not going to accept any more of the exploitation and abuse that we have endured for too long."

The group responded with enthusiasm, and they vowed to stand together and fight for their rights. They were determined to improve their lives and to create a better future for themselves and their families.

I was impressed by the determination and courage of these working-class people. They were not going to accept any more of the injustices that they had endured for too long. They were going to fight for their rights and to improve their lives.

The union leader ended his speech by saying, "We are going to fight for our rights, because we are working-class people, and we deserve to be treated with respect and dignity. We are not going to accept any more of the exploitation and abuse that we have endured for too long. We are going to stand together and fight for our rights, because we are working-class people, and we deserve to be treated with respect and dignity."
