GERMANY.

The editor of the Frankfurter Volksstimme ("The Voice of the People of Frankfurt") died recently in that city. The little newspaper had a great deal of private work done for it by a firm of printers. The editor was a man of great ability, but he was elected indirectly. It is the first time that this has occurred and makes ten editors of newspapers in the Reich.

BELGIUM.

The Brussels Socialists are indefinite. They are always ready to make a compromise which will bring them, in their own opinion, to an advantageous position. They are not prepared to make any sacrifice of principle in order to gain a position in the government. They are willing to work for the benefit of the working class, but not to the detriment of their own interests.

FRANCE.

The strikes of coal miners in the underground railways in Paris ended about six or seven days ago, in a complete failure. The miners, who started the strike to demand better wages and working conditions, were not able to force the government to grant their demands. The government, on the other hand, refused to make any concessions.

AUSTRIA.

The Socialists have gained a majority in the Diet of Austria, which is now being convened in the capital. The Socialists, who have a majority in the Diet, are determined to fight for the interests of the working class and to demand better conditions for the workers.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Englishmen praise the railway strikes. This question has been long debated in the English Parliament. The government is determined to make sure that the railway workers are paid a living wage and that they are not exploited.

So, the cultivation of this hard condition is only beneficial to the rubber class.

Some Capitalist Contentions.

The capitalists point out that hard and cruel conditions are absolutely necessary for the successful operation of business. They argue that the only way to make money is to make sacrifices. They also contend that if the conditions of labor were improved, the cost of living would increase, which would result in a decrease in the value of money.

Some Clyde laborers were overpaid. They were paid more than the average wage for their work. This overpayment was due to the fact that the company wanted to keep the workers happy and content.

"A labor-farmer: An active trade unionist who will not subscribe to socialism."—Organized Labor Weekly.

We believe in the materialistic conception of history. We believe in the theory of value and surplus-value, which is the means of production in the class struggle and in the historic mission of the proletariat. We believe in the transformation of society and the establishment of the communist society.

Wow! It seems that socialism is born out of discontent of a spirit in a selfish class that hates, envies, maligns and will destroy any political or economic entity in the interest of their scheme of exploitation. It seems that there is not the slightest reflection of the Golden Rule in socialism, because they do not believe in the theory without sacrificing, practically or Christianly.

To those revered gekonfessionists who, affiliated with church organizations, have recently pressed to speak for the laboring masses on such temporal matters as politics, the labor question and the "meas of social justice" would give a charitable warning to keep their hands off. We have not had a union of church and state, nor would we advocate it. We would rather have the knuckles of whoever attempts interference with the free speech of the working class.

Mind gives way to sorrow. Miss, Sproul R. Howard, a society woman of Chicago, was born in the year 1838, the daughter of a clergyman, found dead in the bed of the police by the sight reading aloud a letter from her husband.

We take pleasure in offering the unanswerable argument that "education is better than death." We are upholding the education that the gekonfessionists and every other person in the face of this world that we are not living under the best of all possible systems.

The spirit is to be ardent and intangible—a mere catch phrase and a mere sentiment. We must keep everything in its proper context. We must manifest itself in concrete, material form. We must prove our case. We must show the deprived laborers of a union engaged in an establishment that is actually being made by the eight-hour-day. It is the script to the govt. to the end of the year, to the education and talents to the benefit of his fellows. It touches the spirit of all.

TILLIONS IN DIVIDENDS

The Standard Oil Company begins the twentieth century with a minority example of the money-making possibilities that spring from the combination of labor and capital on a colossal scale. To the little handful of individuals who own practically all the stock of the company, there will be disconsolate on March 26th the annual dividend of the year of $5,000,000, to be paid out of the company's earnings for the first three months of the century.

In the history of the world, there is no parallel for the annual dividend to be paid by the Standard Oil Company. It is an amount such as an estate. It is not expected that the dividend will be paid out of the company's earnings for the first three months of the century. It is not expected, even if there is a surplus, that the dividend will be paid. It is not expected that the company will be able to pay the dividend. It is not expected that the company will be able to pay the dividend.

The State Printing Office

Some of the people who are just now demanding the abolition of the State printing office ought to read up their history a little along these lines. They would find that the State office was established for the express purpose of doing away with a system of corruption that was without parallel. They would find that the printing office was established under the contract system and that it was robbed right and left. The people who are just now demanding the abolition of the State printing office are the same people who are willing to go to the State printing office and pay for the privilege of having the work done and getting the job to the people who want it. The people who are just now demanding the abolition of the State printing office are the same people who are willing to pay for the privilege of having the work done and getting the job to the people who want it.

The Full Dinner Plate

Here, you, the president of the board, is how Matt Hanna remembers the workingman for voting his party into power.

The Industrial Arena

If the idea of industrial combination on the part of the workingman is to be realized, there is reason to believe that country deserves the credit of developing the greatest form of social organization. England was the home of the first "pure capitalistic" society. It was the home of the first "pure capitalistic" society. But it is not the home of the first "pure capitalistic" society. But it is not the home of the first "pure capitalistic" society.

The United Electrical Railways...it is not the home of the first "pure capitalistic" society. But it is not the home of the first "pure capitalistic" society. But it is not the home of the first "pure capitalistic" society.

In demands every day. It demands a lofty courage in defeat and a sincere humility in victory. The character and the spirit of all humanity depends on the presence or absence of a proper sense of proportion in the conduct of human affairs. Hence, the primary task of all government of the people, by the people, and for the people, is to preserve the public welfare. And, everywhere, a golden moment by and the common enemy is rising to strikes.

Despite the rivalry we encounter, despite our lack of a common denominator, we must find a way to live together in peace and harmony. We must find a way to work together in the common interest of the people. And, in the process, we must find a way to promote the public welfare.

Our Imprisoned Comrades
City Prison, San Jose, Feb. 10, 1901.

Dear Comrades: While the comedies are correctly on the stage, and the veritable comedies of the public are more truly known as a matter of fact, we must admit that our situation is not without its limitations. We are in a position to speak to you of things that are not in the news.

The movement, or rather the organization, in this particular case, is not as yet developed into a well-organized, compact, workable body, but is in the process of growth. It is in the hands of many persons in many places, and it is the business of the people to organize and maintain it. We need, I believe, a more intensive study of the principles and issues involved in the movement. There are many obstacles to be overcome, but they are being overcome. On the other hand a common interest is being fostered, and it is the duty of the people to preserve the public welfare.

The label "capitalist" is one that has been used in the past to describe those who are interested in the public welfare. The term "capitalism" is a misnomer, and one that is used to mislead. The true meaning of the word is a system of economic organization that is designed to promote the public welfare.

The movement is not yet as large as it should be. But it is growing steadily. It is making progress. There are many obstacles to be overcome, but they are being overcome. We are in the process of organizing, and we must continue to do so.

The public municipal policies of the Social Democratic Party do not stand, unaltered, at something that they have been at all times influenced by the public welfare. It is the duty of the municipal policies of the Social Democratic Party to stand for the public welfare. It is the duty of the party to stand for the public welfare.

So, when we Social Democrats draft our municipal policies, we do so with the public welfare in mind. We do so with the end in mind. We do so with the idea of making the people of this city, and the nation, better off. We do so with the idea of making the city and the nation better off.

Incidentally, in closing, I want to say that we are working for the public welfare. We are working for the public welfare. We are working for the public welfare.
