THE PURLOINED LETTER
By EDGAR ALLEN POE

"For here is a mystery on hand," said Mr. Holmes, "and a question for your ingenuity."

"What was it?" said I.

"Nothing," said Mr. Holmes. "It was a question of taste, and, if you will forgive me, I am not averse to this sort of thing."

I was not familiar with the mystery, and was not disposed to ask Mr. Holmes for an explanation. In any case, I was not interested in such matters. I was too busy with my own work to concern myself with what Mr. Holmes might have been up to.

"I see," said Mr. Holmes, "that you are not interested."

"I am not," said I.

"Well," said Mr. Holmes, "I suppose it is of no consequence.

ONE NIGHT WITH THE CITY SOLONS

AFTER THE RUSH

Reprinted from Chicago Daily News

John M. Smyth and Banker Andrew Graham See Money in Wider Halsted St.

The smoky, world-weary little bar at 507 W. Halsted St. is known as "the city solons"—a collection of officials representing the four political machines—because they drop in here of an evening to discuss the day's happenings. But it is not only the politicians who congregate here. There is a gathering of business and professional men

The place is a favorite rendezvous for the local legal celebri- ties. Judges, lawyers, patent lawyers, and syndicate lawyers are always here, so you can see why it is a good place to meet prominent people.
