AMERICA'S RACIST NEGLECT IN SICKLE CELL RESEARCH EXPOSED BY ITS VICTIMS

The following is an interview with Mrs. Ozella Keys, a victim of sickle cell anemia and with Mrs. Brenda Pennington, who has the sickle cell trait, and who is a nurse in San Francisco, California:

Q: Mrs. Keys, how and when did you find out you had sickle cell anemia?

MRS. KEYS: It was in 1957; and, I had graduated from high school, going into nursing school at St. Johns School of Nursing, Tulsa, Oklahoma. And, as you know, for nursing you have to have a medical examination. I went for my medical examination - and I had bad tonsils. They would not let me in nursing school until I had my tonsils removed; I checked into the hospital to have my tonsils removed, and that is when the big discovery was made. They did a routine CBC, preparing me for surgery (complete blood count). I was so anemic that the doctors were baffled; they didn't know why. And there was this doctor, who was a hematologist, blood specialist. And he ran a sickle cell prep. And he came up with sickle cell anemia, which was SS (the clinical notation for sickle cell anemia, as opposed to the trait) - that's the disease. At that time, my hemoglobin (red coloring of the red blood corpuscles) count was 6.2, which in most cases you would have to go to the death bed. But because I had 6.2 the hemoglobin count all my life, it had not affected me at that time - but in later years, it did.

Q: Mrs. Pennington, how did you find out you had the sickle cell trait?

MRS. PENNINGTON: Well, it was approximately four years ago. I was in junior nursing school, and I started having these vague, abdominal pains or cramps. It's very similar to gas pains - that's what I thought I had. And I took all the home remedies and "Tums", and anything that would neutralize the gas. And it didn't go away. So the next class period, I thought, I'll go to my nursing class and maybe my instructor will give me something or tell me what to do. So I called her before I arrived and told her about my symptoms. She said, come on and I think I have something to give you. And it was an antacid, a liquid antacid. And I took that and it didn't go away, I kept feeling worse and worse, and finally [I] just collapsed, and I was admitted into the hospital, and taken to the emergency room, and I told them about this severe pain I was having. So they took my temperature and the blood pressure and all that stuff, and did some blood work. My blood count was elevated; and they didn't know what to think. I heard people talking about it was probably her gall bladder, we might have to do surgery; or, it might be her appendix; or she might have an intestinal obstruction. Just all kinds of things, because symptoms could be related to other illnesses. And it was the second day that somebody said, well why don't we do another blood test, And that's when they found I had the trait.

Q: Have both of you been able to complete your nursing training?

MRS. KEYES: I have not. I had to drop out of nursing. In fact, I was not admitted to St. Johns School of Nursing because of that. It was an excuse, I'm sure, for them not to admit me anyway, because they said they didn't want to get insurance, you know, to that extent, because of my condition. So that's why I came to San Francisco. My supervisor had suggested a three-year nursing program would be too rugged and too strenuous with my ailment; and a four-year program, more unsatisfactory. And I came here to San Francisco, and went one year to San Francisco State, I was forced to drop out of nursing, because at that time, I had begun to really have the symptoms and develop the crises. I was out of school so much of the time, plus I was unable to keep up with the pace, because of my illness. And my doctor, he suggested that I change my major, due to how I could never get my tests taken. So in turn, I had to change my major. And I'm working on my teaching credential as of now.

MRS. PENNINGTON: Fortunately, because I only have the trait, I've been able to carry on more activities, and, as a result, been able to complete my nursing training. And since the episode four years ago, I have not had any further symptoms.

I have noticed, though, that when I am in fairly high altitudes for more than a couple of days, I start getting some vague abdominal gas pains - that's how I describe them. And they don't go away, no matter what I do. Once I return home or go to a lower altitude, I notice that they disappear. So, it could be an indication of something.

Q: Mrs. Keys, to what extent, besides having to drop the nursing course, have your physical activities been limited as a result of sickle cell anemia?

MRS. KEYES: To the extent of physical activities, as you know, I'm still limited. But he (the doctor) felt that in education you don't get too involved with strenuous work as in the medical field. I can't get around, 'cause I am in the hospital every month. And with nursing you have to be almost one hundred percent physically fit. And besides, he said for nursing itself, if I were to get my License, it would be really strenuous to work in a hospital, especially in direct contact with patients, you know, bathing patients, making the beds, the continuous, strenuous work.

Q: Mrs. Pennington, since you are a nurse, can you describe the extent to which your own training covered sickle cell anemia?

MRS. PENNINGTON: I think in the end of the chapter on hematology, there was about a paragraph, two lines maybe - I think a paragraph is being generous. Q: Since there is no cure for sickle cell anemia, is there any type of treatment to minimize the pain that a sickle cell crisis inflicts?

MRS. KEYES: As of now the only treatment I receive is oxygen by nasal catheter, strong medication which is a very strong narcotic and bedrest. They also inject me with sodium bicarbonate, which they give me to thin out the blood and the blood vessels so the blood and oxygen can flow freely. This is all they do. They did try - I know you've heard of it - the urea treatment. But that had a terrible reaction, because they don't know of an accurate dosage; it's just an experiment, a trial sort of thing. So, my doctor just refused to treat me that way.

MRS. PENNINGTON: Also too, one of the things in reference to urea is that I think that the information that was released was very premature. And I think the important thing to consider before you give this treatment is that there are the bad, bad side effects that Ozella can tell you more about, Mrs. Keys. First of all, they don’t have an accurate dosage. And you know each person is an individual. By that I mean, maybe one fourth of a gram may satisfy me, or maybe I may not need a fourth or I may need more. They haven’t even gotten close on the proof that my doctor was really just stabbing. The first day he gave me a small dosage, and nothing happened. I still had the joint pains, the crisis. I was in the hospital the second day. He increased my dosage, and I had a slight headache, but I was in crisis. And my crises vary. Sometimes during my crises I have these severe headaches. But he really didn’t know if it was the sickle cell crisis or the side effects of the treatment. Because from there he warned me and told me to let him know if I had blurring of vision, blindness, severe headache or, you know, feeling very, very, very different, from what I had. I didn’t have this severe headache. And it was a headache that I had never experienced before. I knew it was different from my sickling headache. I can’t even describe the pain; it was a completely different kind of pain.

I told him about it, and he stopped it immediately. He said he refused to go on, because you know I have pain as it is. I’m in constant pain. So he refused to expose me to more of it without some knowledge of what he was doing. As a result, he has discontinued such treatments.

Q: As a sickle cell anemia victim, are there any restrictions or limitations in your diet?
MRS. KEYS: Not now. In the past, I had been on a diet, a salt-free diet, a sodium diet. And at that time I had complications, for which I was taking medication, like cortisone and prednisone. But now I’m off the salt-free diet, although my doctor still tells me to watch myself, due to the fact that my body retains fluid. And of course when your body retains fluid, there are complications you develop. And also I should avoid eating gastric foods, in reference to vegetables like good old collard greens—which I love—red beans, cabbage, you know, that sort of thing. Because of the gas, the bloating can constipate the organs inside, and just seriously slow you off a crisis.

MRS. PENNINGTON: The thing that happens when eating foods like cabbage, or roughage foods, is that it increases activity in the stomach, the intestinal muscles. Now if you increase the activity of those muscles, you might cause the cells (and the cells are already sickling anyway), you might cause them to break. Because there’s more activity, they’ll be knocking against the walls of the blood vessels; therefore, they might break, or get clogged up, then that causes crisis. So one thing can lead to another.

Q: Have either of you been able to trace the sickle cell trait in your family lines?
MRS. PENNINGTON: My parents have not been tested. I’m the only member of my family that has been tested, so as of right now I don’t know of any other family members who do possess the trait.

MRS. KEYS: When they first discovered it in me, my mother was tested for sickle cell. They ran an electroencephalogram, which at that time, was negative. When I came to San Francisco, my doctor wanted to test my father and he was negative. And about four years ago, they re-tested my mother and found the trait in her. Because before, they had surmised it was my grandparents, but as they were deceased, they really didn’t tell.

My main purpose, because I am a victim of it, is that I want something to be done, and I am interested in starting a sickle cell anemia foundation. This is my main goal, because I know what it is and I know the funds and cost to treat it. I’m interested in starting a research foundation. I think we need one very badly. We don’t have one at all, really. We have everything else, but something for sickle cell anemia. And some of the established kind of agencies that have been in existence could take on some other responsibilities, as far as diagnosis and treating of people as well.

Q: Could you describe what the crisis is like?
MRS. KEYS: Yes. With myself the crisis that I have is a severe joint pain in my extremities. Well they can fall anywhere in your legs, your arms, your abdomen, your head and your spine. It’s a severe pain, like a pin is sticking, you know, through all the way to the bone or else someone is hammering you. It goes to your chest and is as though your breath is being cut off—that’s why I have to have oxygen. And it can simulate so many different things—like in my chest you would think I’m having a heart attack, because I get all the symptoms, severe chest pains, the numbness of the arm, especially down the left arm. When and if the cells are cloting, making their little forms in trying to make a break-through, then in my legs I have severe pains; and it’s like my hips are trying to become un-jointed, like, you know, how you un-joint a chicken; and my arms feel like someone has put a tourniquet around my arms, complete numbness. Then it goes down to my head, and I have a severe headache, and eventually down my spine. And sometimes I get all of these pains at once, all over, and until the medication can reach, I have this pain. And I have emesis, vomiting—it’s the gall bladder type, because it’s this bile-colored emission. And there is soreness and tenderness everywhere. It just hits all the vital organs. Over the years this tears down these organs and can bring on sudden death.

MRS. PENNINGTON: From my experience, the abdomen becomes very bloated and fat, and any kind of pressure that is applied there is very painful—many times the physician has to do this as a testing method, and it hurts, it’s just that tender to the touch. Another thing, I think it’s important for the individual to be aware of and maybe to use as a sign of certain for medical personnel to be aware of—and that’s the eyes. Sometimes the white part of the eyes becomes yellow. And if the individual is aware of the illness, then if they happen to note that the coloration of the white part of the eyes is changed—it’s a little more time—then according to the deepening of that thing they can take fast need and maybe rest or call the doctor.

Q: So sickle cell anemia symptoms can be very easily mistaken for other diseases, because there’s so much of a similarity to other diseases.

MRS. PENNINGTON: I agree. I think it can be very difficult, medically, upon clinical examination, to distinguish between sickle cell anemia crisis or appendicitis or gall bladder attack or an intestinal obstruction. It is very difficult because the symptoms are related to all these various illnesses. And as a result, it’s very important to consider this fact, especially if it is a Black person.

Q: That also points up the need for every Black person to have a sickle cell anemia test.

MRS. PENNINGTON: I agree definitely. It should become a very important part of the blood routine. And that way, if it’s the first thing that’s done, then you have medical evidence.

MRS. KEYS: For me, my doctor stressed that when I have a severe headache or chest pains, I must get to the doctor fast, because the two things are vitally important. If I have a severe headache, which means one of the cells has broken loose in the base of the brain, this could cause a stroke or a severe hemorrhage. Another thing is that the mass of cells can go to your heart, the main organ, and block off anything to my heart, which causes sudden death. I’m sort of treading from day to day.

A REVOLUTIONARY ANALYSIS OF SWEET SWEETBACK'S BAAAD ASSSSS SONG

BY HUEY P. NEWTON,

MINISTER OF DEFENSE, THE BLACK PANTHER PARTY, SERVANT OF THE PEOPLE

WITH AN INTRODUCTION BY BOBBY SEALY, CHAIRMAN THE BLACK PANTHER PARTY

The feeling that I have now that I am back on the scene with Brother Huey P. Newton is one where I remember the time when Brother Huey was always there to interpret the cultural forms and symbolic forms and expressions of the people in different forms of art. This was over three and a half years ago, the last time Brother Huey and I were together.

Now that I am back on the scene I have had the chance to be with many righteous Party members and community people. Together we have shared the experience of going to the theatre to see "Sweet Sweetback" the latest movie on the set. Our Minister of Defense, righteous, beautiful Brother Huey P. Newton was there in interpreting all the symbolic meanings of the movie and showing the essence of the real-life experience of the Black community as it is put together in "Sweet Sweetback."

It seems that it has taken nothing more than the fact that Brother Huey P. Newton is free, and now I find myself free from jail Number One and might have been in the old socialism. But we are with our people in the Black community and Brother Huey P. Newton is now giving forth a profound in-depth analysis, a beautiful revolutionary people’s analysis of "Sweet Sweetback." He is grasping for the people all the symbolic meanings of the movie and explaining them to us.

When we have read the analyses given by Brother Huey we should unite as brothers and sisters in the struggle and go back and see "Sweet Sweetback" but not to be entertained, we should do it because we can be educated and our consciousness and understanding can be increased. I am going to see it again with Brother Huey’s analysis in my guide. I hope you will too.

Bobby Seale

The very popular movie produced and directed by Melvin Van Peebles called "Sweet Sweetback’s Baadasssss Song" contains many very important messages for the entire Black community. On many levels Van Peebles is attempting to communicate some crucial ideas, and motivate us to a deeper understanding and then action based upon that understanding. He has certainly made effective use of one of the most popular forms of communication—the movie—and he is dealing in revolutionary terms. The only reason this movie is available to us with its many messages is because Black people have given it their highest support. The corporate capitalist would never let such an important message be given to the community if they were not so greedy. They are so anxious to bleed us for more profits that they either ignore or fail to recognize the many ideas in the film, but because we have supported the movie with our attendance we are able to receive its message.

It is the first truly revolutionary Black film made and it is presented to us by a Black man. Many Black people who have seen the film have missed many of its significant points. I have seen the film several times and I have also talked to about 50 - 60 others who have seen it and each time I understand more.

When Van Peebles first presented the film he refused to submit it to the Motion Picture Association to be rated because he knew they were not competent to judge its content. He knew the film was not something which would upset the Black community because of its explicitness. He wanted youth and children to see it because he knew they would understand it. Yet the movie was given an "X" rating over his protests, thus making it impossible for the youth to see. But it is a real message for them, just like "Moo Moo" one of the youthful characters in the movie, they are our future.

Melvin Van Peebles had great difficulty obtaining the funds to make this movie, therefore it is a low-budget movie. In some parts the sound and the lighting are not as good as they might have been if he could have had greater freedom to make the film. I have found that its messages and significance are clearer when I combine viewing the film with listening to the record of the sound track and reading the book. I would urge all of you who want to understand the deep meanings of the movie to completely buy the record and the book. NOTE: The book is available in paperback for $1.00, and the record for $2.38. Both may be obtained for $6.00 by sending a check or money order to Lancer Books, 1500 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10036.

"Sweet Sweetback" blew my mind every time I talk about it because it is so simple and yet so profound. It shows the robbery which takes place in the Black community and how we are the real victims. Then it shows how the victims must deal with their situation, using many institutions and many approaches. It demonstrates that one of the key routes to our survival and success of our resistance is unity. "Sweet Sweetback" does all of this by using many aspects of the community, but in symbolic terms. That is, Van Peebles is showing one thing on the screen but saying something completely different to the audience. In other words he is signifying, and he is signifying some very heavy things. I am going to go through the film and analyze some of the scenes, and then I am going to talk about some of the general ideas put forth in this truly revolutionary movie.

When the movie opens we see the faces of the women; there are young faces and old faces, light faces and dark faces, but in all of them there is a sign of weariness, sadness, but also joy. You soon recognize that the women are in a house of love, a house of prostitution, a house of ill-repute, and of course it is all of these things, depending on what position you are viewing it from. This is the essence of the whole film, the victim and the oppressor looking at things in a much different way, from a different point of view.

The women are tired, yet they are happy. This is because they are feeding a small boy. As you look at the women you see that they are strong and beautiful Black women, definitely African in ancestry and symbolic of Mother Africa. The size and number of their breasts signifies how Africa is potentially the breadbasket of the world. The women are feeding this child a small boy who is apparently very hungry, and as he downs it they keep offering him more. These women with their large breasts potentially could feed and nourish the world, and if this is so, certainly they have the potential to raise their liberator, for that is what the small boy is, the future of the woman, of Black people, liberation.

They are in a house of prostitution not of their own will, but because of the conditions, the oppressor makes for us. They are there to survive, and they sell their love to do so, therefore our love is distorted and corrupted with the sale. When you have nothing else left you give up your body, just as when you are starving you might eat your fingers; but it is the conditions which cause this, not the desire to taste your own blood; you have to survive.

The women standing around the small boy are not saying anything but by continuing to nourish him they are telling him that they can give him more than enough, not only food, but much love. This love is not for sale, so therefore it is uncorrupted, it is pure love, sacred and holy. Even though the boy is weak and has many sores on his face, with the love and nourishment of the women he can become a very strong man. The sores in his face come from malnutrition and poor health, and Van Peebles is signifying the fine line between survival and death. Even though the woman can feed him and clear up his malnutrition, they cannot do it if they die, because they have to also sell their love to sell in order to provide.

I have seen small children in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, in West Oakland, in Chicago, and in Harlem with sores on their bodies like the ones on the boy’s face. That is why we have health and food programs, because we are determined to make them healthy again. The women in the film are doing the same thing. They knew he is their future and so they give him love and nourishment that he might become a strong man, but not just a man in the physical sense, but that he might become a liberator.

Next we see the boy is healthy and growing, working as a towel boy in the house of prostitution. Then we see the prostitute making love to him. But this was a scene of pure love and therefore it was a sacred and holy act. Even though it was in a house of prostitution, it was not a distorted or corrupt thing. We see this by the very words the woman uses, because she tells the boy that he can’t at the photographer to get his picture taken; she tells him to move. In the background we hear religious music, signifying what is happening and what will happen later. First there is “Wade in the Water”, and we recognize that the boy is being baptized; then there is “This Little Light of Mine, I’m gonna let it shine,” signifying what will happen in the future. The music indicates that this is not a sexual scene, this is a very sacred ritual, for the boy, who was nourished to health, is now being baptized into a new act of living. The act of love, the giving of mankind, is also bestowing upon the boy the characteristics which will deliver him from very difficult situations. People who look upon this as a sex scene miss the point completely; and people who look upon the movie as a sex movie miss the entire message of the film.

What happens is not a distorted act of prostitution even though it takes place in a house of prostitution. The place is profane because of the oppressive conditions, but so are our communities also oppressed. The Black community is often profane because of the dirtiness there, but this is not caused by the people, they are the victims of a very oppressive system. Yet within the heart of the community, just as in the film, the sacred rite of feeding and nourishing the youth goes on; they are brought to their mankind as liberators.

Van Peebles shows this in the film, because when the love scene is completed, the boy is no longer a boy, he has become a man. He doesn’t have a climax until he reaches an adulthood. Even though we may have sexual intercourse as children, we don’t have a climax; it is an introduction which makes it a part of something which is not alien to us. In the film, the climax came at the appropriate time, after he has become a man; that is, he has learned the deep significance of what she was trying to teach him. It wasn’t an act or any mechanical sort of thing, but it was the building of his spirit.

Males are growing a monopoly while he is having sexual intercourse with her, from about 10 years old he ends up about 25. But as soon as he reaches a climax, that is, as soon as he becomes a man, then he is ready to go out and fight. This is symbolized by his pulling on his hat, because when you put on your hat, it symbolizes that you are going to go out and fight. The whole film is centered around movement, his putting on the hat logo, and his running and running, I think this shows the alienation he feels in his position. He is constantly in movement or “in the process”. When you are in process you are always going and never stopping to go. These symbols are used very well.

The oppressor would not view the love scene in the same way, because his whole introduction to sex is from a perverted perspective, divorced from his whole being. That is why he rates the film “xx” because what he saw was a sex movie. We know that it is much worse than that. He is introduced to sex as something outside of himself, while it is here for us to remember our first sexual experience. It is not something outside of us, it grows in us as any other part of our personality, and it is very integrated just as our arms, our hand or our breathing. This is why it was very necessary to have this young boy having this relationship in a place that is viewed from the outside as dirty and profane, because our community is also considered dirty and profane.

But we do love and we have holy experiences at the same time that we are being stripped of everything else. Then we sell that holiness in order to survive; but it's not holiness anymore, it's transformed by the sale. But nevertheless, the holiness is a part of us, so it serves us. But at the same time the holiness serves us, it remains as dirtiness to the outsider, because he is the cause of the profane conditions of the victims, and also because what he is getting is not love, but the sale of the prostitute.

To the boy she was not a prostitute because there was no money involved, she had introduced him to the thing that would give him his fullness as a person and his survival in the end. She introduced it to him as a boy because it is said: "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Proverbs 22:6. Of course he won't depart from it, if it becomes an integral part of his personality, because to depart from it is to depart from himself. The women were giving the boy more than simply a survival thing because he was their hope, and this is why they feel happy about the sacrifice they are making. You can see it on their faces when they are feeding him, or at the point of a gun when the woman tells him that he has a sweet back, and that is where he gets his name. Not only is he baptized into his fullness as a man, he gets his name and his identity in this sacred rite.

Every time after that when Sweetback engages in sex with a sister, it is always an act of survival, and a step towards his liberation. That is why it is important not to view the movie as a sex film or the sexual scenes as actual sex acts. Van Peebles is righteously signifying to us all. The first scene was far from anything sexual, that is why the holy music during the scene. It is only dealing with sexual symbols, the real meaning is far away from anything sexual, and so deep that you have to call it a gross scene.

When Sweetback puts on his hat he does not leave the house, he does not leave the victim's ghettos, he graduates and starts to perform there in a freak show. How will simulate sexual intercourse before an audience that paid to observe this scene. He starts out playing the part of a dyke, with false breasts and a beard, but then his fairy godmother comes along, he gets his wish and becomes a man before the audience, taking off his beard and showing his penis—it looks like a missile and shocks the audience.

While this is going on, the cops are harassing Beatle, the owner of the cat house. He has been paying them off and doesn't want to be bothered, but they want one of his men as a scapegoat arrest. The cops break off their harassment from time to time and go over to observe the freak show, even though they have seen it many times.

Sweetback is now having sexual intercourse with the sisty, but there is no holy music because it is not love; it is a performance given in order to survive. He is selling himself to the audience and the cops who are the real freaks. Dylan's "Ballad of The Thin Man" would apply here, because in the song the freaks go to see the geez who offers them a bone and they don't know why. But you see the audience or the freaks—including the cops—don't have to be there. They cause the conditions which make it necessary for people to go to these lengths to survive, and then they pay to see the performance the people put on. They are the real freaks and the people go through the act with real hostility and hatred for the people who cause them to be there in the first place.

There are also Blacks in the audience, and this is a stroke of genius by Van Peebles, because it symbolizes the total blindness of the audience of freaks. They are laughing at a situation, when they are in fact getting their heads cut off. That's like Dylan's "Sword Swallowers," who in the end will thank the audience for the loan, because they were really there, only they did not know it. The scene shows how the oppressor will go, because when it is asked if anyone in the audience wants to challenge Sweetback, this white boy couldn't hold his girlfriend down. The announcer would not let her go out there, because the police were watching.

The police, as I said, are taking payoffs and letting the house exist, and this is an indictment of them. Not only do they cause the conditions, they then pay to go see it, because it is amusing to them. But the freak show is not put on by freaks but by victims. The victim does what he has to do to survive because of his crippled and victimized position. The freak pays him for his laughter and the victim accepts the pay, but with vengeance in mind.

I think that it is ironic and also very symbolic that even while I am writing this, I can look out of my window and see the Oakland Auditorium where the Oakland Police Officers Assoc. is holding its annual circus. I don't see any Blacks going in. We are realizing more and more that it has always been a circus. They have tried to make a circus of our circumstances and our communities, but our awareness is growing and we are moving toward dealing with the situation in a very decisive manner, just like Sweetback did.

In the film and in the community the oppressor keeps demanding more and more from the victims—that is why they want one of Beatle's men. But this is also why the victim with the lowest levels of awareness will be brought into consciousness and revolutionized because he is doing what he is doing in order to survive, but eventually his very survival is at stake. The oppressor won't even let your acts of survival continue, he tries to totally crush you, so that survival becomes a very revolutionary act. At the point of life and death, all of the hatred for the oppressor is unleashed for survival purposes.
The police in the film really don’t want Sweetback. All they want to do is use him for a cover, because they are going after Moo Moo, the young revolutionary. Sweetback goes along with them because of his low level of consciousness. This is no hard task because when an individual victim acts without awareness of the situation, he is just like the organism that wants to survive, THE UNITY COMES OUT OF CONSCIOUSNESS.

For a short while Moo Moo and Sweetback are handcuffed together, but when the police start to beat the life out of Moo Moo, they separate them and tell Sweetback to stand aside. Sweetback attempts to look away from their beating of Moo Moo.

This shows the arrogance of the aggressor, thinking that he has all the control—his Jehovah complex. He thinks that he has his victims so completely in line, that this freak show performer who is paying them so that he can survive, will have no feelings for another victim. Sweetback attempts to look away while the police are beating Moo Moo. Just the turning away is showing how much of the time the masses attempt to dismiss the atrocities of the oppressor, even when attempts are made to communicate to them. They will pretend that they are too busy with other things because they are trying to survive; but they fail to realize that their real survival depends upon their social consciousness and therefore unity. The oppressor will demand more and more of them until they will perish without that unity.

At its lowest level, survival is just the organism getting by as an individual person or as an individual family, What they must realize is that the oppressor will not allow that, he will keep demanding more—high unemployment, poor housing, poor health and poor education, and more taxes—until their very death. So they attempt to look away; but because of compassion and their identity with the whole situation, they cannot completely turn their backs, and this is what causes the naivete of some Blacks.

But through Sweetback, Melvin Van Peebles is righteously signifying, and teaching the people what must really be done to survive. When Sweetback realizes that he cannot turn his back, he takes the handcuffs, the chains which have been used to hold him in slavery and he starts to kick ass. Using his handcuffs as a weapon against the oppressor rather than as the tool of submission, he downs both of the policemen, almost cutting off their heads.

This is a very bloody scene, but it was very important that they showed the blood all the way up his arm. It makes me think of the statement by Frantz Fanon in his book The Wretched of The Earth where he says that the peasant creeps into the settler’s room at night and cracks the settler’s head open. Then the blood sprouts across his face, and it is the only baptism he ever remembered.

The Black audiences really respond to this scene, because it is another baptism; but instead of wading in the water as Sweetback did earlier, this is a baptism in the blood. As each blow went down, you could hear the tension being released in the audience, because right at that moment it was a climax for the audience.

One of the few criticisms I have of this film is that there is no religious music behind this scene. This is no more a scene of violence than the earlier baptism was one of sex; it was a growing into manhood. Sweetback grew into a man when he was in bed with that woman and he also grew to be a man when he basted the heads of his oppressors there. When he was with the woman, it was like a holy wasp, and when he takes the heads of his oppressors, it is like taking the sacrament for the first time. In the first baptism he did not become a whole man; because he went into that freak show, but when he is baptized in the blood, he righteously moves on to a higher level, because the next time he is with the police with handcuffs on, he gets away and the time after than when he is with the police with handcuffs on in that pool hall, he knows what he must do and he does it.

Like I said before, Van Peebles is righteously signifying, because he engages the audience in a climax in the scene when Sweetback downs the police. What he does is equalize the most ecstatic moments in the film with the actions he is encouraging the people to engage in, so he is advocating a bloody overthrow, because the victims want to survive.

The next point that Van Peebles develops in the film is the need of the Black community for greater unity, and how the lack of unity will only deliver us into the hands of our oppressors. What happens? Sweetback helps Moo Moo get up, but then Sweetback goes on his own way and makes it back to the cat house and there he encounters Beatle, Beatle starts to give him advice, but everybody recognizes that Beatle is not really responding to Sweetback’s situation. Van Peebles gets this point across beautifully. While he is giving this advice, Beatle is sitting on the toilet. He wipes himself with his hands, and without washing his hands, he takes a towel and wipes his face. This is signifying that what is coming out of Beatle’s mouth is the same thing that is coming out the other end—shit and nothing else. Notice that Sweetback never says a word to Beatle, but he does not have to, because Beatle is deaf—he cannot hear what is being said anyway.

When he leaves Beatle the camera shows Sweetback with a terrifying look on his face. He has realized that those he knows best have such a low level of awareness that he cannot expect aid from them. He realizes that the lack of unity is a very hurting thing, and that when he walks out of Beatle’s place, he was right into the hands of the police, who pretend to be nice until they realize that he is not playing part of the mesh victim. Then they work him over thoroughly.

Sweetback is saved by that same community unity he failed to find with Beatle. The people rescue him by prelending to be in need of money, and therefore they offer to wash the car of the police. Instead they are engaging in a very revolutionary act and they save the brother from the oppressor, while at the same time delivering a deadly blow to the police. What Sweetback has done for Moo Moo is repeated for him by the community.

Sweetback is on his own now, but he is locked into a pair of handcuffs. How does he get them off? Through unity, he goes to a woman who he has been with before, and she tells him to beg. This is obviously not the first time this has happened, but Sweetback cannot beg anymore because he has been transformed by the baptism in blood. He needs her at this moment, but sexuality cannot be based on war any longer, it has to be based on love and unity. He makes love to her and after that the handcuffs are off. This signifies that it is the unity between the Black man and the Black woman which is able to liberate them both.

In his first baptism Sweetback acquired the ability to love, but he could only truly love and unify with the woman, when he had done away with the people who had made his woman the oppressor’s woman and himself the man. Then they could really have the unity which is symbolic of the liberating love of the Black man and woman.

Sweetback is on his own again, but this time without the handcuffs. In the meantime the film takes us back to the cat house and his old boss Beetle. Beetle is being hassled by the police who want him to lead them to find Sweetback. Beetle doesn’t really know, but if he did, he would have told them, because Beetle has no consciousness, he is deaf. And to prove how true this is, the police finally deafen him.

Sweetback moves through the community, looking for the assistance he needs to get away. He doesn’t get all that he needs, but he gets all that each can give. At the church he gets a Black Avo Maria and the power sign. The minister recognizes that his religion is a hype, because he tells Sweetback that Moo Moo is giving the people the real religion.

At the gambling den he gets little apparent sympathy. The manager keeps telling him he is a dead man, and he really does not need money. In this scene Van Peebles is again showing the community of the victimized just like the performer in the freak show, because the manager explains to Sweetback that he cannot make any money on his operation. By the time he gets finished paying off everybody who is exploiting him, he pays a dollar and a dime for every dollar he makes.

This is another example of the oppressor demanding more and more of the victims.

But the gambler does what he can—he gives Sweetback a ride. There is some unity, but not enough, and during the ride Sweetback spoils Moo Moo, the man he left behind, and they are reunited. This is as it should be, because Sweetback is leaving the community with the person who was the beginning of all this, Moo Moo. They are two unlike characters, but yet they are linked together.

Moo Moo symbolizes the revolutionary who is trying to free the people, his whole program is pointed toward people like Sweetback, community people who are very unaware, yet they are trying to survive. Sweetback then symbolizes the most unconscious persons in the community, people who are sometimes viewed as more worthless than the pimp. Sweetback is not a pimp and would not do as much as a pimp would; he is much less aggressive. A pimp will work at putting girls on the block, watching them, collecting money, beating them and controlling them. He may also steal and deal in dope and so forth, Sweetback won’t do any of this and yet the women love him, because he’s got such a sweet sweet back. He will just stay home and the women will bring him everything he needs. He accepts their goods, but he doesn’t care what they do. So the sweetback is actually more worthless than the pimp on one level, because he won’t take the chances that a pimp would to survive. He has submitted more, almost to the point where he is a vegetable and is just taken care of. So the fact that Sweetback would not stand any more victimization, that he identified with Moo Moo as being one of the victims, and the fact that Moo Moo’s revolutionary program is pointed to the lowest level of consciousness in the community means that even though they are unlike characters, even though Moo Moo is young and Sweetback is older, it is not unlikely that they would be bound together because they are, in fact.

When the gamblers get Sweetback and Moo Moo to the edge of town, they tell Sweetback to buy himself a last supper because he is a dead man. Their level of consciousness is so low that they will help him to a point, but they still believe that ultimately the oppressor will triumph and Sweetback will die.

Sweetback and Moo Moo are determined to survive, however, and they begin their journey. The encounter with the motorcycle gang shows a number of things. First of all it is a triumph of the soul force (which the woman gave Sweetback in the first scene) over all the mechanical developments of the oppressor. When he is challenged to a wrestling duel, the gang leader picks up a motorcycle to show brute strength. Then with the knife the gang leader shows how effectively they have mastered this weapon. When the gang leader reveals himself to be a woman, Sweetback knows that she is no match for the weapon he chooses. The gang promises to do them in after she does him in, but in the end “the Press” is laid out on the ground in complete submission. The Black women show him the way to liberation and he used his knowledge effectively.

Van Peebles is also signifying other things in the motorcycle gang scene. First of all there is the symbol of the strength of the white woman over the white man—and they don’t even know it. Then there is the symbol of the Arvian—the superior race. The president of the gang is big and robust, the image of white superiority. The only criticism I have here is that her hair should have been blonde rather than reddish, but the idea gets across. The idea also comes across that the

In unity, the community burned a police car to help Sweetback

This is clearly seen when Sweetback comes back to Beattle for help, Sweetback says nothing, but Beattle lets it come out of both ends. The audience replies to Beattle for Sweetback, and they supply the dialogue. This happens throughout the film. So the thing to do is not just see the film, but also to recognize how you the viewer are also an actor in the film, because you are as much a victim of this oppressive system as Sweetback.

The unity of the community is shown throughout the film and we should get the message the brother is signifying to us. When the community sets the police car afire and saves Sweetback, that is an expression of unity. When they do not even have seen him in order to permit him to escape, that is an expression of unity. When they raid the motel and rip the brother's eye out, they say "So what?" when told this is not Sweetback. But it is Sweetback in a sense, because the brother is another victim, like all of us are. When Beattle is rolled up to the morgue and realizes that the body they show him is not Sweetback, he sees his unity as a victim with his brother he failed to help who is also a victim, and Beattle cracks up laughing—they are unified, and in the next scene at the showtime stand Van Peebles signified to the man that he can kiss his ass.

Another expression of unity in the film is the power symbol. When the minister tells Sweetback the significance of the job he has done for Moo Moo, he then says a Black Ave Maria for him, but ends up giving him the power symbol—unity. Then when Moo Moo gets on the motorcycle to escape and then leaves Sweetback, this is different from their first parting. They give each other a soul shake, so that even though they go separate ways they are unified.

Finally the film demonstrates the importance of unity and love between Black men and women. This is shown again in the scene where the woman makes love to the young boy but in fact baptizes him into his true manhood. Then again when the woman makes love to Sweetback and then gets the handcuffs off him, we see that those are not sex scenes, they are love scenes in a very holy and righteous context. The second woman wants Sweetback to beg, but he can beg no longer because he has been transformed. His baptism in the blood transformed him—he has ripped off his oppressors and he is truly a man; he can never beg again, and he does not.

For a long time the Black community has been a collection of people who survive together in one place, but unity is essential for liberation as well as survival. When we have this unity, the faith of one becomes the faith of another as in the case of Sweetback and Moo Moo. When we have our consciousness increased to the point that we understand this, we will have our unity. But we must understand that the victimizers will always try to prevent this unity.

Another idea the film gets across is the different point of view between the victim and the victimizer. The victimizers cannot accept the reality and truth of the victim's view of the victim, and therefore they say that the victims are always wrong in their view of reality. Indeed, they even go so far as to signify that the victims cannot control and direct their own lives. This is seen at all in the fact that the film is labeled with an “X” rating. This is an act of the victimizers, trying to control what we shall see, and more than that, trying to say that the ways in which we are forced to survive are profane and dirty. They say that we are like freaks in a show, but in fact the freaks are those who force us to live in wretched conditions, they may be profane conditions to the oppressors, but we know how to make our conditions a survival situation and we do not see ourselves as profane. The oppressors see Sweetback as a sex film, but if we truly understand ourselves and unity with Sweetback, we will see that the film advocates a bloody overthrow of the oppressor. Melvin Van Peebles is rightly signifying.

The view of the victims is seen in many ways. One of them is in the understanding of Moo Moo and Sweetback. They both know that they are victims, although Moo Moo has not really gotten his complete program together for the community. Yet they seek the same goals of freedom and liberation, and they recognize that sometimes you have to use stern stuff to accomplish your goals. They also recognize that even though the community may not support you entirely, they will support you to a point and that you must go as far as the community will go, and then move on on your own, leading the people to a higher level of consciousness. Sweetback relies on the community much more than Moo Moo, because he understands that revolution is a process, going from A to B to C and so forth, rather than trying to get the people to jump from A to Z.

The oppressor does not understand this, he does not understand the strength of the will of the people. When the two policemen catch Sweetback after he leaves Beattle’s place, they are friendly, because they cannot accept the idea that the community will free itself. So they ask Sweetback how many people were in the ambush? How did they work it? The oppressors cannot accept the idea that the oppressed could do this without a lot of planning, without a large number of people. It seemed Sweetback and Moo Moo but the victimizer it had to be more than that. A difference in point of view, a point of view which is too often used to control us, but we must make our own point of view prevail.

Another difference in point of view is seen with the chains which are used on Sweetback twice in the film. To the oppressor they are the chains which keep us in a submissive position, but each time for Sweetback, the oppressors, they become tools of liberation. We will be even stronger when we learn how to turn the oppressor’s tools against him, rather than submitting to them.

SWEET SWEETBACK

Peebles puts across the uselessness of cultist behavior in our struggle for survival and liberation. In earlier issues of the paper I have talked about the revolutionary cultist, the cultural cultist, and the religious cultist. Von Peebles strikes some heavy blows at the religious and cultural cultists. For example, the minister understands that he is not leading the people toward their true liberation. He tells Sweetback that what he is doing is giving the people a hype, which gives them a little happiness, but he then goes on to say that Moo Moo and the younger guys are laying down the real religion. So this is a blow against those religions in the Black community which do not help people deal with the conditions which drive them to their knees, but instead want to keep the people on their knees.

The strongest blow against cultist behavior, however, is saved for the cultural cultists. We see this in the African garb which the minister is wearing. This is signifying that a lot of cultural nationalism and the meaningless religions in the community are deceiving the people in the same ways. In another way the film makes this point more strongly and also indicates the true way to liberation. When Sweetback arrives at the gambler's den, there is a note around the table are engaged in a conversation. The manager has complained to Sweetback that he cannot even make any money on this operation because he is paying off so many others. Cultural cultists offer many empty solutions to our oppression, and this scene hits at these solutions.

After the manager's speech one gambler says: "And Africa shall stretch forth her arms," and then another replies "Yeah, and bring back a bloody stump." Now we have to understand the true issue in order to see this as a blow at cultural nationalists, who are cultural cultists—Africa clothes, bones, and other things, but no way to liberate the people. Cultural cultists, who try to claim that they have the way, often use this scripture to support their ideas: "Prison shall come out of Egypt; Ethiopia shall soon stretch out her hands unto God." (Psalm 68:30) You can see that what Von Peebles is signifying is that those who use such meaningless arguments to mislead the people have nothing to offer because when they stretch forth their arms, they will draw back a bloody stump. Still, however, Von Peebles does show us how a bloody stump may not be a meaningless thing, if we get out of that cultist bag. How does he do this? He shows the blood on Sweetback's arms each time he downs the cops, in his first baptism by blood, there is blood all the way up to his elbow. And later when he downs the cops in the poolroom, there is blood up to his elbow again. That is the true route to liberation, stern action when the situation demands that you seize the time, and turn away from cultist behavior.

There is another key idea which comes through repeatedly, and that is the ability of the people to survive even under the harshest conditions. We do this by using the means available to us and never worrying about the fact that we don't have all the technology that the oppressor has. You will recall that Sweetback was in chains and in the back of the police car when the people "washed" it with gasoline. What did the Brother do? He made it out of the car and then walked right through the police and firemen who were arriving to try and deal with the situation. He walked right through them—he did not panic and run, he just calmly turned a situation of oppression to his advantage.

Later on when Sweetback and Moo Moo had separated for the final time, the Brother was faced with a very difficult situation, and he had very little to carry him through. But when the colored angels began to get down on him, he told them "I get feet." This was again symbolizing survival. It was not simply that he had feet, however, he also had the ability to use the technology of the oppressor in his own interest. He did not become discouraged because he had no car, Von Peebles could have had him steal a car, but instead he had Sweetback use the basic skills of survival, with nothing but the things he had learned for surviving the oppressor for so many years on the block. He doesn't have a car, but he rides—on the top of a truck, inside the back of another truck, on a freight train, he uses the oppressor's technology, but in his own interest.

He also survives by using the system against itself. He meets another traveler and pays him to change clothes and run when he is chased. This throws the police off his trail and helps him survive, but it also means that he ends up with clothes which are much more suitable for his long run across the desert. Later in the film, when he is near the border and the dogs are after him, the two men—the owner of the of the dogs and the police—get into a fight among themselves about whether the dogs will be united. This is all to Sweetback's advantage, turning the oppressors against each other, and he makes his escape.

In another way he survives the way that the Black community has always survived, by using the resources at his command even though they are not the resources others would use. Survival forces some very harsh decisions on us. When his wound is causing him to suffer, he urinates upon the earth and uses his own urine to make a mudpack which he applies to the wound—it produces a rapid healing. These are the kinds of home remedies we have long had to use because we could not get proper medical attention. Later, we see him bathing his face in a pool of muddy water. It sustains him. When I saw it I thought of that song which says "I'd rather drink muddy water, and sleep in a button out bag, than stay here and be treated like a dirty dog."

These are survival techniques all the audience can identify with because they realize they are necessary. They don't identify with the time he catches that lizard and devour it, raw. But this is no different from the times when we had to eat the chitterlings, hog maws, and other foods, not because we wanted to, but because that was all we had to eat. We may deny it, we may not identify with it, but it carried...

The very chains of the oppressor can become the tools of liberation.

as through. And the point we should understand is that if you do not submit to the oppressor, you may be forced to make some hard decisions, eat some undesirable foods, but this is better than being well-fed in some social prison.

Sweetback has only one tool with him, his knife, and he uses it very effectively. It reminds me of that point in The Wretched of the Earth where Fanon says that if you don't have a gun, then a knife will do. He uses his knife to escape at the rock concert, pretending to be making love to the girl in the bushes. He uses the knife against the bus. And then when he hears the dogs coming after him, he again pulls it out and he uses it— he really deals. But we should know it would be this way, because earlier in the pool room when he was facing the policeman with a gun what did Sweetback have? A tool. The community knows how to use very effectively, a pool cue. But he did not use it to down pool balls, he turned it into a spear and downed the oppressor. You don't need a gun, what you need is the consciousness of what it will take to survive and prevail in any given situation—and act accordingly.

So what I have done is given you a scene-by-scene analysis of the movie, then an analysis of some of the major ideas and concepts which the movie puts forth. Now I will show how the movie also raises the consciousness of the community by analyzing it in terms of some aspects of the ideology of the Black Panther Party. We see ideology as a systematic way of thinking about phenomena, not as some set of abstract conclusions. Our approach is one that uses dialectical materialism, which holds that contradictions are the ruling principle of the universe. Everywhere, in all of me, the social forces, the natural forces, and the biological and physical forces, we can find contradictions. What we mean is that in every phenomenon there is a contradiction between opposing forces which struggle to gain domination over each other. We call this the thesis and antithesis, or the unity of the opposites. Because these opposites are both unified and constantly in struggle with one another, they give motion to the matter composing the phenomenon. So we say that matter is constantly in motion, or constantly in a state of transformation. The transformation takes place in a dialectical manner, with the thesis struggling against the antithesis; these are the contradictions. The struggle is resolved in a synthesis, which contains elements of the old contradictions, but is at a higher level, and then a new set of contradictions arises.

The essence of the ideology of the Black Panther Party is that we recognize that matter is constantly in transformation in a dialectical manner. But when we understand this and understand the forces in operation, we can control them and direct them in a manner which is beneficial for the community. Therefore what we want to do is understand the contradictions within every aspect of the Black community and move on them by trying to increase the positive side of each contradiction until it comes to dominate the negative side. This is how we define power—the ability to define phenomena and make them act in a desired manner.

If you understand where the Panther is coming from, you will understand that Sweet Sweetback is a beautiful exemplification of Black Power, for what he does is decide how he wants things to come out and then he makes them act in a desired manner. The movie is also an exemplification of the dialectical analysis and the constant transformation of phenomena. I don't know whether Melvin Van Peebles was aware of this when he made the movie, but it does have these features, and probably so because the Panther ideology is an extremely effective approach to all phenomena. It gives us lots of insight and understanding.

For example, I say that all phenomena contain contradictions with positive and negative qualities. To control the situation, then, what you must do is increase the positive qualities of any phenomenon until they dominate the negative qualities. Sweetback does this on a number of occasions, take for example the chains. The handcuffs are definitely negative when they are used to keep him in submission; but when Sweetback realizes that he can ignore the beating of Mao Mao no longer, what is he to use for a weapon? Then the same chains which were used to bind become tools of liberation; the positive qualities are used to overcome their negative qualities. He did this again when he was caught by the police in the pool room—he offered his hands for the chains. Not because he wanted them, but because he realized that this would put the police off their guard, and also give him another weapon to use against them.

We see this again when he is using helicopters, cars and guns and the radio to trick down Sweetback. What does he use? Their technology; but in a positive way—he latches rides on trucks and trains, and they help to deliver him from the jaws of the monsters who are using the most advanced technology to try and capture him. If we can understand dialectical materialism, we will understand more about how to look at both the positive and negative qualities of phenomena so that we can control our destiny.

The film also shows the positive and negative features of community institutions. In other articles I have said that the Black Panther Party was wrong in its example of condemning of community institutions, instead of analyzing their qualities. The movie shows the positive and negative features of the church, for example. The minister is saying to Sweetback that he has nothing to offer the community, he can only give the people a hype which will bring them a little bit of happiness in their misery, and he cannot offer Sweetback a side-out because the police—"the Man"—has everything. This shows his negative and reactionary side. At the same time he sees his positive and progressive side, because he is operating a withdrawal center where people addicted to drugs can come and dry out. There is no blanket condemnation, he shows the church making a real contribution to the survival of the community.

The Black community must survive

The community's progress is also shown in the transformation of the colored angels. We hear the voices of the community as the police search for Sweetback, but when he reaches the desert we hear the voices of the angels in a dialogue with Sweetback. On the record Malcolm X Peebles refers to this as an opera (an opera is merely a story told in song), and the dialogue between Sweetback and the angels is really Sweet Sweetback's Baddasss Song. In the book Van Peebles refers to the angels first as colored angels, then he refers to them as Black angels. On the record he refers to them as Roggin (spelt backwards) angels. The point is that the angels are against the interests of Sweetback, but they are transformed, because their interests are in fact the same as his. This is the dialogue with the angels, the baddasss song:

If you can't beat me join in
That's what they say
You talkin' bout yesterday
You can't go on like that Sweetback
Not long as your face is black
Yeah I'm Black and I'm Keeping on
Keepin' on the same old way
They helped your mama
They helped your papa
They burnt your papa
Want hop rice
They helped your sister
They helped your brother
They were Doo doo
They burned our homes
They beat our papas
They tricked our sisters
They cheated our brothers
Wont help me
Wont help me
Wont help me
They med your mama
They med your papa
Bad I was bleed em
Use your Black ass from sun to sun
Niggas scared and prudent they don't see
Deep down dirty dog scared
Just give you sweetback
Just like I used to be
Work your Black behind to the game
And you suppose to be mean as hell but you done
You got to Thomas Sweetback
They Med your brother
They Med your sister
Yeah but they would bleed me
Progress Sweetback
That's what he wants you to believe
Go progress Sweetback
He still stopped that huss for 800 years
And he dont intend to for a million
Be sure treat me bad Sweetback
We can make him do as better

Chicken ain't nothing but a bird
White man ain't nothing that a bird
Nigger and mud:
Get my hands on a trigger
You tell me revolution Sweetback
I want get off these knees
You tell me revolution Sweetback
You can't make it on wings
Whole or split Sweetback
We got feet
You cant get away on wings

Niggers got feet

Be beat your brother
Be beat your sister
Your brother and your sister too
How come it took me so long to see
How he got us to use each other

We can see the transformation of the angels if we see the opera in relationship to the scenes in the movie. When he arrives at the desert, the most difficult and lonesome part of his whole trip, the colored angels chaste and ridicule him. They believe, like the gambler, that he is a dead man and it will only be a matter of time until he is caught. So they signify, about how the Man killed his brother and sister, how he blazed his mamma and papa, and how he went to get Sweetback. But Sweetback is determined because he knows they won't help him, they won't bleed him. Why? "I go first!" All he is signifying is that I can deal, and I can survive.

When he was his wine mixed with mud to make the pitch which heals his wounds, the angels begin to change. They see too that he will survive, so they start to become Black. They recognize that they too are like Sweetback, and they point out that they have been treated bad too, but they have been acting like Uncle Toms. Sweetback is going to get his finger on a trigger, get off his knees, and take a revolution. So when he makes the madback, the Black angels begin to tell him to run, they want him to deal now, they don't want him to Tom. They too have been transformed, because Sweetback has increased their positive qualities by showing them it is not necessary to submit all the time. At some point you have got to get off your knees.

Their transformation continues because when the police lassos the hound dogs (some dogs) after Sweetback and he draws his knife, the Black angels begin to sing "This Little Light of mine, I'm goin' to let it shine." This is the first time we have heard this song since Sweetback's baptism into his manhood. He greatly enjoyed the experience, but this first time this song was sung to the way he learned from those women in the house of prostitution; is going to serve him again. They gave him love and strength because he was their future, their liberator, and now their training is going to serve him, now that he is older. The angels are transformed, and Sweetback survives. This brings us to the end of the mouse, and the negation of the negation. At the beginning the community of oppressed was in contradiction with the oppressors. The oppressed were trying to survive, but the oppressors would not permit that, they wanted more. They wanted to bleed them to death and completely dominate them. They wanted to dominate by dividing the community, Sweetback against Moo Moo, Beattie against Sweetback. But this continued oppression led the people to realize that their salvation would only come through unity, and unity would only come through heightened levels of consciousness. So they unify and Sweetback revolts against the oppressors and makes his escape. Many do not believe they will make it, their consciousness is not as high as his. He is reaching for the stars—making it to the border—but they will only take him to the edge of town. Sweetback has his high level of consciousness, that is to say, he is a Sweet Sweetback because he has come to understand that freedom, liberation, and the ability to love requires that first of all you have to recapture the holy grail, you have to restore your dignity and manhood by destroying the one who took it from you. When you do that, even if you do not completely escape, you are a dangerous man, because after the oppressor knows that you will no longer be submissive, therefore ripping off your oppressor is the first step toward freedom and love.

This understanding did not come easily to Sweetback. He attempted to look away from Moo Moo, and then after rescuing him, he attempted to make it on his own, only to be misled by Beattie. This put him in the situation of a revolutionary, in the sense that he knew that he could not find a place of refuge within the system without a whole transformation of the conditions of oppression. I say this because many people think that revolutionaries are made out of some kinds of abstract predicaments. This is not so, they are transformed by a particular set of situations that are sometimes unique to each individual. What brings one person into his revolutionary consciousness is different from what will bring another, but when we reach that point, we realize that we are all united as victims. That is what happened to Sweetback, Moo Moo, Beattie, the angels and the community in the film. That is why the film shows the Black community—all of us. We must understand our unity and also how we must heighten our consciousness.

So I said, we have the negation of the negation. The oppressor who wanted to exploit Sweetback and Beattie, ends up beaten by them because they will take his stuff no longer—the negation of the negation. The contradiction between the community, as represented by Sweetback, and the oppressor, as represented by the dogs, has been resolved.

However each synthesis leads to new contradictions. Right until the end Melvin Van Peebles is signifying and conveying a message to us. What is the new contradiction? Sweetback has killed two dogs, but one is still there, refreshing himself in the water mingled with the blood of the other dogs. If Sweetback got two dogs, who is going to get the other? That is the dog we must down. So the movie ends with the words "Watch Out!". This has a dual meaning. It is telling all the many Sweetbacks across the land to watch out for that third dog and be prepared to deal when he shows up. It also says to the oppressor to watch out for the Sweetbacks across the land, because they are coming to collect some dues. Righteously signifying.

When Bobby and I started the Black Panther Party, we wanted to build the Black community, the love, the sacredness, and the unity we need so desperately. This is still our goal and we try to help the community survive by administering our many survival programs. Sweet Sweetback helps to put forth the ideas of what we must do to build that community. We need to see it often and learn from it.

ALL POWER TO THE PEOPLE
DAVID HILLIARD, CHIEF OF STAFF OF THE BLACK PANTHER PARTY, FALSELY CONVICTED

For over a century now Black People have appeared in America's courts, for one specific or another, in an attempt to make the American judicial system carry out justice for Black People whose lives already prescire are for everyone. And as long and as often as Black People have gone to the American courts for justice it is as long and as deep the frustration of injustice has been. This frustration in the “law’s delay” could be felt when Black people would go to the court to seek justice, as when back in 1856 a Black man (Plessy vs. Ferguson) thought that because he was “free” by the Emancipation Proclamation he could enjoy at least equality under the law by using the same public facilities as white people (in this case, a train) and the Supreme Interpreters of the law of the land, the Supreme Court, told him that writing on paper, even in American law books, did not mean he could do what white folks could do and brought forth a decision that public facilities could be made separably (for Blacks and whites) and certainly not equally. And this frustration has been more frequently and more recently felt as Black People are herded in mass to work in the slave labor camps, sometimes euphemistically called correctional institutions - prisons - in individual cases with all kinds of particulars that mean no more than the enslavement of one more Black body and hopefully a mind.

If we would say or imply that the members of the Black Panther Party have suffered without first mentioning the thousands and thousands of unknown Black who have been paraded before the legal tycoons more or less as the American Court only to be unjustly jailed or killed, we certainly would be negligent in our duty to expose the whole truth or as much as possible about fascist, racist America. However, because members of our Party are singled out for particular examples in the extreme by the U.S. Government, we shall single out the court proceedings against members of our Party in an effort to crystallize these injustices for our People, using our own lives and our own times to bring the public home to the fact that Black People can receive no justice in the American courts, until Black People begin to exercise our rightful authority.

Since the Black Panther Party began, our program has pointed out that if we ever expect an iota of justice from the courts, then we must be tried by juries of our peers. On Sunday, June 12, 1971, this need was never more clearly shown. On that day, the Chief of Staff of the Black Panther Party, Brother David Hilliard, was falsely convicted by a practically all-white, racist jury - none of whom could even resemble one of his peers - or people from the Black community.

David had been originally charged with attempted murder and assault with a deadly weapon, stemming from a police attack against the Black community on April 6th, 1968, in which Oakland police murdered seventeen-year-old Bobby Hutton, another member of our Party. Assault with a deadly weapon usually means that one, in fact, has a weapon - in this case a gun - and that the weapon is fired at someone. D.A. Frank Vakola, who has fanatically been trying all the other Black men arrested on that night in an effort to completely destroy the Black Panther Party, in the height of gall, presented this case against David Hilliard without even having a gun to show the court.

But Vakola knows the nature of the American courts for he is so much a part of it, and he therefore knew that he didn’t have to even find a gun to bring into court against this Black man, David Hilliard, to obtain a conviction. Although the State presented witness after witness, practically all of whom were members of the Oakland Police Department, not one could even say David Hilliard’s name in connection with the incident. They talked about firing their weapons at Black People; they talked about what time it was and what street they were on; they talked about all the other arrests they made. With all that they said they couldn’t even mention that they had seen David Hilliard. Now how can a man not even seen during an incident, who, when later arrested, however, for having been part of the incident, had no gun, be even charged with attempted murder and assault with a deadly weapon.

Nevertheless, David Hilliard was said to be guilty of assault with a deadly weapon upon police officers. The two pigs who claim they were assaulted are the same two that have been appearing again and again in the eight other trials surrounding this incident to say that those men too assaulted them, since in all of these other individual trials they have been witnesses to say that that particular brother had no prior trial assaulted them.

In an effort to appear as though some thought or concern for law was involved here in the jury’s decision, the charge of attempted murder was dropped, and David’s imprisonment will only be for assault with a deadly weapon - time spent being time spent. This racist jury did not deliberate and talk about facts - their justice was blind to facts. The fact that David Hilliard had no weapon and that even Vakola could not produce a weapon to even say that David had was meaningless information to these racists. They delivered what they were supposed to deliver - a legal indictment for all Black People to remember that facts don’t count when you are Black, and especially if you’ve been attempting to fight for the rights of Black People.

To add insult to injury, the court, on the day they brought down this fraudulent conviction, not only denied admittance into the courtroom of everyone except David, his wife, Pat, and his attorney, Vernell Gilliam, but also denied any bail for David while the court ponders and waits three weeks to declare its sentence. They immediately took David to the conveniently-located jail, located in the same building, the Alameda County Courthouse, where he has been since then, awaiting the court’s decision on his sentence. It will be possible at that time to make a motion for appeal and possibly have an appeal bond set, which can be paid in exchange for Brother David.

We know that if even one Black person had been sitting on that jury in David Hilliard’s case, an ounce of justice could have been meted out. But even more, there are not enough Black people sitting on juries across the country to see to it that our People receive something close to a fair trial. Even though we know that the racist oppressor need not use us out of possible jury selection when he can, we can begin to make a move in our interest. We can be on the registered voter’s list, a requirement for jury selection; if called, we can do what is necessary to become a juror, and, we can flood the juries with enough Black People so that injustice will not go unnoticed. We can come to David Hilliard’s next court appearance and demand a re-trial by a jury of his peers. David goes to court again, for sentencing, on July 2, 1971, at 8:15 am in Department 6 of the Alameda County Courthouse, Oakland, California.

THE PEOPLE CAN BE THE JUDGES ALL POWER TO THE PEOPLE
NO JUSTICE FOR JO ETHA COLLIER

Jo Etha Collier, an eighteen year old sister, a young Black woman, was brutally murdered on the night of May 25, 1971 in Drew, Mississippi. She was slain by three white vigilantes, three insignificant tools of this racist government. The much-publicized incident has come as no surprise to Black people. For it has happened countless times to countless other Black people. But it has happened again. The circumstances vary, but these cold-blooded murders are the products of the same group of demented racists. All Jo Etha was doing the day she was murdered was celebrating her graduation from formerly white Drew High School at a cafe with friends. All James Chaney was doing, along with some other students' backs in 1963, was working in a voter registration drive, also in Mississippi, helping to give Black people an opportunity to exercise their right to vote; Medgar Evers was just struggling along with the people of Hayeville, Mississippi, to gain self-determination for that community; and, a few miles from Drew, Mississippi in 1955, 14-year old Emmett Till was lynched, burned and castrated for allegedly whistling at a white woman, parents struggled to provide the best that they could. Her father, Mr. Paul Love, is now incapacitated for work because of water poisoning he contracted while working in the rice fields of the Mississippi Delta. Her mother, Mrs. Love, works as a domestic, earning eighteen dollars a week. Jo Etha was murdered because she was Black, and the oppressor has no respect for the human rights or the lives of Black people. Although the murderous tools have been apprehended, Black people know not to expect justice in any American court. But there can be no justice for Jo Etha, for the things she never did and never knew and could have, for the love she was in the midst of giving. We Black people can only say another and goodbye, for there have been millions of Jo Ethas and sixteen years since Emmett Till, with a promise even firmer to close ranks tighter and organize ourselves better for another bitter lesson learned, and struggle even harder for all of our complete and total liberation, which can come when the racist U.S. Government has instituted the by the racist U.S. Government. Her Power of the People.

STATEMENT TO THE PRESS ON THE RICHMOND, VIRGINIA FIVE

The Black Panther Party brings to the attention of the people of Richmond, Virginia, and America another “conspiracy” case—that of the Richmond, Virginia Five, Charles Brunson and Jacob Bethel of the Washington, D.C. Chapter of the Black Panther Party and three brothers from the Black community of Richmond, Virginia, Julian Underwood, Howard Moore, and his brother Albert, are being charged by the Federal Government in a trumped-up gun conspiracy case.

In New Haven, Connecticut the Government used an insane police informer, George Sams, in an unsuccessful effort to assassinate our Chairman Bobby Seale and Sister Ericka Huggins.

Here in Richmond Virginia, they’re using a known dope addict, who is also a police informer in an attempt to railroad these five courageous brothers who only fought to serve the oppressed people of this community. These brothers and those people who have openly supported them have been harassed and intimidated daily by Federal agents.

Now we see another design in this case. The Government has new-changed the Virginia State Bar to bring charges against the lawyer of the Richmond 5, LeRoy Green, a Black lawyer, by saying that Mr. Green’s conduct was “unprofessional”, because he has involved himself in this case and sought to expose to the people of Richmond the political nature of this trial. If Mr. Green’s license is revoked, the Government will have succeeded in denying these Black brothers their constitutional right to legal counsel of their choice. And this will also expose the racist bar and the racist American court system.

From coast to coast you see the evil scheme of this Government to stop those who love and serve the people. But the recent phony conviction of our Chief of Staff, by a racist jury, the upcoming trial of our Minister of Defense, Huey P. Newton, and the Chicago trial of Chairman Bobby Seale, also the trials of Angela Davis, Richard Mages, the Soledad Brothers, and now the Richmond Five and countless other political prisoners re-affirm our position that there will never be justice in the American courts until the people are the judges.

ALL POWER TO THE PEOPLE! FREE ALL POLITICAL PRISONERS!
