REVOLUTION NEEDED IN AMERICAN SCHOOL SYSTEM, SAYS DIRECTOR, WHO BLAMES THOUGHT SUPPRESSION

The real American educational problem does not concern so much the children as it does the adults and the teachers, says Joseph K. Hart, educational director of The Survey, writing in The American Teacher, official organ of the American Federation of Teachers, in exposing the weaknesses of the capitalistic system of education.

"In spite of our fine school houses and our enormous army of teachers and our huge attendance at schools, things do not seem to be going right," the remarks. "We adults stumble about in the world endlessly, with labor wars and national wars as proof that we do not understand what we are doing and what is happening to us. But if we do not understand what we are doing and what is happening to us, how can we educate our children?"

"We build school houses, train teachers, and pass compulsory attendance laws all for the purpose of schooling our children in the modes and mental fashions of a day that is dead, almost everywhere else but in

SOVIET FINDS BILLIONS IN POTASH FIELD

May Break Trust and Get U. S. Trade

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 1.—The enormous deposits of potash recently located in the eastern section of European Russia, along the River Kama, one of the tributaries of the Volga, near the township of Solikamsk, are described by Professor Preobrajenski in a report published in the Pravda on the prospecting work conducted by him in the past year at an expense of $250,000.

More than $12,000,000,000.

The potash deposits were proved at a depth of ninety-two meters over an area of forty square kilometers. Fully half is of first-class commercial quality, ranging between the German Stassfurt potash and that of Upper Alsace. The extent is estimated greater than the latter, which the German experts valued during the peace conference at 12,000,000,000.

Professor Preobrajenski states that the average depth of the deposits and the geological formation makes the extraction easy and cheap. Through the Kama, the Volga and the Martnski Canal a system of cheap transport to Leningrad is assured.

Will Break Monopoly.

High officials of the Supreme Council of National Economy attach great importance to the discovery, particularly as to the German-French potash monopoly is known to be operating at an immense profit, while simultaneously restricting the output.

Would Aid U. S. Cotton Group.

"We have decided," they say "to deal if possible with the consumers of potash, rather than the producers. The United States today is the largest foreign customer of the German potash trust and Russia is the largest potential consumer if our farmers could be supplied" cheaply.

The prospect of the large scale export of potash from Russia to America is of special interest at the present moment when Russia is anxious to buy large quantities of American cotton. Russia could easily absorb $100,000,000 worth of raw cotton annually, it is said, while at the same time it is believed here that American farmers would welcome potash fertilizer at a price from 30 to 40 per cent below the rates of the German-French monopoly.

Foster, Dunne, in Chicago.

Ashland Auditorium will seat at least 4,000 people. The party committee at work on the arrangements for the meeting is preparing to care for that many on November 7th. In addition to two of the foremost orators of the revolutionary movement in this country, William Z. Foster and William F. Dunne, an extensive program of musical and dramatic entertainment is on the program. The character of the latter, in keeping with the spirit of the Russian revolution itself, will be largely of the mass—large choirs and pageants, in which scores will participate.

JAPAN MAY RECOGNIZE CANTON IN ORDER TO PROTECT IRON MINES

TOKIO, Japan, Nov. 1.—That Japan may have to support the Kuomintang claims for China's independence and take sides with the Cantonese in order to preserve vast investments in the Kan-Yeh-Ping iron mines is seen as a result of conferences of financiers.

Mr. Sheng, Chinese director of the mines, in which Japan has invested more than 20,000,000 is in Tokyo seeking a loan of $10,000,000 in order that the mines may remain open. The Japanese treasury doesn't want to advance the loan unless it is sure the mines will be protected.

The Canton army is occupying the territory and offers protection to the mine on condition Japan recognizes them.

The mines are highly valuable to the government, being its chief source of iron.

NEW YORK G. O. P. CAUGHT FORGING W. P. CIRCULAR

Labor Has No Choice Twixt Smith and Mills

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The republican party of New York in a last minute stunt to attack Smith and boost its own labor-hating candidate for governor, Ogden Mills, distributed in the working class quarters of New York on the eve of election a forged leaflet purporting to be a manifesto of the Workers Party calling for the workers to vote for Ogden Mills for governor.

The republican party in this vicious forgery paid double tribute to the Workers (Communist) Party. First, by recognizing the growing influence of the Workers Party over the working class population of New York, and second, by copying word for word the text of an actual election leaflet issued by the Workers Party entitled: "Smith—the Strike-breaking governor."

Cut Out Last Paragraph.

The only change made by the republican party was to cut off the last paragraph in which there was an attack on "the open-shopper Mills" and a call to support the candidates of the Workers Party and to work for a United Labor ticket. In place of this paragraph, the fake republican leaflet declares:

"The power of labor is mighty. Defeat the strike-breaking Smith. But don't throw away your votes by voting for the candidate that can't get elected. The only way to beat the democrat Smith is to vote for the republican candidates. Vote for Ogden Mills for governor. Issued by the Workers Party campaign committee, 108 East 14 street, New York."

Union Label Omitted.

This is only one more and a crowning example to be added to the long list of evidence of unscrupulousness in misleading the masses and of political corruption on the part of the capitalist parties. It is the most laughable one, however, for it gives us a picture of the millionaire open-shopper, Ogden Mills, using Workers Party arguments and the Workers Party's name and prestige among the militant workers in order to fight the strike breaking injunction issuing, democratic candidate for governor.

CHARGE 'FRISCO STRIKE LEADERS WITH MURDER IN FRAME-UP OF OPEN SHOP

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 1.—The second step in the frame-up of the leaders of the San Francisco Carpenters strike against the openshop was taken by the grand jury when indictments were brought against eight in connection with the death of a scab carpenter who is alleged to have been slain with a hammer. The unionists are charged with murder.

Those indicted are: Archibald Mooney, vice-president and Pacific coast organizer of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Paul Clifford, business agent, Albert Moore, Samuel Moore, Christopher O'Sullivan, George Pesce, Gus Madson, members of the union, and John J. Cannon, who is accused of aiding in the "crime."

The arrests and indictments are based on alleged confessions of Pesce and Hadsen, two of the indicted.

The open shop organizations of California have been using every means of breaking the strike, and this case is part of their plot against the union.

REPORTS STORY OF TERROR IN MARIE'S LAND

Daily News Writer Is Telling of Torture

The Chicago Daily News, in its issue of Nov. 1, carries a special cable from Junius B. Wood, its Moscow correspondent, which gives a description of a letter smuggled out of a Roumanian prison written by Boris Stepanov, prominent leader of the Unitarian Trade Union Federation and describing some of the tortures inflicted on political prisoners in Queen Marie's country.

Stepanov, the message states, was arrested in company with others in a recent drive against labor unions in the Kishenev region, Bessarabia. His trial with three students, including a girl, is to be started in Bucharest this week. Wood adds that "a noted Roumanian lawyer" undoubtedly the venerable attorney, Costa-Foru, who defended the five hundred Tatar-Bunar peasants in Kishenev, "has been retained by the defense and has declared his intention to summon the secretaries of war, labor and interior, as well as Bessarabian workers to give evidence."

Beastly Torture.

"As soon as I arrived in prison," quotes Wood from Stepanov's letter, "I was stripped of my clothes by the gendarmes. Two of them, named Gorgescu and Basilescu, held my neck with large iron pincers and started questioning me. They then beat me with rubber clubs until I was unconscious."

BATTLESHIPS OF BRITAIN, ITALY GET FUEL HERE

Recalls Alliance of London with Rome

BULLETIN

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The Executive of the Miners' Federation will submit new proposals to a delegate conference this week, which were agreed upon in a long conference Friday between the General Council of the Trade Union Congress and the Miners' Executive.

What these proposals are is not disclosed, but it is feared that compromise terms yielding to the mine owners' demand for district agreements on wages and hours have been drawn up, with a slight veneer of what is called "national application" behind which the General Council may hide its face from criticism of their betrayal.

ARTICLE I.

By GORDON CASCADEN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 1.—Two royal navies are getting coal from Norfolk and Newport News, the twin ports of Hampton Roads, and Baltimore to keep their fleets prepared to crush any possible labor uprising.

The lengthy British miners' strike forced the proud British admiralty and the fleets of autocratic Italy to get their coal supplies from the world's largest "scab" coal exporting centers.

An Offensive Alliance.

Great Britain and Italy formed a defensive and offensive alliance when the British miners' fight first started six months ago. The secret meeting between Sir Austen Chamberlain, Britain's foreign secretary, and Benito Mussolini, fascist dictator, several weeks ago, merely strengthened that understanding.

When Britain's workers, thru their general strike, started the greatest labor revolt since the Russian Revolution, Mussolini rushed to offer his support to his fascist brothers in the British Isles.

When the British miners continued to defend themselves against capitalist's army, "General" Mussolini, premier of Italy and fascist commander, formed a dual alliance with "General" Stanley Baldwin, premier of Britain and British industrial leader. They planned joint action against a common enemy—international labor.

To Keep Navy Prepared.

General Baldwin wants to keep the British fleet prepared for two particular dangers: He fears that in the war of the classes in Britain that the transport workers may revolt against the orders of their reactionary leaders. They may refuse to unload "scab" coal ships, thereby making it necessary to land marines to protect "scabs" unloading "scab" coal boats from North America. He fears also that marines might have to be used to keep the mines from flooding and to do other maintenance work if maintenance men also go on strike.

So that in any case British navy men

Current Events

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

THE DAILY WORKER continues to warn the American workers with a regularity that may smack of monotony to some people, that the capitalist powers have never abandoned the possibility of a war against the Soviet Union. The three principal reasons why they do not now make a desperate attempt to smash this standing challenge to capitalism are: Firstly, a conviction that their working class populations would not stand for a war against the workers' republic; secondly, the rivalries between the capitalist powers and last but not least, the red army.

THAT the European imperialists are considering ways and means to crush the workers' republic, under the camouflage of "dealing with Bolshevism," is proven by an article by Arthur W. Kiddy of London, that appeared recently in the New York Evening Post. Here is an excerpt from the article: "I discussed recently the European economic and Bolshevik problems with leading financiers and graders, and find a growing conviction that the league of nations' powers are too feeble and slow to deal effectively with Bolshevik influences and it is considered that an indefinite alliance between great countries like Great Britain, Germany and France may yet be necessary to defend civilization."

WHAT audacity those international bandits have to talk about saving civilization; the same gang that engulfed the world in the most terrible war in history, a war that swallowed up over ten millions of human lives and maimed three times that number. Fortunately for the international labor movement the Soviet Union is now so powerful and growing so rapidly in strength that the robber powers will think several times before they decide to make war on Russia. Nevertheless the danger is always present.

ADRY state senator of Illinois found the 18th amendment as profitable materially, as it was spiritually con-

SOVIET UNION'S 9TH BIRTHDAY TO BE OBSERVED

Anniversary of Russian Revolution Greeted

As November Seventh approaches militant workers' minds turn towards the historic achievements of the workers and peasants of the Soviet Union, who will this year celebrate on that date the ninth anniversary of the Russian revolution. The Workers (Communist) Party, which embodies the revolutionary working class struggle in the United States, takes the lead in commemorating this great day as, in other countries, the Communist Parties are likewise the sponsors of similar demonstrations.

Meetings have been arranged in dozens of the larger cities and the smaller towns to the end that American workers can learn of the revolutionary successes of the Soviet workers and share with them the spirit that made these successes possible.

The largest of these meetings will, of course, be held in Chicago and New York. In the former city Ashland Auditorium will be the scene of the rally. In New York three large halls have been retained.

FIFTH NATIONAL CO-OPERATIVE CONGRESS MEETS NOVEMBER 4, 5 AND 6 AT MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The workers and farmers active in co-operative societies in all parts of the country are interested in knowing what kind of men they are going to meet and listen to when they get to Minneapolis November 4, 5 and 6, to respond to the roll call of delegates to the fifth co-operative congress. Here's a partial list of the speakers or leaders who make reports:

The gavel is taken up Thursday morning, Nov. 4, by Dr. James P. Warbasse, president of the Co-operative League since March, 1916.

CEDRIC LONG, executive secretary of the league, went from the ministry into the labor movement back in 1919 when he left his church at Epling, N. H., to take a volunteer job on the Central Strike Committee at Lawrence, Mass. Mr. Long was once beaten up by the police, once jailed, once served a term as manager of the Lawrence local of the Amalgamated Textile Workers of America. He joined the co-operative movement in 1921 and has been with the national office of the league ever since.

HAROLD I. NORDBY, president of both the Northern States Co-operative League and the Franklin Co-operative Creamery Association, is one of the newer comets in the co-operative field. Back in 1919 he was a member of the Milk Wagon Drivers' Union of Minneapolis, when the decision was made to organize a co-operative creamery. Elected as first president of this company in 1920, he has served as chief executive ever since and has watched the business grow from that of half a million the first year to sales of almost $4,000,000 in 1926.

Mr. Nordby is today the president of the largest milk concern in the Twin Cities, and that concern is a workers' co-operative. The presidency of the Northern States Co-operative League means a great deal of active

CHICAGO UNIONS MEET TO DECIDE ON N. Y. RELIEF

Labor Throat Nation Rallying to Aid

The Chicago Federation of Labor has issued a call for presidents and secretaries of all affiliated unions in the city to attend a special meeting Friday night, Nov. 5, for the purpose of discussing what action shall be taken in aiding the strike of the New York cloakmakers.

The meeting will be held at Musicians hall. A meeting of the executive committee of the Chicago Conference for the relief of the strikers will be held Wednesday night, it is announced, when further discussion will be held on ways and means of raising funds.

A definite program of relief will be arranged to coordinate with action taken by the federation unions' meeting, it is announced.

Strike Holding Strong
Reports from the New York strike headquarters indicate that the entire country is rallying to the aid of the cloakmakers. The strike is now entering its eighteenth week and the ranks of the workers are intact and the spirit of the strikers undiminished.

The executive council of the A. F. of L., following instructions of its Detroit convention last week issued an appeal to all international and local unions to send relief funds to the strike area.

Many Cities Respond
Meetings are being held in many cities, with New York and Chicago taking the lead, to present the problems of the New Yorkers before the labor movement.

Baltimore held a rousing mass meeting on Sunday, October 31. Cleveland garment workers have voted a half day's pay immediately to the strike, which will bring about $8,000, and another half day's pay is forthcoming. The Cleveland federation donated $250 from its own treasury, and plans are being made to call a conference of all unions in the city to raise funds.

The needleworkers in Toronto are getting behind the strike, and the conference suggested that all unions vote a day's pay toward the relief fund. The Workmen's Circle and the Verband there have also promised substantial assistance.

Many cities in the far west are rallying to the appeal for funds. Movements are underway in Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, Seattle, Tacoma, Wash., and other cities to raise funds.

Aimee No Puppy in Love Affair Tho She Pens "Wuff" Epistles

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 1.—Two intimate associates of Aimee McPherson, whose first names begin with the letter "E," will be questioned by Dist. Atty. Keyes today, it was reported at Keyes' office this morning. They are Mrs. Elizabeth Frame, alleged "go-between" in the "Miss X" negotiations, and Miss Emma Schaffer, personal secretary to the evangelist.

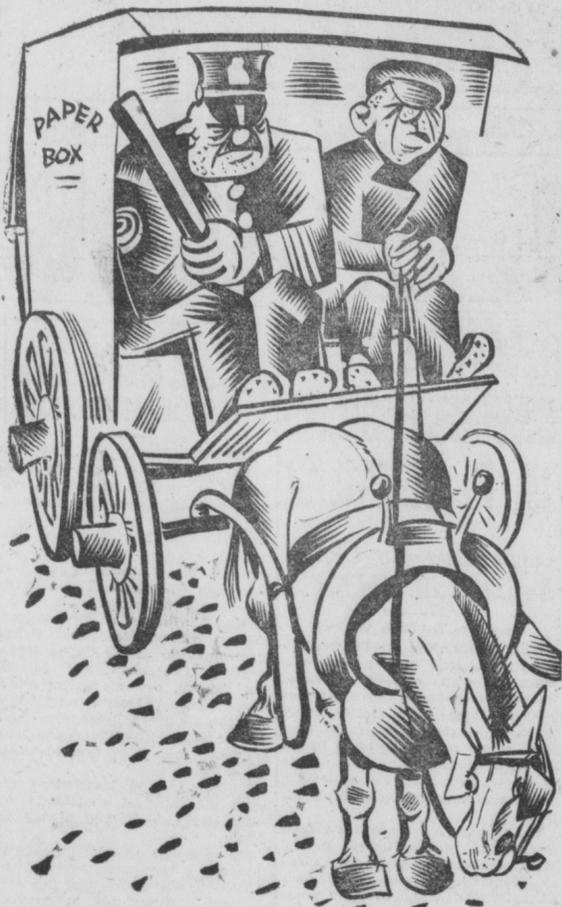

Keyes today reiterated his declaration that the "wuff" love letter, found in New York, and alleged by him to have been written by the evangelist, clinched his case. One sentence in the letter, supposedly written to Ormiston, was considered significant by the district attorney: "I'll be K. O. unless 'E' breaks—and God forbid that happening."

Doheny and Fall May Be Petrified Mummies Before They Are Tried

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Two and a half years after exposure of the "black satchel" transactions between Secretary of the Interior Albert Fall and Edward L. Doheny, which led to Fall's giving Doheny the naval oil reserve in California, counsel for the accused have agreed with the prosecution that the trial should soon begin. Government counsel asked that it start Nov. 22; the defense suggested Jan. 10. Judge Hoehling of the district federal court is to decide the date.

campaign manager and Wm. Green, president of the A. F. of L., with the endorsement of its executive council, circulating every local and central body in the state, in behalf of Walsh, and in a supposedly anti-Butler campaign.

Evenly Divided.
The refusal of the central labor bodies to endorse Walsh was in line with the action taken by the Springfield convention of the Massachusetts state branch of the A. F. of L., which refused to endorse either Coolidge's Butler or millionaire Gaston's Walsh. This refusal was not due to the progressiveness of the convention, but to the fact that both the Butlerites and the Walsh men were pretty evenly divided, with the Butler strength coming from the building trades unions who were fearful of "republican revenge" at the hands of the republican municipal and state politicians who are now in the saddle, and from the street carmen's unions who always have a big delegation at conventions, and who lick the boots of Butler, who besides owning textile mills, is heavily interested in street railway systems.

Conroy a Progressive.
The state branch executive committee of the A. F. of L. with the exception of the progressive Tom Conroy of Worcester, is dominated by Walsh men, and despite explicit instructions by the convention and by their own vote of several weeks ago, the resolution stating that the state convention does not endorse either candidate, and urging organized labor to refrain from endorsing either candidate, has not as yet been sent out to all the local unions—and the campaign is almost over. The withholding of the resolution is obviously a piece of work calculated to aid Walsh. So alarmed are the Walsh labor skates over the rejection of their man, that John Kearney, Walsh's labor manager has decided to tour the state, speaking before the central labor unions that have rejected his candidate. In his talk before the Worcester C. L. U., Kearney cleverly failed to mention that about 15 injunctions were served against labor while Walsh was governor of Massachusetts. He failed to mention Col. Gaston's millions behind Walsh, or that Walsh is the president of one bank and director of another and corporation counsel for the Boston and Maine railroad, etc. Kearney, who is chairman of the Boston C. L. U. non-partisan campaign committee, is himself a democrat and his position as Walsh's manager is sufficient proof that these so-called non-partisan committees are simply auxiliaries to the democratic political machines, who utilized these labor committees like the janitor does a mop which he discards when worn. Jack Walsh of the Railroad Shopmen took the floor to tell of his experience as candidate for mayor on the democratic ticket. The regular democratic bosses managed the campaign and had all the saying, while the local labor movement was used as a sucker in furnishing the candidate and the money as well as the votes, while the regular democratic voters openly declared they would rather vote for republican candidate for mayor or scratch their ballots rather than vote for a labor man.

Shameful Betrayals.
Despite such shameful betrayals we witness the same treachery going on in this state. John Jerry Hodgson, ex-legislative agent for the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor, who in the course of his duties, time and again argued, debated and fought against William M. Butler before hearings, in committee rooms and elsewhere at the state house when Butler was a member of the Massachusetts legislature, is now stumping the state in behalf of his erstwhile enemy, Wm. M. Butler. But Kearney and the rest of his tribe who are boosting Walsh, are not doing it for love or in the interests of the labor movement, either.

In a scathing denunciation of Kearney and the rest of the labor fakers who sell themselves and bind the labor movement to the chariots of the capitalist political parties, William Haskings, eulogized Eugene V. Debs and contrasted Debs with the so-called labor leaders who sell themselves for a mess of pottage to the capitalist class. But the most militant and class conscious note was sounded in the speech of Secretary Thomas F. Conroy who finished by demanding that labor cease being the tail to capitalism's political kite and organize a labor party.

Ignore Organizing Textile Workers.
With conditions in the textile industry in Massachusetts in a most deplorable state, and the textile workers unorganized and disunited, the United Textile Workers' union, instead of sending an army of organizers into the state for the purpose of organizing the exploited textile workers, sends into Massachusetts five organizers to campaign for Walsh. These organizers of the U. T. W. are going to remain here only for campaign purposes and leave the state upon the conclusion of the campaign.

Violent Earthquake Recorded.
ST. LOUIS, Nov. 1.—An earthquake of "violent proportions" was recorded on the seismograph at St. Louis University last night, Father McElwane, seismologist, reported today. The tremor lasted 45 minutes, starting at 7:45 p. m. and ending at 8:30 p. m. The distance was estimated at 2,190 miles in a northwesterly direction, which would place its center off the coast of British Columbia.

MURDERER HAS FAITH IN "GOD" AND IN POWDER

Rev. Norris Up Before on Arson Charges

CRIMINAL DISTRICT COURT, ROMM, Ft. WORTH, Tex., Nov. 1.—Alleging that the catholic church and individuals of great power have conspired to get him "hung" for his killing of D. E. Chipps, lumberman, Rev. J. Frank Norris, pastor of the First Baptist Church here, exploded a bomb in the prosecution camp today by asking for a change of venue. It came as a complete surprise and took the prosecution offits feet.

Norris is charged by indictment with having murdered Chipps July 17 in the pastor's study.

Norris Noted Lunatic.
Today is not the first experience of Rev. Norris in a courtroom, or the Chipps killing not the first time he has been known to use a gun.

In 1912 he was accused of arson in the burning of his home. Later he was indicted on charges of burning his church. He also was accused of perjury in connection before a grand jury which investigated the home burning. He was acquitted on the perjury case on an instructed verdict, and was acquitted on one of the arson charges. The other was dismissed for insufficient evidence.

Slapped Preacher's Face.
Several years ago Rev. Norris had some trouble with the late Bob Poe, veteran Fort Worth constable. Poe met the preacher on the street one day and slapped his face.

Norris pulled a gun and marched the constable to the church, where he kept him prisoner for some time, during which he talked matters over with Poe. At one time, also, he was shot by a cattle rustler who attacked his father.

Rev. Norris repeatedly has told of the necessity of his having to have gunmen to protect him.

hours later, they demanded the addresses of my friends and, when I refused to give them, the beating with the rubber clubs was resumed. My hands were placed in iron clamps and burned with red hot irons and then the clamps were screwed into my wrists until I fainted. I was thrown into a dungeon until the following morning.

Only Part of Story.
The Daily News correspondent also mentions the case of Pavel Katchenko who was assassinated while being transferred from one prison to another, details of which have been previously reported in THE DAILY WORKER. These two typical cases mentioned by the Daily News are but an infinitesimal part of the Roumanian terror that has been responsible for the murder of not hundreds, but thousands of workers and peasants and that, at the time Queen Marie is making her triumphal and loan procuring tour of the United States, holds no less than 2,500 political prisoners in the jails of that sorry country.

Railroad and Flour Kings Fete Marie.
ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 1.—The railroad and flour magnates of the Twin Cities are having the time of their aristocratic lives being host to a real queen. At a luncheon today in St. Paul at the home of Louis Hill, son of the "Empire Builder," James Hill, the Washburns, Crosby's, Pillsburys and the whole family of northwestern capitalist wheat and railroad kings and queens were duly staggered by the queen's crown jewels displayed at table and drank a toast to King Ferdinand prior to a toast for their own Cal Coolidge.

The queen is officially the guest of Samuel Hill, former president of the Great Northern and a member of the Hill family. It is at his expense that Marie has been furnished with her luxurious special train and due to his influence that the train is carried over the various railroad lines at the nominal cost of $1.00 a road. The royal lady leaves for North Dakota where she will "study the lives of the farmers" by having a couple board her train here and there and talk about chickens and wheat.

Civil Liberties to Aid Injunction Fight of N. Y. Cloakmakers

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—If improvement is not marked on the picket line of the striking New York cloakmakers after the mass protest meeting of the American Civil Liberties Union the organization announces it will conduct a picketing demonstration to bring a test case under the injunction into court. Wolcott H. Pitkin, New York attorney with the union, states that police evade the injunction issue by arresting pickets for disorderly conduct, not contempt of court. He charges that the injunction is a strike-breaking measure and has led to similar injunctions almost outlawing strikes in Poughkeepsie and Baltimore, where New York manufacturers have opened non-union shops.

Battle Many Obstacles in Struggle for Labor Unity in the Pacific

By J. LOUIS ENGDahl.

GREAT obstacles confront the ambitious plan to hold a Pan-Pacific Trade Union Conference at Canton, China, May 1, 1927.

Not the least of these is the color question, that must be overcome in order to bring together the white, brown and yellow workers of the nations bordering the world's greatest ocean.

That this issue must be fought out before any successful conference can be held was seen in the attitude of some sections of the Japanese labor movement, objecting to the gathering being held at the capital of the revolutionary government of South China.

Delegate J. S. Garden, of the New South Wales Labor Council, reporting as secretary of the Third All-Australian Trade Union Congress, declared that the majority of invitations to the Japanese workers' organizations had been returned. The Japanese government announced to the Australian labor officials that it refused to deliver them. The invitations were addressed mostly to the Japanese Rado Kumiai Hyogikai (generally called Hyogikai). The labor organizations affiliated with this central body total 46 unions, having an estimated membership of about 30,000.

It is pointed out that this section of the Japanese working class unites the "left" or revolutionary elements in the trade union movement of Japan. The vicious police regulations, brought into being under labor baiting laws adopted by Mikado rule, are so extreme that trade unions with the merest left wing tendencies, have to work and meet semi-legally. This section, however, is expected to give its hearty support to the purpose of the Pan-Pacific Conference and every effort will no doubt be made to develop the closest possible contact with it.

The other section of the organized Japanese labor movement, termed the Sodomel, under the leadership of Susuki, somehow received the invitation of the Australian workers, but turned it down under the plea that the Australian trade unions believed in the White Australia policy. The trade union officials point out that this is the policy of the Labor Party, that this policy is not supported by the trade unions, and that this issue must not be raised as an obstacle to Pan-Pacific Trade Union Unity. This section of the Japanese labor movement will no doubt raise the same question against the American Federation of Labor, revealing the inevitable clash that must take place when labor elements in different countries acquiesce in the imperialist policies of their own capitalist governments.

instead of waging labor's battles on the basis of the class struggle.

It will be an eventful day in international labor history when worker representatives from Japan, Australia, China and the United States sit down in the same conference and talk over their problems as members of the world labor movement; it is hoped that that day will be May 1, 1927, at Canton, China.

Labor in Java, a subject colony of Holland, has always been known for its militancy. While Holland is heralded as one of Europe's boasted capitalist "democracies," the imperialists of this puppet nation have drowned in blood the workers' movement in Java. It now leads an illegal existence similar to that of the Japanese labor movement.

The story is repeated almost in whole for India, where the ruthless measures adopted by the British government to crush the great strikes that have taken place in this colony of the crown have required the whole attention of India's militant working class.

Mexico pleads poverty. But it has answered the invitation of the Australian workers. The Mexican Miners' Union has also replied. They pledge co-operation to the full extent of their ability. The workers of Mexico can be depended on to push their officials into active participation in the effort to secure Pan-Pacific Trade Union Unity. The same may be said concerning at least some of the countries of Central and South America.

One of the great inspirations that will help insure the success of the gathering is the rapidly developing trade union movement of China.

It is recognized that it will be most difficult to get the American Federation of Labor into action. The A. F. of L. officialdom only enters where it hopes to dominate. The imperialist policies of the present A. F. of L. leadership will certainly receive short shrift in the proposed Canton conference. The policies of the Greens, the Wolls and the Duncans will be on the carpet and not in the saddle at Canton. This will be true whether regular delegates speaking for the A. F. of L. officialdom are in attendance or not. The Australian Trade Union Congress has undertaken a tremendous task. Workers everywhere, who seek to advance the interests of their class, will wish them every success in their drive for unity of the workers in the nations bordering the Pacific. This should include an increasing number of workers in the United States of America anxious to give their support to this ambitious project.

DEFENDS LEGAL LIMITATION OF LAND HOLDINGS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—Refusal of the Filipinos thru their legislature at Manila to repeal the land laws, under which no more than 2,500 acres can be owned by any one individual or corporation, is defended by Vicente G. Bunuan, director of the Philippine Press Bureau in Washington, in a statement on the rubber situation.

He frankly says that the desire of American capitalists to exploit the rubber-producing possibilities of the Philippines is one of the chief obstacles to the granting of independence to his people.

The Filipinos, says Bunuan, want to help the Americans to solve their rubber supply problem. But they know, as all other peoples know, that "that country is happiest and most peaceful which has its national wealth evenly distributed."

This policy "reflects the conservative era of America's history, and was implanted in the Philippines by congress itself when it passed the Philippine organic act of 1902, which contained provisions even more restrictive than those in the present law." He points out that rubber can be grown successfully on tracts smaller than the present law allows, and that there is no reason why a rubber company should not secure supplies of raw material from owners of adjacent tracts, just as the sugar centrals buy millions of dollars' worth from sugar owners, under contract.

MINING BARON CALLS DEMOCRAT SENATOR CROOK

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 1.—Uneasy stirrings were manifest in the democratic party today following the testimony of James S. Douglas, mining capitalist, that he had spent more than $60,000 in furthering the campaigns of democratic candidates.

The admissions were made by Douglas as he testified before the inquiry being conducted by Senator William King of Utah.

Douglas created a sensation when he called Senator Cameron a crook. When Cameron protested to Senator King, Douglas advanced toward him, shaking his fist and berating Cameron for championing a copper tariff bill.

Douglas also testified he had spent probably $50,000 in supporting the unsuccessful primary candidacy of E. E. Ellingwood, mining corporation attorney, who was defeated by Governor Hunt for nomination.

LaFollette Issues Statement.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 1.—U. S. Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., and his brother, Philip, issued a statement today that they would not support any of the announced candidates for governor in tomorrow's election, but would write in their choice. Ira S. Lorenz, campaign manager for the LaFollette ticket in the primary, who announced support for Charles B. Perry for governor, had no authority to speak for the organization, but only for himself, the statement added.

Another "Investigation."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—The interstate commerce commission today ordered an investigation of the proposal of the railroads for a general readjustment of freight rates on pig iron and articles taking the same rate between points in Central Freight Association territory, which would result in numerous increases and reductions in the rates.

BRITISH NAVAL FORCES SHOWN EMPIRE ENVOYS

LONDON, Oct. 31.—The British admiralty threw a little party in the English channel yesterday afternoon for the benefit of the delegates to the empire conference. Participating in the party, were fifty warships, the cream of the British navy.

The admiralty did not go to the trouble and expense of putting on the show in order to provide an afternoon's entertainment for the guests. The reasons were deeply political.

Empire's Sun Setting.
There is a growing feeling thruout the world that the British empire's sun is setting. The uneasiness in some of the dominions may be attributed to the common disinclination to be hitched on to a dying body. To show the dominion envoys that the lion is not toothless by any means the British government ordered the admiralty to call out the war dogs. In case any or all of the dominions are threatened by a foreign foe those war dogs could bite as well as bark.

Then there is another reason. South Africa is talking too much about independence to suit Downing St. South Africa had better not get too fresh. This is the meaning of the display of naval force in the channel.

soling. It seems that those who were most active in putting over the dry amendment found remunerative positions enforcing the law. And they enforced it for a consideration. Our bone-dry senator pulled down the tidy sum of $23,000 for using his influence with the prohibition director to secure permits for wine dealers at so much per gallon. Those wine dealers had to be rabbis with cognateations. But some of those rabbis bore such Hebrew names as O'Toole and MacPiggin and got away with it because they handed out the coin.

THE scorn that was once hurled at the liquor dealer is now brewed at the Anti-Saloon League. It has come to the point now where a prohibitionist is looked on with as much suspicion as a christian in Turkey. At least I once heard a rationalist (who was everything but that) tell a story of a visitor to Turkey who, noticing that the Turks did not lock their doors expressed his surprise to his guide. "Don't you fear robbers?" he asked. "Why no," answered the Turk, "there is no need for taking such precautions. There is not a christian within one hundred miles of here."

STILL it is funny to see George E. Brennan, waging his campaign from a hospital cot and waging it very well. George is no Apollo. He is the living personification of a beer barrel. Had George faced the voters, in all probability they would have turned around and voted for the Andy Gump-chinned Frank L. Smith. Fat men are not in style any more, and Brennan has more chins than you could count on the fingers of both hands. But the funniest thing about the bed sheet campaign is that (according to rumor) it was Brennan's wooden leg that got scratched. If that is the case and George is elected, there may be a plague of wooden-legged candidates in the next elections. Anyhow it is more pleasant to talk to the voters in your nightshirt that climb the front porch to get them.

THE queen of Roumania is out of luck in Canada. Even the coyotes of Manitoba do not howl for her. The reason is that Canada has seen everything in the aristocratic line from the prince of Wales to J. H. Thomas, political secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen. If the queen wants to see human beings doing the snake act in earnest she had better come to Chicago quick. Our four hundred are ready to wiggle down Michigan boulevard on their bellies to show how low they consider themselves in the presence of a queen. Glorious democracy!

THE three readers of THE DAILY WORKER who vowed they would read it no more because they thought we did not do the right thing by our Aimee, should repent of their hastiness now. If anything ever hung by a hair it is the evangelist's reputation. The religious confidence woman lied her way brazenly but not successfully thru a lengthy trial and as if her god was nodding when he should be watching over the fortunes of his child, a trunk load of wearing apparel that was toted around the country by her radio operator was seized. The Hearst press did not have so much fun since it ran the diaries of "Peaches," one for and the other against "Daddy" Browning. They spread pictures of pajamas and kimono all over the papers. If there are any evangelists left that have not been caught in some naughty actions let them come forward and clear themselves!

We will send sample copies of THE DAILY WORKER to your friends—send us name and address.

CANTON ARMY CONSOLIDATES SOUTH CHINA

Prepares Base for a Further Advance

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—What is developing behind the thick curtain of diplomatic secrecy and internal intrigue in China since the start of the advance of the Cantonese forces toward Shanghai from Hankow is not clear even to state department officials. Reports of movements of the northern militarists are conflicting.

But the general drift of second-hand information is that the Canton nationalist government is steadily extending its authority thru all the provinces south of the Yangtze, while "mopping up" the scattered opposition forces still in the field.

Reactionaries Routed.
Marshal Sun Chuan-fang, reactionary, who controlled Shanghai and five eastern provinces two months ago, has seen his army of 60,000 to 90,000 troops melt away into a mere ghost of its former power. His lieutenants have in many cases surrendered to the nationalists or have disappeared.

Chang Tso-lin, lord of Manchuria with Japan's assistance, remains in the north and is apparently ready to retreat from Peking and all territory south of Manchuria whenever the nationalists push northward from the Yangtze.

Japan May Turn to Canton.
Nor is Chang Tso-lin sure of Japanese support in case his domain is invaded. Japan is gaining a large share of the foreign commerce at Canton, formerly held by the British. Japanese policy may easily turn to recognition of the nationalists in payment for trade advantages in all of China, thereby leaving Chang Tso-lin to be driven from Manchuria by the superior arms of the Cantonese. But this possible development is not anticipated before six months or a year.

Imperialists Have Hopes.
Foreign interests in China that are threatened by the rise of the nationalist power now rest their hopes of a return of the reactionaries upon one factor—the Chinese habit of betrayal of one leader by another. They skeptically predict that the nationalists will soon quarrel among themselves and the unity of their movement be broken to bits.

UNITED STATES FORWARDS PLOT UPON NICARAGUA

Bosses Native Puppets and Bulldozes Nation

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Nov. 1.—So far as a formal victory goes, United States imperialism is elated at getting Emiliano Chamorro, the unpopular dictator of Nicaragua, to resign. Not because the U. S. didn't want him. On the contrary, he was their willing servant, and his resignation is only another evidence of it.

Resignation Only a Trick.
The revolt against Chamorro made his position untenable any longer. The U. S. sought to prevent the seating of the constitutional president, Bautista Sacasa, and to save their own interests by going through the pretense of an election "to choose a new president."

The U. S. charge d'affaires, Lawrence Dennis, is, however, the one who is to name the new president, and all the election is not held yet, it is announced that one of Chamorro's lieutenants, Adolfo Diaz, will be the new president.

U. S. Will Recognize Its Lackey.
Dennis also announces that the United States will recognize Diaz as soon as the "election," controlled by Chamorro's conservative party, will be over. The election is for a congress, who elects the president.

But all this pretty scheme may be upset if the liberal party revolution scores a victory in its armed struggle for constitutional government. However, the United States has threatened to land a large force of marines to dominate the situation.

CLOUDS SPOIL MARS TESTS BY LONDON GAZERS

Attempt at Radio Talks With Martians Fails

LONDON, Nov. 1.—The planet of Mars today remains as far distant and as much a mystery to the dwellers of the earth as ever. The attempts by professional and amateur astronomers of London to gain telescopic insight into the Martian life were generally unsuccessful, as were the radio experiments.

Heavy clouds interfered with the majority of astronomical observations from London and other parts of England during the night. Some dark markings on the surface of the distant planet were distinguished, but all lesser markings were indistinct or almost wholly invisible most of the time.

Radio Fails.
All efforts to catch radio signals from Mars apparently were unsuccessful, including those of Doctor Robinson, psychic expert who handed in a message, in what was supposed to be the Martian language, to a radio company for transmission to the planet. It evoked no reply. The message was sent out from the Rugby radio station over a wave length of 10,240 meters.

Spiritist Tries.
Doctor Robinson said he was very much disappointed that he had not received a reply from the Martians in answer to his message. "Last year I had radio communication with the planet," he said, "sending and receiving messages while I was in a trance. I understand the Martians' language, which is a language of the brain."

Planet Changed.
GENEVA, Nov. 1.—Astronomers report that the Mars of today is quite different from the Mars observed two years ago. Professor Schaer of the Jungfrau Joch Observatory reports that, "Mars is a changed planet and now presents a very luminous pale yellow disc with its equatorial continents a dark brown color while the polar cap, which was very small in August, has now nearly disappeared."

Copper Monopoly in Exports Asks to Be Exempt from U. S. Law

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Papers have been filed by the Copper Exporters, Inc., of 25 Broadway, New York, with the federal trade commission for exemption from the anti-trust laws in the exporting of copper and copper products from the United States. This exemption is permitted under the Webb-Pomerene export trade act.

C. F. Kelley of Anaconda Copper is president of the new trust, whose stockholders or members are: American Smelting and Refining Co., Inspiration Consolidated Copper Co., Mother Lode Coalition Mines Co., Nevada Consolidated Copper Co., New Cornelia Copper Co., Utah Copper Co., Anaconda Copper Mining Co., American Metal Co., Ltd., Nichols Copper Co. and United Verde Copper Co.

This combination was created to maintain the high retail cost of copper in the United States by limiting the domestic supply thru systematic exportation of surplus for dumping on foreign markets.

Tokyo to Retaliate Against Unfriendly Foreign Countries

TOKYO, Japan, Nov. 1.—The alien land law recently passed that provides that only aliens whose government allows Japanese to own land, can own land in Japan, will go into effect on Nov. 10, it was decided by the cabinet.

The law now gives the government power to discriminate against nations that are discriminating against Japanese nationals.

ALBERTA WHEAT POOL SHOWS AN EXCELLENT GAIN

Rapid Growth Shown in Members and Business

By SCOTT NEARING, Fed. Press.
WINNIPEG, Nov. 1.—Canadian wheat pool farmers have closed another banner season, during which the Central Selling Agency disposed of 190,000,000 bushels of wheat. The last dividend on the 1925 crop, which has just been paid, totaled $8,500,000 or 2½ cents per bushel.

Get Good Prices.
Wheat pool members thus received, for the 1925 crop, an initial payment of $1, two additional payments of 20 cents each per bushel and the final payment, making a total for No. 1 northern wheat of $1.42½ per bushel. This is considered by the farmers an excellent return as the 1925 crop was a large one.

During the three years of their existence the wheat pools have handled: 1923 crop, 34,000,000 bushels (the Alberta pool alone); 1924 crop, 81,500,000 bushels (Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba), and 190,000,000 bushels of the 1925 crop for the three provinces, or more than double the quantity handled in the previous year. Membership in the pools has increased from 79,700 in July, 1924, to 127,200 members in July, 1925.

Buy Elevators.
Last year the pools inaugurated the policy of securing elevators by the simple process of deducting 2 cents per bushel on all grain handled for elevator purposes. This elevator fund has been used to secure 30 local elevators in Manitoba, 33 elevators in Alberta and 575 in Saskatchewan, or a total of 638 for the three pools. These elevators, like the other property of the pools, is paid for in cash; hence there are no bonds or mortgages.

In addition to the local elevators, the pools have terminal elevator facilities for handling 20,020,000 bushels of wheat at a time. With a small enlargement of these terminal facilities and quick turnover the pools will be able to handle their entire product.

Says U. S. Shipping Strength Inadequate for Present Business

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 1.—While other nations are clamoring for shipping strength, America's merchant marine is capable only of carrying 30 per cent of her commerce and not the 50 per cent specified by congress, T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the shipping board declared today at a hearing on merchant marine matters.

FASCISTI SEARCH OUT REFUGEES FROM RULE IN FRANCE, EXTRADITE AND MURDER COMMUNIST WORKERS

By LOUIS DE PHILLIPS.
(Special to The Daily Worker)
MONTE CARLO. (By Mail).—The fascist hydra is not satisfied with its prey, a whole nation at its mercy, thousands of valiant working men and women crowding the royal prisons, numberless martyrs fallen under its fire and daggers. These are considered a trifle by the Italian fascist bourgeoisie. More proletarian blood must be shed and more victims must be added, and therefore they are resolved to operate even outside the national borders, wherever a trace of opposition to their bloody regime is found.

To this purpose, Mussolini, idol of the Italian bourgeoisie and symbol of life for Italian capitalism, has spread a net beyond the Italian frontier for vigilance over the hundreds of thousands of Italian refugees distributed in the greatest part over the French territory.

Fascist agents are to be found wherever Italian workers are encountered. They receive instructions and orders from Rome thru the intermediary of the Italian consuls. The Italian consulates are regular agencies for espionage as well as for persecution and signaling of the refugee's conduct and activities.

All that is diplomatically possible is done to obtain the extradition of active revolutionaries. For this purpose they inculcate them for crimes simply invented by the Italian authorities. If a frame-up is impossible, and the repression of an individual is deemed necessary, a punitive expedition is made across the border.

Murder Comrade.
Only recently, at Nice, in the proximity to the Italian frontier, a young comrade, Mazzari, was shot down in cold blood by a group of fascists, while he was walking with his fiancée, Theresa Milano. The girl was wounded by a bullet as she ran for aid.

The comrade was an active militant of the working class and loved by those who knew him. His murder had been ordered in Italy to "form an example."

In accusing him, his assailants asked but a brief question: "Have you finally decided to wear a black shirt?" "Noyer," he answered.

It is then that the murderers pulled out their guns and shot him.

Press Suppresses Slaying.
The French bourgeois press, under the pretext of not wanting to "disturb the action of the police," does not mention a word about the murder.

But the worker population is indignant and more categorically than ever they demand the expulsion of the fascists from French territory.

On the contrary, the national blue shuts its eyes in regard to fascists, while, obeying the desires of the duce, it deports Italian workers incessantly.

This fact points out the necessity of the workers of all countries to unite against the united front of the bourgeoisie.

Rumors of Ferdinand's Illness Are Persistent

BERLIN, Nov. 1.—Rumors of the illness of king Ferdinand still persist in Bucharest, notwithstanding official denials and the king's own cablegram to the Queen stating he was in good health, according to dispatches received here today.

The rumors were given new impetus by the fact that the King was not present at ceremonies held on the occasion of the Queen's birthday. This however was explained by officials by the statement that the king's physician had ordered him to take a prolonged rest and not participate in public functions.

Workers (Communist) Party

WORKERS COMMUNIST PARTY ISSUES STATEMENT ON THE SITUATION IN THE COMMUNIST PARTY OF SOVIET UNION

The resolution adopted by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America on the situation in the Communist Party of the Union of Soviet Republics and the withdrawal of Comrade Gregory Zinoviev from work in the Communist International is as follows:

THE Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party has on two occasions expressed its support of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union in the struggle against the opposition led by Comrades Trotsky and Zinoviev. It has endorsed and reaffirms its endorsement of the general line of policy of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union as against that of the opposition, for development of the Socialist economic system in the Soviet Union and also condemned the effort of the opposition in organizing systematically a factional opposition within our Russian brother Party. It considered these activities the more destructive and subject to condemnation, because the position of Comrade Zinoviev as president of the Communist International made his un-Leninist attitude in breaking the discipline of the Party a bad example which can only have a destructive influence in all the affiliated Parties of the Comintern.

The Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party saw in the actions of Comrade Zinoviev a course unworthy of a disciplined member of any Communist Party, and certainly incompatible with the duties of the president of the Communist International.

While the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party welcomed the fact that the opposition led by Comrades Trotsky and Zinoviev have now recognized the danger of their course and acknowledged their error in so far as the breaches of discipline are concerned, their belated recognition of their mistake in this respect cannot serve to excuse their actions.

The Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, therefore, approves the withdrawal of Comrade Zinoviev by the Communist Party of the Soviet Union as a delegate to the Communist International. The leaders of our Communist International must be free from the blemish of conscious un-Leninist behaviour. The Executive Committee of the Communist International must be free of undisciplined and therefore harmful elements.

The Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party sees in the actions of the Plenum of the Central Committee and the Control Commission of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union against the leaders of the opposition, Comrades Zinoviev, Trotsky, and others a well earned censure for their disruptive behaviour. It expresses sincere hopes that these comrades will heed the warning and will in the future conduct themselves as disciplined members of the Communist International.

The unanimity with which the ECCI approved the action of the Plenum of the Central Committee and the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union against Comrades Zinoviev, Trotsky and others is an effective challenge to the lies of the capitalist press and its lickspittles, the Social Democrats who attempted to picture the struggle of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union for unity as a fight of Comrades Stalin and Bukharin for, and Comrades Zinoviev and Trotsky against the liquidation of the Communist International. The procedure of the Plenum of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and of the Executive Committee of the Communist International against the opposition in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union is proof of the inner strength and determination of victory of the Communist International.

In view of the failure of the opposition in the Communist Party of the Soviet Union to abandon their un-Leninist orientation the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party of America feels in duty-bound to join the Communist Party of the Soviet Union in an ideological struggle within its own ranks against these deviations, and to help unify the whole Communist International behind the Leninist principles and tactics of its leader, the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

While the Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party welcomed the fact that the opposition led by Comrades Trotsky and Zinoviev have now recognized the danger of their course and acknowledged their error in so far as the breaches of discipline are concerned, their belated recognition of their mistake in this respect cannot serve to excuse their actions.

The Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party, therefore, approves the withdrawal of Comrade Zinoviev by the Communist Party of the Soviet Union as a delegate to the Communist International. The leaders of our Communist International must be free from the blemish of conscious un-Leninist behaviour. The Executive Committee of the Communist International must be free of undisciplined and therefore harmful elements.

The Central Committee of the Workers (Communist) Party sees in the actions of the Plenum of the Central Committee and the Control Commission of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union against the leaders of the opposition, Comrades Zinoviev, Trotsky, and others a well earned censure for their disruptive behaviour. It expresses sincere hopes that these comrades will heed the warning and will in the future conduct themselves as disciplined members of the Communist International.

WORKERS SCHOOL PREPARES PARTY FUNCTIONARIES

Courses Are Designed to Develop Leaders

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The core of the large number of courses offered by the New York Workers' School this year is to be found in the group of courses that have been designated, "Elementary Party Training Course," and the group entitled, "Advanced Party Training Course." They are especially designed to train party functionaries; to raise the theoretical level of the party membership and to prepare workers for proper service to the labor movement.

Training Needed. The Workers Party has entered into a period of increased and intensified activity. After a period of defeat and isolation, it has won several notable successes, is breaking down the isolation from which it suffered and is now actually engaged in organizing workers, leading certain strikes and developing progressive blocs in their important unions as well as taking part in various united front movements.

All these matters place new responsibilities upon members of the party.

They are called upon to make swift decisions on practical matters of policy—decisions implying both a knowledge of our fundamental doctrine and of the concrete problems in found in a proper theoretical training combined with the requisite practical experience.

Prepare Leaders. Another cause of the special importance of the combination party training courses is the fact that the party reorganization has created a great need for additional functionaries since the new form of organization requires many more functionaries than did the old. Therefore the school is bending all its energies towards the training of such functionaries.

The party training courses include the following combinations: Elementary Party Training Course—Marxism-Leninism, B. D. Wolfe, instructor; History of the American Communist Party, William W. Weinstein, instructor; American Communist Party Organization, Jack Stachel, instructor; Theory and Practice of Work in Trade Unions, Benj. Gitlow, instructor; American Economic and Political History, D. Benjamin, instructor; History of the American Working Class, Arthur C. Calhoun, instructor; Elements of the Marxian Economics, instructor to be announced; American Labor Problems, a symposium course.

Advanced Party Training Courses—America Today (Problems of Marxism in America), Bertram D. Wolfe; Theory and Practice of Work in Trade Unions, Benjamin Gitlow; History of the Comintern, W. W. Weinstein; History of the American Working Class, Arthur C. Calhoun; Communist Party Organization, Jack Stachel; Historical Materialism, J. Mindel; Advanced Marxian Economics, Harry Wicks.

Starts in November. All of these courses are starting during the first two weeks in November and workers should register now any afternoon or evening at the school or send for free catalog to Bertram D. Wolfe, Director of the Workers' School, 106-108 E. 14th Street, New York City.

Power Company Using Insurance Scheme as Collaboration Ba

SEATTLE, Nov. 1.—(FP)—Manifestation of the spirit of communism is revealed in the recent action of the Puget Sound Power & Light Co. in taking out a group insurance policy involving approximately $5,400,000 covering 3,000 of its 3,600 employees. The company pays part of the premium for each employee. The policies provide for permanent disability and old age pensions. It is stated that no compulsion will be exercised in signing up the workers.

The Puget Sound company is one of the largest electric light and power monopolies in the northwest. It has an agreement with the electricians' union covering linemen and a limited number of skilled workers.

SCIENTISTS NO LONGER CREDIT MARTIAN BEINGS

Astronomers Dismiss old Fantastic Notion

While genuine scientists no longer concern themselves as to the existence of intelligent life on the planet Mars, that have into clear view to their telescopes Tuesday and Wednesday, they are still conjecturing about the possibility of plant life on the little world.

The sensational fantasies concerning "human life" on Mars concocted by pseudo-scientists and fiction writers is gradually giving way to, first, the logical conclusion that "human life" as such is possible only to a world which contains physical environments like our own; second, that the atmospheric conditions and temperature of Mars make impossible the existence of animated organisms even remotely akin to those with which we are familiar; and third, that Mars is a "dying world," a planet that has had its day and that is now grown cold, losing its power of gravitation and its atmosphere with the general conclusion to be drawn that if animal life ever existed there, it has had its day.

Mars Closest. This, by and large, is the result of further investigations made of the intriguing planet in the last few days at Yerkes Observatory in Williams Bay, Wisconsin. At present, Mars is as close to the earth as it will be for fifteen years, 43,000,000 miles, and affords excellent opportunities for astronomers who, however, are far more interested in making calculations as to the physical conditions of the neighbor orb than they are in trying to find further evidence of the kind of life that many people would be eager to hear announced as existing there.

Possible Vegetation. The astronomers, however, do not dismiss the possibility of the existence of vegetable life on Mars, although even with regard to this there is considerable dispute. The belief that there is such life is based on color changes observed on the planet and that the so-called "canals" may be strips of vegetation. This is opposed by astronomers who are of the opinion that both the color changes and the markings taken for canals are due to atmospheric shiftings and possible volcanic activity.

Sociology Professor Tells Strikers They Need Union to Fight

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Leroy Bowman, professor of sociology at Columbia University, characterized conditions in the paper box industry at "rotten" in an address before striking workers of that industry.

Mr. Bowman said that as a member of the Teachers' Union he is a part of the labor movement and the struggle to "clean up the glaring evils in the civilization of today."

"You box workers are struggling against sweatshop conditions in New York," declared Professor Bowman. "Your demands for a 44-hour week, extra pay for overtime and union recognition are mere elemental demands which other workers have long enjoyed," the speaker maintained. "Organize, stick together until you have won this strike."

Mr. Bowman told the strikers that "freedom does not pervade the atmosphere of America. Freedom comes to a group of people only after they have come to fruition in the children it improbable that such mind will ever hood and youth, or makes it largely organized to advance their interests."

Lack of Funds Holds up Palmer Probe 'Till After the Elections

WASHINGTON, Nov. 1.—Senator Borah's committee which was authorized last June to probe the handling of the alien property in this country by Mitchell Palmer, Garvin, Harry Daugherty, Thos. Miller and other custodians, will be unable to get funds for its work until the regular session of the senate begins in December.

Mitchell Palmer, Joseph P. Tumulty, J. Harry Covington, a number of former democratic congressmen and some former national committeemen are likely to be summoned to testify in connection with big transactions in alien property during the Wilson administration.

UNIONIZATION SHOULD FOLLOW COAL ACTIVITY

Owners Must Produce At Any Cost Now

By PATRICK (Worker Correspondent.) PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 1.—The price of coal in Pittsburgh as in every place else is mounting higher and higher. The Terminal Coal & Coke company here refuses to sell even at $10.00 a ton. The only way they are willing to sell ahead is at a "blind price," meaning that the buyer will be willing to pay any price that is asked at the time of delivery.

The companies are holding all their coal for foreign buyers who, in desperation at not being able to get coal, are outbidding each other. Italy, Norway, Sweden, all of South America and other European countries are entirely dependent on other nations for their coal. Germany cannot furnish enough scab coal to England and still supply home market. England has none to sell because of the British miners' strike, therefore all countries are turning to America, willing to buy at any price just to get the coal.

Admit Price to Rise. All of the companies claim that the price of coal will not go down, but mount even higher. In the Westmoreland and Connelsville fields an increase in wages will go into effect Nov. 1.

The Keystone Coal & Coke company, the Greensburg Coal company, the Irwin Gas Coal company, and the Berwin White Coal company have posted notices of an increase in wages.

Many of these non-union mines have raised the wages higher than, and some almost as high, as the Jacksonville agreement.

However, W. G. Warden, chairman of the board of directors of the Pittsburgh Coal company, whose mine pays 25 cents more than the Jacksonville agreement, says that his company has no intention of again resuming the use of organized labor. He says that when the demand drops back, the wages will be reduced accordingly.

The cry of all nations is for coal by fair means or foul. They must have coal to carry on their industries. The coal operators know this and are raising their prices to suit themselves. The increased wages in the non-union mines are only a sham. They will be lowered again as soon as the supply of coal is disposed off and the demand has ceased.

If the miners do not know this, it is time they woke up and looked around them. They cannot let themselves be lulled to sleep by this sudden increase.

Where is Lewis? Suppose America now joined the British miners with their own demand for a living wage and union organization of unorganized fields, now at the crucial moment when coal is desperately needed. Would not the coal operators be forced to give in to recognize the union and assure the miners of continually receiving the wages they are now getting at this temporary short prosperous period?

Why does not Lewis and his flunkies see the splendid opportunities offered? Why does Lewis continue to keep quiet? But the miners know that Lewis has never yet done anything for their good. If they want anything, if they want to be assured of a living wage they must go after it themselves, and fight without Lewis.

Why don't you write it up? It may be interesting to other workers.

Desire to Write is Only Qualification Necessary to Enter Correspondence Class

The Chicago class in worker correspondence which gets actively under way this Friday night, is open to all workers, regardless of affiliations. The only qualifications a member of the class needs are that he or she be a worker and has the desire to learn how to write news stories.

Any worker in Chicago who has this desire is urged to attend the meeting of the class on Friday in the editorial offices of THE DAILY WORKER, 1113 West Washington Blvd. (third floor), at 8 o'clock.

The object of the class is to develop in the workers the ability to put the things that happen in their industrial life in news story form so that all workers can know what is going on. It is the aim to develop first class news writers out of the class members.

Workers do not have to have the ability to write fine literature to get results. The class is primarily designed for those who want training in writing. The "question and answer" method will be used in the instruction so that everyone will get as much as possible from the course. Actual pieces of work by correspondents will be criticized in order to demonstrate errors and good points in the work.

CLASS IN LABOR NEWS WRITING AT N. Y. SCHOOL

Worker Correspondence to be Stressed

By a Worker Correspondent NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—One of the most important courses offered at the Workers School this year is labor journalism (Workers Correspondence) with Harvey O. Connor as instructor.

The course aims to prepare editors and contributors for our union journals, reporters and correspondents for the Party press, and editors and contributors for the factory newspapers. It trains workers in shop, mill and factory to report the news of the industrial struggle in its everyday phases. The technique of simple, direct news-writing, of organizing, editing and managing shop papers and of preparing material for use in the labor press is its main object.

Labor and shop papers will be studied closely and students will prepare copy for actual publication. Noted labor editors are scheduled to speak on various phases of the labor press. Because this is essentially a laboratory course, knowledge of elementary English composition is required.

This course offers the necessary training not merely for those who wish to contribute occasional articles in the form of workers' correspondence, but also those who are likely to become editors of trade union journals or left wing papers and for the conducting of publicity campaigns for strikes or left wing fights, organizing drives, union affairs, etc. One does not have to be a fine writer, an elegant stylist, in order to take this course. Plain working class English for working class readers is the best style that proletarian journalists can develop.

The course begins on Monday, November 8, at 8 P. M. and runs for a period of three months. Registration can be made any afternoon or evening at the headquarters of the Workers School, 108 East 14th St., New York City. Register for the course in Labor Journalism today.

BRICKLAYERS' UNION WINS WAGE RAISES IN NEARLY ALL CENTERS BUT FAILS IN SHORTENING HOURS

By LELAND OLDS, Federated Press.

Continued success of the bricklayers' union in raising the wage of its 70,000 members is shown in a U. S. department of labor report. In 15 of the 40 cities covered by the report union rates for bricklayers were materially higher May 1, 1926, than in the previous year. No cut in union wages is recorded.

The 1925 report showed an advance over 1924 in bricklayer wages in 12 cities. Taking the two years together, bricklayers have secured wage increases in 23 of the 40 cities. In 25 cities bricklayer wages are today above those in 1920.

No Shorter Hours Gained.

The 1926 report shows no gain toward the shorter working week. In fact Charleston, S. C., in which the 44-hour week was established in 1925, fell back to 48 hours. With this exception the 44-hour week is general. Cities in which bricklayers have secured increases since 1925 include Atlanta, Baltimore, Birmingham, Boston, Cincinnati, Dallas, Jacksonville, Memphis, New Haven, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Providence and St. Paul. Two cities have been brought to the $1.75 an hour minimum. These are New York and St. Louis. For both cities this is a gain of 40 per cent over 1920 and 150 per cent over 1913.

Minimum hourly rates for union bricklayers in 13 cities in 1913, 1920 and 1926 were:

City	1913	1920	1926
Baltimore	$.625	$1.25	$1.625
Boston	.65	1.00	1.40
Chicago	.75	1.25	1.50
Cleveland	.65	1.25	1.50
Dallas	.875	1.125	1.625
Denver	.75	1.25	1.50
Detroit	.65	1.25	1.50
Kansas City	.75	1.25	1.50
Los Angeles	.75	1.25	1.375
Minneapolis	.65	1.25	1.25
New Orleans	.625	1.00	1.25
New York	.70	1.25	1.75
Philadelphia	.625	1.30	1.625
Pittsburgh	.70	1.125	1.625
St. Louis	.70	1.25	1.75
San Francisco	.875	1.25	1.375
Seattle	.75	1.25	1.375
Washington	.625	1.00	1.625

Lowest Rate $1.00 an Hour.

In 23 of the 40 cities the bricklayers' union has secured minimum rates of $1.50 or more per hour. The lowest rate is $1 an hour in Charleston. In no other city is the union rate below $1.25 and only six cities have this relatively low rate. These are Fall River, Milwaukee, New Orleans, Omaha and St. Paul.

The average of the 40 cities was $1.453 an hour. This is an increase of 4 per cent over the 1925 average, of 24 1/2 per cent over 1920 and 117 per cent over 1913. Atlanta bricklayers have the record increase over 1913 with an advance from $0.45 to $1.40 or 211 per cent.

Weisbord Tests Free Speech in Elizabeth

ELIZABETH, N. J.—(FP)—Elizabeth allowed the American Civil Liberties Union to hold its free speech meeting and then permitted Albert Weisbord, former Passaic strike leader, to give the speech he had been prevented from giving the previous week. American Legion influence is suspected of having stopped the other meeting. Robert Dunn, national committee man of the Civil Liberties; Louis Bundex, editor Labor Age; and Bishop Paul Jones spoke before Weisbord, whose topic was the Passaic Strike and American Workers. Police and detectives entered his other meeting and cleared the hall.

Tariff Bogey Forces G. O. P. to Move for Ending Mill Strike

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 1.—Senator Borah has arranged a conference with Julius Forstmann, president of the Forstmann and Huffman mills, on the question of settling the nine months' old strike, according to a dispatch from Washington.

The Passaic strike has taken on new aspects with the approach of elections and the political significance of a recent manifesto of international bankers and industrialists condemning protective tariffs.

The situation as it exists today in the woolen mills of the Passaic district is being used as one of the most forceful arguments against a protective tariff. In spite of the high duty on wool, the woolen industry is in a worse shape than any other in the country with the possible exception of the coal industry.

Republicans, it is said, are fearing that they will be kicked on the sore spots of the Passaic strike, when the fight over the reduction of the tariff comes up in congress. Consequently a renewed effort to get the strike settled before congress meets doubtless will be made.

Plasterers' Local Aids Passaic Mill Strike With $680

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 1.—The general relief committee, 743 Main Ave., announced today the receipt this morning of a check for $680 from the Operative Plasterers' and Cement Finishers' International Association, Local No. 80, as the result of a membership assessment for Passaic strike relief. The check was accompanied by a letter expressing confidence in the ultimate victorious outcome of the strike, and promising financial and moral support to the very end.

Thrilled by Passaic Movie, Cleveland to Start Clothes Drive

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 1.—Elated by the tremendous success attending the presentation here of the Passaic strike motion picture, the Conference for Passaic Strike Relief, which includes in its membership most of the local A. F. of L. and independent unions, decided last night to launch a drive for the collection of clothing and staple food, in answer to the urgent appeals from the strike zone for immediate relief aid.

RAILROADS SHOWING BIG PROFIT INCREASE AS MORE WORK IS BEING FORCED OUT OF THEIR EMPLOYEES

Railroad profits are again bringing joy to the heart of the investing class. With eight months' profits running more than 12 per cent ahead of last year the entire transportation industry is practically assured of an annual return on the enormous $21,175,000,000 valuation exceeding the maximum 5% permitted under the transportation act.

Railroad profits thru August totaled $744,944,169 compared with $664,127,558 in the first eight months of 1925. That means a cool $80,000,000 additional profit already in hand. The profit so far this year is reckoned at the annual rate of 5.81 per cent on the rate making valuation.

August Returns Big. The returns for August exceeded those of any previous August on record and lacked only $4,000,000 of being the largest profits reported by the carriers in any month in their history. According to the New York Times: "It is general expected by railroad men that they will be exceeded by both September and October." The August profit was at the annual rate of 6.2 per cent on the rate making valuation.

How railroad workers are co-operating to make these tremendous profits possible is shown in the fact that while railroad receipts have increased by $189,562,410, railroad expenses have increased by only $82,934,128. The ratio of expenses to revenues has fallen from 75.8 per cent to 74.3 per cent.

Decrease Costs. The operating profits of some of the more important carriers for the first eight months of 1926 and 1925 were:

Railroad Profits.	1926	1925

N. Y. JEWELRY STRIKE WINNING STRIKE DEMANDS

Novelty Workers Force Big Shops to Sign

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—The jewelry novelty workers' strike, which began as a stoppage on Monday, Oct. 25, is practically won. The biggest shop in the trade has signed the union agreement and the other employers are rapidly falling in line.

About 800 workers and 40 shops were involved in the walkout, which was authorized at a meeting of Local 17, International Jewelry Workers' Union, on Oct. 22. Trifari, Krussman and Fishel, 35 Sixth Ave., was the first to settle with the union. About 150 men from this shop joined the walkout and 60 girls also became members of the union automatically because the contract provides that all workers shall be hired thru the union employment bureau.

Anthony Capraro, manager of the union, is signing contracts with the other employers as fast as he can. The contract provides for a 44-hour week, a 10 per cent wage increase, time and one-half for overtime, no more than one apprentice to 10 workers, six holidays with pay, equal division of work, and the abolition of home work—no work to be given out of the shop.

The workers in this branch of the jewelry industry are engaged in the manufacture of white metal, aluminum and silver imitation jewelry, toilet sets, Spanish combs, celluloid earrings and bracelets, buckles and millinery ornaments.

Interborough Still Persecuting "Sub" Strike Leadership

NEW YORK, Nov. 1.—Pending legal argument which is to take place Nov. 6, Supreme Court Justice Mitchell declined to issue an injunction against Edward P. Lavin and other leaders of the Interborough Rapid Transit subway strike, closed some time ago, because there was no "immediate threat of violence."

Counsel for Lavin and the rest, told the court that the application did not purport to prevent a strike, as it declared, but sought to stop anybody from inducing employees of the company from joining the Amalgamated Association of Railway Employees.

There was no law, counsel for the subway strike leaders held, to enjoin any man from persuading other engaged in labor that it was to their advantage to join a regularly organized labor body.

$50 CUSPIDORS GRACE CAPITOL OF WASHINGTON

Political Flareup Shows Gross Expenditures

By BERTRAM D. WOLFE

SEATTLE, Wash., (By mail)—With cuspidors costing $47.75 each it will be a pleasure to expectorate within the limits of the state capitol building at Olympia after the new furniture now being contracted for by the state capitol committee, and the north-west which is so proud of having the "biggest" and the "greatest" and the "best" in everything will be able to boast of the most luxurious receptacles for saliva and tobacco juice of any public building in the United States.

$96 for Waste Baskets

Waste baskets will make even the shabbiest trash feel genteel, for the new waste baskets are being bought at $96 each. Umbrella stands will be too good to put any but dry umbrellas into them and wet ones will have to be parked outside when the new $222 umbrella holders adorn the halls of the $7,000,000 building that houses the dignity of the state government.

Only the best quality hats should be permitted to hang on the hat racks that cost $168 each. $534,000 was spent by the State last Thursday on just a few of the necessities for the proper carrying on of the government's activities.

Novel Buying Method.

Instead of calling for bids for the necessary furnishing on a competitive basis the state officials adopted the novel procedure of (to quote the Governor) "asking these firms how much they would give us for $508,900..." In many cases the unhappy bidders had to enormously pad the prices in order to reach the required sum.

For example, if the state asks: How many cuspidors will you give us for $5,000? It would be insulting to offer 1,667 cuspidors at $3.00 each since that would imply an inordinate amount of spitting on the part of those who rule the destinies of the evergreen state. Consequently, the discreet company that won the contract for cuspidors sold three-dollars cuspidors (that's what the governor estimates them to be worth) for $47.50 each which would make only 101 cuspidors for $5,000.

Hartley Loses Control.

Of course Governor Hartley would have not been so unmanly as to point these facts out—there is usually honor among those who award public contracts and those who get them—were it not for the fact that there is a bitter faction fight in the republican party here and Governor Hartley has just lost control of the State machine to the anti-Hartleyites, and is trying to get his revenge.

Hartley is one of the lumber barons of this state where lumber is king. Back of the squabble appears to be a scramble for the richly timbered state lands in which Hartley got the short end of the deal. He attacked the land commissioner Clark V. Savidge alleging that he had disposed of public lands too cheaply.

He attacked "extravagant expenditures" on the State University and recalled two of the regents appointing others. With that the battle was on. From the standpoint of issues raised, Hartley seems to have gotten the better of the argument. But all of the Seattle papers have attacked him as an enemy of education and the republican machine has just been captured by his rivals.

Plan Democratic Combine

There are rumours that his bunch may combine with the democrats to elect the speaker of the lower house of the State legislature. Be that as it may, the democrats are profiting by the confusion in republican ranks. Martin Flycz of the United Mine Workers supported Hartley, while William B. Short of the State Federation of Labor supported his opponents. The general reaction of the workers and farmers here, particularly the latter, is one of disgust at the whole spectacle and will probably result in the strengthening of the Farmer-Labor Party here, which was considerably weakened in the LaFollette election.

Especially among the farmers the farmer-labor party is making rapid progress. It has the support of the Washington Progressive Farmers under the leadership of William Bouck.

J. F. Freeman, a dirt-farmer of Tonasket, Okanogan County, is the party's nominee for Senator against Wesley Jones, republican running for re-election and Scott Bullitt, democrat.

Bootleg War Breaks Out in Herrin, Ill.

HERRIN, Ill., Nov. 1.—Four national guard officers were here today surveying the situation and observing the feeling resulting from the two killings yesterday in the Birger-Shelton gang feud. The guard observers will visit Marion, Harrisburg and Benton later and report to their superiors in Springfield.

A bootlegging feud was said to be responsible for the killings.

One has to think these matters out in advance, and have a standard of conduct. Bunny had made up his mind that the next time he embraced a woman, it would be he truly loved; and now the clear cold voice of his reason told him that he did not love Charlie Norman's mother, it would only be an intrigue, and neither of them would be happy very long. So he said, gently, that he thought she had better go; and slowly and sadly she gathered up the kimono from the floor, and rose to her feet. "Bunny," she said, "people have nasty minds. If they hear about this, they will make it horrid."

"Don't think of it," he answered. "I shall not tell." He heard the door softly opened, and softly closed again; and he turned on the light, and locked the door—never again would he fall to take that precaution at a house-party! For a while he paced the floor, thinking over his alarming experience. He told himself, with becoming modesty, that it wasn't because he was irresistibly fascinating; but in this new pagan civilization women were so startled by an encounter with chastity, it struck them as something colossal, superhuman.

Next morning the nautical maid had her first natural blush in many years when she encountered the young Adonis on deck. But she soon got over it, and they talked about Theosophy, as spiritually as ever, and were perfectly good friends; he called her Theima and Charlie did not even make a joke. But on the way home Bertie wanted to know all about it, had Mrs. Norman made love to him, and how much? And when Bunny blushed, she laughed at him, and was provoked because he was silly and wouldn't tell. She decided that of course they had had an affair. That was all right, there had been other affairs on board the "Siren"—the lights were dim in the central hall-way, so that you needn't be recognized as you flitted from door to door. "But don't imagine she'll ever marry you," added Bertie sagely. "She talks a lot of reincarnation bunk, but she hangs onto her Occidental Steel bonds for this incarnation!"

Occidental Steel had a bad slump in the market a few days after this, and Bertie was worried—taking a proprietary interest in the concern. She asked Dad about it, and he said it was "just manipulation." But right away a lot of other stocks went tumbling including Ross Consolidated and then Dad said there were fools who would gamble and bid stocks up, and then they had to come down. But the trouble continued to spread over the country, and there were reports of big concerns, and even banks, in trouble. There was panic in the air, and Dad and "Verne" held anxious consultations, and stopped all their development work, and laid off several hundred men; "pulling in their horns," as Dad phrased it. There was plenty of money in the banks, Dad said, but only the big fellows had the use of it; "Verne" was in a rage with some bankers in Angel City who had "thrown him down." It was the "Big Five," at their old tricks of trying to freeze out the independents. Wouldn't they just like to get Ross Consolidated in a hole, and buy it up for five or ten millions!

Bunny had a talk with Mr. Irving, who told him that it was the Federal Reserve system at work; a device of the big Wall Street banks, a supposed-to-be government board, but really just a committee of bankers, who had the power to create unlimited new paper money in times of crisis. This money was turned over to the big banks, and in turn loaned by them to the big industries whose securities they held and must protect. So, whenever a panic came, the big fellows were saved, while the little fellows went to the wall.

In this case it was the farmers who were being "deflated." They were unorganized, and had no one to protect them; they had to dump crops onto the market and the prices were tumbling—literally millions of farmers would be bankrupt before this year was by. But the price of manufactured goods would not drop to the same extent because the big trusts, having the Wall Street banks behind them, could hold onto their stocks. Bunny took this explanation to his father, who passed it on to Mr. Roscoe, who said it was exactly right, by Pees; he knew the bunch that had their fingers in the till of the Federal Reserve bank here on the coast, and they were buying up everything in sight, the blankety-blank-blanks, but they weren't going to get the Roscoe-Ross properties.

Money was so scarce, Bertie could not have a new car, despite the fact that she had damaged hers in a collision; and Dad talked economy at meal-times, until Aunt Emma took to feeding them on hash made from yesterday's roast! Shortage everywhere, and worry in people's faces, and hints of bankruptcy and unemployment in the newspapers—they tried their best to hide it, but it leaked out between the lines.

Then a funny thing happened. A big limousine with a chauffeur drove up before the Ross home one summer evening and out stepped a stately personage in snow white flannels; a tall young man with yellow hair and a solemn visage—Eli Watkins, by heck! He shook hands all around—he had developed the manners of an archbishop—and then asked for a private conference with Dad. He was taken into the "den" and half an hour later came out smiling, and bowed himself away; and Dad said nothing until he was alone with Bunny, and then his face expanded into a grin and he chuckled, by Judas Priest, Eli had gone into the real estate business. He had found a block on the outskirts of the city which was exactly the size for the temple which the angel of the Lord had commanded him to build; or rather he had found some real estate subdividers who had a pull with the city board of supervisors, and had got permission to create a block of this unprecedented size. So the word of the Lord had been vindicated and the golden temple was to arise. But for some reason unknown the Lord had failed to tip off Eli to the panic, and here he was "stuck," just like any common, unholly businessman, with a payment on his hundred and seventy-five thousand dollar tract nearly a month overdue. The collections at the revivals had fallen off, and the Lord had made it manifest that He desired Eli to employ some other method of raising funds.

"What did he want of you, Dad?" "The Lord had revealed to him that I would take a second mortgage on the property. But I told him the Lord had failed to reveal where I was to get the cash. I gave him five hundred to help him over."

"Good God, Dad! I thought we were economizing!" "Well, Eli pointed out that he had blessed that first well on the Paradise tract, and that was why we had got all the oil. You can see, it would 'a been sort of blasphemy if I'd denied it." "But Dad, you know you don't believe in Eli Watkins' bunk!" "I know, but that fellow has got a tremendous following, and we might need him some day, you can't be sure. If there should come a close election, here or at Paradise, we might get our money back many times by getting Eli to endorse our ticket."

The American Sovereign

We are not referring to the queen of Roumania, to John D. Rockefeller or to Henry Ford. We have in mind the American voter. Today he is king, he will punch the clock as usual and experience palpitation of the heart when the boss catches him grinning over Tillie the Toiler, while stealing a smoke in the factory rest room. Of course, we make the distinction between the American voter who mails his election preference from Biarritz, France, or from his hunting lodge in the Pyrenees and the corrugated toiler who remembers when his gas bill was only $1.25 whereas now it is $1.35. We are talking about the working class voter.

Communists and their political ancestors in the revolutionary movement have been pounding sound advice into the head of Mr. Wage Slave for several decades. On election day we take out the horn as well as the hammer. With the latter we knock spots out of the capitalists and their political Punch and Judy men, while with the former we call on the workers to go to the polls and mark their ballots for working class candidates. The workers are hard of hearing and the capitalists have heads made of solid rubber. So far, we have not made much of an impression on either. But we are about as pessimistic as a bunch of college students going to a party. "Time and tide wait for no man," says the proverb, but we can turn this old saw over to the efficiency magazines. The tide of evolution is always flowing in the direction of revolution and time has plenty of patience. Bone-heads and gold-lined pockets can no more save the capitalist system than King Canute's broom.

Today the American voter is king. He will go to the polls and vote either for the republican highwayman or for the democratic confidence man. Comparatively few will vote for the Communist candidates, the only candidates in the field that offer the worker a way out of his industrial slavery and economic misery. It is an axiom that "revolutions never take place until the pains of rebellion are no less than the pains of obedience." This does not mean to imply that revolutionists will lay low until labor labors in pain and delivers itself of a revolution. On the contrary the very fact that revolutionists are certain of the inevitable collapse of capitalism, is the best reason why they should prepare the workers for the taking over of power. This is where we are in favor of "preparedness," preparedness for and by the working class.

Today the workers of the United States will cast the overwhelming majority of their votes for the candidates of their masters. But tomorrow will follow, and the struggle for existence under capitalism will convince the workers of the soundness of the Communist advice that now falls on deaf ears.

The fate of the capitalist system will not be settled at the ballot box if for no other reason than the certainty that the capitalists will take good care that it will not.

Workers! Vote for the Communist candidates today, but today and tomorrow preach the gospel of struggle against the capitalist system, help to organize your fellow workers into trade unions, agitate for a labor party and join the Workers (Communist) Party.

Need Revolution in School System

dare to face the thought of training teachers who will have their eyes turned to the living world—to the changing, evolving community that is found about children. We have not been as intelligent or as realistic in our dealing with our children as a production for man is in dealing with his raw materials.

"Hence, our real American education problem is that of getting a new mind operative in the adult community; a mind that will not be so hostile to the implications of science; a mind that will welcome rational changes in the basis of facts and honest interpretation of facts. A mind that will permit intelligence to play thru industry, and politics, and morality, thru the processes by which education either develops real mind in children.

Feed Royal Navies U. S. Scab Coal

must be prepared to rush to any place in that "tight little isle" where emergency demands.

Mussolini, of course, wants to keep the Italian navy ready to crush any revolt against his dictatorship. Every day he has watched developments in the British struggle for he knows full well that a miners' victory would bring his own defeat by Italy's outraged workers nearer.

Using Italian Ships.

The British and Italian navies placed direct contracts with several of the largest coal companies in the United States. Mussolini also arranged for use of Italian ships to carry coal from these ports to Britain to help deliver a smashing blow to the striking miners.

In July the British admiralty placed a contract for 1,000,000 tons of high volatile coal for the British navy and that order has been repeated at last once since that time.

Early in August the British steamer Minnie de Larrangea came to Norfolk for coal for the British admiralty. It was the first time that coal was carried from a foreign country to supply the needs of the British Empire's navy.

Coal for British Navy.

Norfolk's newspapers featured this striking situation in both their news and editorial columns, the "Ledger-Dispatch," an afternoon newspaper, running this news item:

"The great British navy is coming to America for its coal, a thing unprecedented in its glamorous and glorious past. The British steamer Minnie de Larrangea, cleared yesterday for Barry Roads, loaded with a cargo of coal, where she will receive orders to proceed to another port to unload the coal for the British navy." But the British government neither sought nor favored such publicity. So the word went out for no more mention of the British navy's humiliation because of the refusal of men to go down in the mines and dig coal.

Holds Bursting with Coal.

Since that time, however, boat after boat, British or Italian, has steamed from Norfolk, Newport News or Baltimore, with its holds bursting with "scab" coal to help support British capitalist control of the destinies of one-sixth of the world's people.

Italy, too, has been vitally affected by the British miners' strike. She depends on other nations for her fuel supply. British miners supplied most of that coal before the strike.

Coal to Italy and Britain.

So scores of Italian ships are coming to Baltimore and to Hampton Roads to carry coal to Italy and to Britain. Even transports are being pressed into use. Only a few days ago the Italian transport Pianono carried 10,000 tons of "scab" coal from Baltimore to Italy. For a year she had remained inactive at the Italian naval station at Spezia. The government, however, pressed her into service and assigned her to the Co-operative Garibaldi, of Genoa, which is supposed to represent the "Federation of Italian Seamen."

This "Federation of Italian Seamen," of course, is a federation run by the government and not by the seamen of Italy.

The seamen who brought the Pianono here were refused shore leave for the sailors of Italy are now slaves of Mussolini and not free men.

New Orleans Strike of Boilermakers Still Going; Bosses Weaken

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 1.—(FP)—The boilermakers' strike is still unsettled and at the present time it looks as if the employing interests are weakening. P. S. Dubus, representing a dozen or more from founders involved officially attended a meeting of the union and renewed the offer of 80 cents an hour for boilermakers and 48 cents an hour for helpers. The union turned down the proposition by a vote of 52 to 46.

MORE OPERATORS PAY UNION RATE IN CENTRAL PA.

By ART SHIELDS, Federated Press.

CLEARFIELD, Pa., Oct. 31.—Defeat of Peabody Coal Co. and the Erie Railroad by the central Pennsylvania miners has put open-shop operators on the defensive. The Shawmut Mining Co., a neighboring concern with 600 workers, has posted notices that the union scale will hereafter be paid—a raise of 33-1-3 per cent over the 1917 scale. This company, unlike the Peabody, withholds union recognition in favor of a company union, but United Mine Workers' organizers are pressing on it hard and expect to have it in the fold soon. One of its four mines has been on strike since it broke its contract months ago.

More Operators Hard Pressed.

Another company embarrassed by the union drive that President Brophy has initiated is the Allegheny River Mining Co., with a thousand employees. It devoted much of the last issue of its bi-weekly employees' paper to an attack on the union. But it cannot explain to the men why the Jacksonville scale—that it has attacked since it broke its contract—is so easily paid by the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, which reopened its mines with 700 employees near by on the river a week ago.

And so many of its men have quit recently that it is taking men off immigrant ships. Forty-two such immigrants were brought in from Ellis Island in the last few days.

Union Stronger.

Practically all revival of mining operations in the district now are under the union scale. Five to six thousand men are back at work in reopened mines. This revival has strengthened the union for its drive into non-union territories in the district. As men go off the relief lists and begin paying dues the result is obvious.

Regrets Lack of Control.

President Brophy realizes that the revival is temporary, and follows the withdrawing of West Virginia competition into the export channels created by the British strike. He regrets that affairs over which his district has no control bring work to the American miner at the expense of his British brother. The fact within his control is that union wages be paid for all work done in central Pennsylvania and he is having unexpected success at that.

Big Bankers and Big Business Celebrate Prosperity Claims

Dwight W. Morrow of J. P. Morgan and company's bank, speaking at the University of Chicago, declared that before the end of next year he expected the restoration of gold standards in both France and Italy.

At a banquet in the Palmer House, George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National bank, said he used to oppose loans to Europe when he thought they would not be used for "constructive purposes." He thought there had been a change and now supported loans.

Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor company, at the University of Chicago meeting, declared:

"I think that the most impressive fact in the last year's experience in business is the fact that the industry shipped over 700,000 automobiles to foreign countries."

Fifth Co-operation Congress Meets

contact on Mr. Nordby's part with the educational activities of the co-operatives all thru the states of Minnesota, V. S. ALANNE, executive secretary of the Northern States League (and formerly educational director of the Co-operative Central Exchange, later of the Franklin Co-operative Creamery Association) is the best known co-operator in the North Central territory. For five or six years he has been constantly in touch with various groups of co-operative societies, as his work took him from one central organization to another.

A. W. WARINNER, educational director of the Central States Co-operative League, has a background of co-operative experience as varied and as interesting as that of Alanne. He served as manager of several stores in Missouri, New Mexico and Kansas; then went with the Central States Co-operative Wholesale Society in 1922; and when the Central States League finally supplanted the Wholesale, became the executive of that. He will be one of the most active men on the floor of the congress.

Albert S. Goss, president of the Washington State Grange, is one of the very soundest practical economists in the agricultural field today. He addresses the congress on "Relation of Consumers' Co-operation to Co-operative Marketing."

ESKEL RONN is (like all of the men above mentioned) also a member of the board of directors of the Co-operative League. But he is probably better known to the managers and directors of a hundred stores in the North Central territory as the hustling and relentless manager of the Co-operative Central (Wholesale) Exchange of Superior, Wis.

Since Mr. Ronn took this management, annual sales have increased from a figure of about $200,000 to approximately $1,000,000 in 1926. There is no co-operative store in the northern parts of those three or four states which has not heard often the voice of Mr. Ronn, urging them to loyalty to the co-operative wholesale. He speaks at the congress on the subject of "Credit in the Co-operative Store Movement."

COLONEL SMITH W. BROOKHART,

who addresses the delegates on Co-operative Banking, is well known throughout the country, thanks to the press, as the militant senator from Iowa. But (and again we can blame the capitalist press) he is not so well known as a thorough-going co-operator and one who is not only one of the country's first experts on co-operative banking, but equally well versed in the history and theory of other phases of the co-operative movement.

THREE of the best known speakers from the labor field are John P. McNamee, editor of the magazine of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen; A. A. Siegler of the labor movement of Duluth, and George Halonen, now educational director of the Co-operative Central Exchange of Wisconsin. These men will take the lead in the session where the delegates discuss "The Relation of Consumers' Co-operation to the General Labor Movement."

H. V. NURMI and W. W. Regli are two of the chief accountants for consumers' co-operatives. The former has been head accountant and auditor for the Central Exchange stores for eight years, and he is in no small measure responsible for the fact that there are practically no failures among these stores during the past two or three years. Mr. Regli is the younger accountant who has worked from the national office in New York for the past year, chiefly as auditor for co-operatives in the East.

MILO RENO, president, and A. E. Cotterill, secretary of the Farmers' Union of Iowa, are going to be very much on the job on Friday the 5th, when Co-operative Insurance is discussed (in the afternoon) and Co-operative Marketing is presented (in the evening). The fact that Iowa has a most successful farmers' life insurance mutual gives Mr. Reno the right to speak authoritatively on that subject.

ROY R. BERGENGREN, who speaks during the session on Co-operative Banking, is the national secretary of the Credit Union Extension Bureau, offices in Boston. Mr. Bergengren, more than any other one man in the field, is responsible for the new credit union laws now on the statute books of 25 of the states in the Union. His office also maintains a clearing house for information in all phases of the credit union work.

DRY SENATOR IN ILLINOIS HIT AS CRAFT GATHERER

The plea of Lowell B. Mason, dry, state senator from Oak Park, that the government reveal its evidence against him on a charge of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law before his fight for re-election is decided Tuesday, was granted in federal court. Mason and Major Percy Owen, one-time prohibition administrator of the Chicago district, are on trial together.

Taxed $300 Each. Stone testified that his first connection with the alleged conspiracy was made in 1924 when Frank Loveland, a wine dealer whose name has been brought into the trial repeatedly, complained to him that dealers were being taxed $300 for each permit on the pretense that the money was to be used for political purposes. Loveland, Stone said, was willing to do that, but had been disturbed by a demand for $5,000 in a lump sum.

"I advised him to quit paying out his money and told him I thought I could get permits for him in a legal way at a cost of not more than 3 cents a gallon," Stone continued.

The Grafters Agree. "Not long after that Senator Mason came to my office, asked me what connection I had with the prohibition office and what my practice was. The upshot of our conversation was an agreement that I should look after the legal end of things while Mason used his political influence to gain entree to the prohibition office."

Stone said that he then interviewed wine dealers he knew and arranged with them to get permits at $300 each, the dealers to get the first shipment before they paid anything.

Dividing Up. "The first time I went to Mason's office to divide up I carried $3,000," the former administrator went on. "Mason had told me that I should not pay anything out myself, but that we would divide it ourselves. Pay day was to be every Wednesday, and I was to get $50 as my share of each $300 paid."

The latter two are former prohibition agents who also are under indictment in the alleged conspiracy.

STRIKE STRATEGY

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER

ARTICLE IV,
AMERICAN AND FOREIGN-BORN.

TO unite the many nationalities employed in American industry, with their maze of different languages, religions, national prejudices, etc., into a solid, rebellious proletarian mass, constitutes a major problem in strike strategy. The most difficult phase of it is to unite the American-born workers with those who are foreign-born. (For practical purposes we will state the problem thus although, to be more accurate, it is to unite the Americans and the foreign-born workers of the earlier immigrations with those workers of the later immigrations).

The Americans are mostly skilled workers. They commonly hold the best jobs and are favored in many ways by the employers. They are hard to organize. They strike badly and they scab easily. Their role in the struggles in the basic unorganized industries has been to shamelessly betray the militant foreign-born workers. This is the history of many great strikes in the textile, rubber, steel, packing, and other industries.

The Americans rationalize their class treason by a nationalistic contempt for the foreign-born, by charges that the latter are maneuvering to get the Americans' jobs, etc. The employers do all possible to intensify this nationalistic scabbery, and the ultra-patriotic trade union bureaucrats feed this chauvinistic maw.

This grave problem is a diminishing quantity. The barriers between the foreign-born and native workers are breaking down. Immigration is practically shut off and few new foreign-born workers are coming into the industries. Those there now are learning the language and winning their way to the skilled jobs. In many cases Americans are entering the industries en masse as unskilled workers. Still more important, the children of the immigrants are growing up and going into the industries. Thoroughly Americanized, they are a real bridge between the American and foreign-born workers.

But the problem is still an exceedingly difficult one. It must be boldly met and solved. Educational propaganda and a loyal defense of the economic interests of the various language groups are the foundations of a successful policy. While adopting every technical device for meeting the special needs and difficulties of the respective nationalities among the strikers, such as language speakers and publicity, nationalistic demogogy must be ruthlessly eliminated and the whole strike shot through with a true spirit of internationalism capable of shattering all national antipathies and prejudices and of uniting the strikers into an ideological whole so far as the strike aims are concerned.

The splendid international spirit of the Lawrence, Paterson, Passaic, and many other strikes conducted by the left wing show that the language and nationality difficulties can be overcome.

The strike strategist must especially understand the role of the young workers in great struggles in present-day American industry. As stated above, they are the bridges between the American and foreign-born workers. They are destined to play a continually more important role in mass strikes. In the strikes of the Passaic textile workers and the New York furriers they were the deciding factor. A successful strike strategy must include the systematic development of the youth as strike leaders.

WHITES AND BLACKS.

The unification of the Negroes and white workers into common struggles against their employers is an urgent task of our strike strategy. The Negro workers are a growing factor in the industries. In the packing industry they are a decisive element, and they are fast becoming so in many other industries.

The policy of the employers is to develop the Negroes as a great reserve army of strikebreakers. They refuse to give the Negroes employment in many industries and trades unless they come in as strikebreakers. They force them to accept the lowest wages and the most terrible working conditions. They leave no stone unturned to exploit the deep race antagonism between whites and blacks in order to force the Negro to scab. And in many great strikes, such as for example the 1919 steel strike, where at least 50,000 Negroes were brought into the mills during the strike, they are only too successful.

The Negro intellectuals work hand in hand with the employers in carrying out this policy. So do the reactionary trade union leaders. Their policy of excluding Negroes from the unions, of barring their advance to better jobs in industry, and of generally feeding the race prejudices of the whites, dovetails exactly with the aim of the employers to drive the Negro worker into scabbery.

This program of the employers, the strike strategist must relentlessly combat. At all costs the Negro workers must be united with the whites to make common cause against the exploiters. But this can only be accomplished by complete suppression of race antagonism, and by a loyal defense of the Negro workers' interests. This is easier said than done.

The whites are stubborn in their prejudices, and it is not surprising that, after innumerable betrayals by reactionary trade union leaders and in view of the oppression they suffer from the whites on all sides, the Negro workers are suspicious of even the most sincere white union leaders and slow to hearken to their words. But this is no insuperable obstacle. More and more the Negro workers are realizing the necessity for trade union organization. The formation recently of the Brotherhood of Railway Porters is only one sign of many. Negroes are splendid strikers, as has been demonstrated time and again in the Miners' and other unions where the whites have given them half a chance to function as unionists.

The problem of uniting them firmly with the white workers will never be accomplished until they are admitted freely to all the unions, until the organized white workers remove every bar against their securing the better grades of work, until they are wholeheartedly received by the white workers as loyal proletarian comrades in the great struggle for working class emancipation. The strike strategist must never lose sight of the problem of the Negro worker in American industry.
