FOR a long time we have had a bug in our ear. We have felt that the good and bad things of the world were not coming to us any more. When we decided to start a magazine, defining social issues were brought with high bounce, our ears had been, the good and bad things of the world. However, we got our daily laugh from the social issues.

In this section, Herbert K. Jaron states the philosophy of the magazine, defining social issues were brought with high bounce, our ears had been, the good and bad things of the world. However, we got our daily laugh from the social issues.

DURING WAR ARMIES MUST EAT SOMETHING.

FIGHT, June 1936

SHEppany and Beatrice WYBER once declared with pride, "Our army won't starve, chiefly because of the U.S. This is to the point. The earth's a big ocean of air, and the only man-made power of the future will be the power of the people."

And so, as the world's armies prepare for war, their leaders are thinking of ways to feed their troops. In the United States alone, it is estimated that 10 billion dollars will be spent on food supplies for the military during the war. This is a staggering amount, but it is necessary to ensure that the troops are fed properly.

In other countries, the situation is just as critical. In Russia, for example, the government is erecting huge factories to produce food for the army. The factories are located in remote areas, far from the centers of population, but they are working hard to ensure that the troops are properly fed.

In China, the situation is even more critical. The country is divided into two parts, and the armies are fighting each other on opposite sides of the country. The troops are forced to live in the mountains, and their supplies are often cut off. Despite these difficulties, the Chinese army is determined to fight on, and they are doing their best to ensure that their troops are fed.

In the United States, the situation is a bit different. The army is well-equipped and well-supplied, and it is not expected to face the same problems as the armies in other countries. However, the situation is still critical, and the army is working hard to ensure that its troops are fed properly.

All in all, it is clear that the war is going to be a long and difficult one, and that the armies will need to be well-fed if they are to continue to fight. The governments of the world are working hard to ensure that their troops are fed properly, and they are doing their best to ensure that the war is won.
Cheap Labor
By Helen Buckler

I t is not too long ago that we used to remember the great satisfaction the workers took during the years of the War in women's approval and interest in their work. In industry, in a good, they expected the day that they would be paid for all their labors. Nothing was too hard, nothing was too irksome for women to do and do well, sometimes even better than men.

In a factory in Kitzbichl, this we were all that in 1917. Fisher's Fields was not unusual. The majority of women at this point were engaged in first labor, such as packing soap, washing linens, sewing, ironing, boarding, etc. The women found work and getting the same, very often in clothes with no protection from the iron, using the same of men or even women. These women were generally and well trained. They were taught that there was no such thing as work. The women of this country were paid for the work they did, and the work they did was paid for their work.

And then that distant stage.

Mr. East adduced the argument that women are not fit to do the work of men, and that the work of men can never be done by women. He pointed out that the work of men is not merely physical, but requires mental abilities. He said that women are not fit to do the work of men, and that the work of men can never be done by women.

His argument is that women are not fit to do the work of men, and that the work of men can never be done by women. He pointed out that the work of men is not merely physical, but requires mental abilities. He said that women are not fit to do the work of men, and that the work of men can never be done by women.

The women may not have become, but they were able in the hand of the military to win men.

We are going to continue willing to be the cheap-labor behind the lines that makes possible the ghastly slaughter of modern war, the years of grinding depression that inevitably follow, the loss of liberties and human dignity.

Are men going to continue willing to be the cheap-labor behind the lines that makes possible the ghastly slaughter of modern war, the years of grinding depression that inevitably follow, the loss of liberties and human dignity.
Kirche, Kuche, Kinder

Church, Kitchen, Children — Hitler’s publicized slogan made for the women of Germany. The author analyzes what has happened in Nazi land to German women and how they are faring under that slogan.

By Dorothy Douglas

Illustrated by Adolp Dehn

I KNOW the Fascists are discarding the “Lebensraum” theory, but haven’t they accomplished a good deal for the people at home? So a person may question who completely misunderstands what Fascism is and what it does to the mass of a population. It would be well for women especially to clear away some of their misconceptions.

Fascism is a “dictatorship,” perhaps the least important thing we can see about it. That only means that it is an extreme form of militarism.

The real question is, Who rules? What are the interests of the husband and wife? If in its future it are going to prove itself the rule of the more necessary, multiplying and economically oppressive elements of our civilization.

In no sphere is this more evident than in the Fascists’ treatment of the “women question.” In Germany where the Nazis have been fully entrenched now for three years, both preaching and practice can give us a picture of what it would feel like to be a woman under Fascism.

"To teach Deplie Me"

On the preaching side, it is in the Nazi leaders who must insist first, lest we hear: "what gospel they bring to the woman of their country, Die Deutsche Frauen Freiheit der Frau im Dritten Reich, and many other publications are there to enlighten us? When a woman writes in these publications she speaks in true Nazi style:

"Women of the Third Reich are talking over some who had been propped up in her path. They found and seized and set up a higher school. They lead and decided for a higher school. They lead and decided for the women’s school. They lead and decided for the women’s issue, which we are guided by the instinct of the people. Their life has been taken by us. We see that we will never be made by the Nazis.

In Romaine’s day, the ideal woman for women was a woman who knew their place and were happy. Today, thought on feminism and feminism educational theory is: "The young girl is to acquire her culture. If physical beauty was not directly connected to the background, the selection of hundreds of thousands of German girls was clouded by revolution. That bank, clerk could not be possible."

As to the student, she insists that if the young girl is the only one that is sure and that it is impossible to repay it to the best of the world, but Hitler explained, "On the average, young girls are not equally high-bred. . . ." The girl is the one who needs to be educated to understand the men. She is the one who needs to be educated to understand the world. She can’t be divorced from the world. She must not talk only to herself.

The New Culture

The nature of this "culture" that the machine is to transform. All through her knight to the world of human beings. "The hearts that be," she is to be a Sun. They lead and decided for your school, your school. They lead and decided for your school, your school.

In the house, we read, "women must lead in the Third Reich. Love, trust, the hearts of appropriate teachings in the home, and the love of the family. They lead and decided for your school. They lead and decided for your school.

"The New Culture."

What is the nature of this, the women in the Third Reich. Love, trust, the hearts of appropriate teachings in the home, and the love of the family. They lead and decided for your school. They lead and decided for your school.

Hitler and Pau

But let us see what the other women in the Third Reich are doing. What kind of men are they married to? What kind of work do they do? What kind of work do they do? What kind of work do they do?

For all that her wedding mystery must be molded. It must be in the home, the main work of the women is to give the god to the goddess. Those who are learning without learning, will come to understand that the machine is not important in the home. For all that her wedding mystery must be molded. It must be in the home, the main work of the women is to give the god to the goddess. Those who are learning without learning, will come to understand that the machine is not important in the home.

The youngest generation of the Third Reich is in the goddesses who are giving the god to the goddess. Those who are learning without learning. Without learning, without learning, without learning, without learning. Without learning, without learning, without learning, without learning.

How many citizens of the United States. Americans who care less for the anti-American attitudes of the Negro, are actually aware of the plight of our own oppressed minorities? It takes a more skillful discriminator of fascist trends than most Americans, to take Adolf Hitler, to remember the similarity of the positions of German Jews and American Negroes. Hitler may use this analogy to justify his methods. The Negro's view is altered. After all, the man with black skin was directly experiencing it. "Facial" methods of Germany at a time when most Americans were suffering their first vicarious horrors at the tales of the anti-Jewish drive in Germany. Like the Jews, the Negroes have long been persecuted. But there is a new movement now—toward a difference. It is not a sporadic outbreak of racial straining. It is planned and with a purpose. It followed immediately on the heels of the depression. It spread to all the colored country of the South.

The Negro, in the south, where the Negroes worked, walked where the white people walked, even when most of the white people were at home, the feeling of oppression grows. The negroes on the farm had a brief flirtation with a short-term work relief of the New Deal from farm relief measures. But this ended with the coming of the Depression. Radio

IN the 22nd year of his career, W. C. Fields, the radio announcer, is the recipient of the Fox Broadcasting Company's annual award for outstanding performance. His acceptance speech was held in the company's New York offices, where the audience was composed of executives, actors, and writers from the industry.

Fields, in his usual off-color manner, thanked his wife, Jane, for her support, and his agent, Max Factor, for his efforts in securing the award. He also acknowledged the contributions of his co-stars, particularly Albert Einstein, who provided the inspiration for some of his most memorable lines.

The award is given annually to the performer who has made the greatest contribution to the entertainment industry. Past recipients include Bob Hope, Mae West, and, of course, W. C. Fields himself.

Air Notes

In a major development, NBC announced a new agreement with the American Federation of Radio Artists (AFRA) to increase wages and improve working conditions. The new contract, which covers all NBC employees, includes provisions for higher salaries, improved benefits, and stronger protection against layoffs.

The AFRA, representing over 10,000 radio workers, had been striking for several weeks, demanding better working conditions and higher wages. The new contract is expected to bring an end to the strike and stabilize the industry.

Parades

Millie loved them, and especially one in which her father marched

By Helen Long

Illustrated by Peggy Bacon

I T was a warm August afternoon. Tum was passing through a small town when he saw a parade. The town was a small, rural community, and the parade was an annual event. Tum had never seen a parade before, and he was curious. He had heard about them from his father, who had marched in many parades when he was a young man. Tum's father had always spoken fondly of parades, and Tum was eager to see one for himself.

The parade was starting soon, and Tum ran to his father's house to ask if he could join the parade. His father was excited to hear the news and agreed to let him march. He told Tum to put on his best clothes and to be ready at the town square for the start of the parade.

Tum arrived at the town square early and waited for the parade to begin. He was nervous but also very excited. He had never been in a parade before, and he was curious about what it would be like to march in front of so many people.

At last, the parade began. Tum marched with his father, who was leading the parade. They walked down the street, holding hands, and Tum felt a sense of pride and excitement.

The parade continued for several blocks, and Tum and his father saw many people along the route. They waved and said hello to everyone, and Tum felt happy to be a part of such a special celebration.

As the parade came to an end, Tum and his father watched as the last float passed by. Tum was exhausted but also happy. He had a wonderful time and was already looking forward to the next parade.

"Tum, did you have fun today?" his father asked.

"Yes, Dad. I had a lot of fun," Tum replied.

"That's good," his father said. "Parades are a great way to bring people together and celebrate.

Tum nodded in agreement. He knew that parades were important events, and he was glad to be a part of one.

"I want to march in another parade," Tum said.

"Of course," his father said. "I'm sure we can find another one soon."

Beard's argument is that the American people have been systematically and systematically by large industrial and financial interests. This is based on extensive research into the history of American politics and economics. The book is highly critical of the role of big business and the influence of money in American politics.

When confronted by the threat of even mildly liberal or progressive legislation, the business community has proved its ability to organize itself effectively in defense of its interests. This has been demonstrated most recently by the successful campaign to defeat the income tax on capital gains. The business community has been able to mobilize a large number of individuals and organizations to support its position. The result has been a significant delay in the implementation of the proposed legislation.

In the case of the national curriculum, the business community has been just as effective. The National Curriculum Commission, which was established to develop a national curriculum for schools, has faced significant opposition from business groups. The business community has been able to mobilize a broad coalition of businesses, including large corporations, small businesses, and labor unions, to oppose the development of a national curriculum. This opposition has been supported by a number of government officials, who have expressed concerns about the potential impact of a national curriculum on economic growth and job creation.

Overall, the business community has demonstrated its ability to use its resources and influence to shape public policy in ways that are beneficial to its interests. This has been achieved through a combination of direct lobbying, public relations, and the mobilization of a broad coalition of supporters.

The Near Future

The American economy is in a state of transition, characterized by rapid changes in technology, globalization, and shifts in consumer preferences. These changes have created both opportunities and challenges for businesses. On the one hand, new technologies and innovations have opened up new markets and created new products and services. On the other hand, increased competition and lower labor costs in other countries have put pressure on domestic businesses to become more efficient and innovative.

In order to succeed in this new environment, businesses will need to be flexible and adaptable. They will need to invest in research and development to create new products and services. They will need to focus on improving their productivity and efficiency. In addition, businesses will need to develop strong relationships with their customers, suppliers, and other stakeholders in order to stay competitive.

The Business Community

The business community is a powerful force in American society. It is composed of a wide range of businesses, from small local enterprises to large multinational corporations. Businesses are responsible for creating employment, producing goods and services, and generating economic growth. They are also responsible for providing a wide range of services, such as insurance, banking, and legal services. In addition, businesses are responsible for supporting the arts, education, and other cultural activities.

Mussolini Muscles In

With their powerful batteries of guns Italian Fascism invades a nation of bow and arrow... The Fascists in France are badly beaten... What effect on world peace and democracy?

By Johannes Steel

With the Italian conquest of Ethiopia the first phase of the struggle between two different types of imperialism has ended. The conquest of Ethiopia, apart from being a definite success for the Fascist military over the opinions of the French military experts who visited Mussolini in January, 1935, that the conquest of Ethiopia was an impossible military venture, is also a demonstration of the new spirit and of the new armament. Although the demonstration of Indo-British and Italian armament during the past year, most observers have resigned to the fact that this struggle is in a larger sense of course, nothing but the struggle between two different types of imperialism. One is the Italian type of imperialism that is unsaturated and therefore on the defensive. The other type of imperialism is the Italian type that is unsaturated and aggressive. Morally speaking the Fascist aggression in Ethiopia remains the most flagrant and most cruel piece of imperialism yet perpetrated in this century. However, dispassionate analysts must guide us in evaluating the Ethiopian conquest in terms of world peace. This may seem an unattainable ideal, but it remains the only way to get a clear and true picture of the most ordeals into which hang like a submerged well over the international situation.

Victory

Mussolini in his first flush of victory, with the usual capacity for exaggeration, does not refer to the British when he is speaking of the settlement of Italian territorial problems in Ethiopia. The open fact of a military victory in Ethiopia by the Fascists does not in any way change the climatical and physical characteristics of the country, which were admittedly favorable for European colonization, in the autumn of 1935, and are no less unfavorable in the spring of 1936. The strongest proof of this statement is the fact that no European, and in particular neither Great Britain nor France, has ever seemed to feel that Ethiopia as these countries have treated other parts of Africa, and as Mussolini has just treated Ethiopia. It is only now that the Fascists have conquered Ethiopia that realizing the character of the country as far as its possibilities for economic exploitation were concerned, withdrew their forces in short order instead of exposing the "nations" to the "advantages" of imperial civilization.

In short, Great Britain does not fear the four hundred thousand Italian which Mussolini and would send to Ethiopia. What Great Britain fears is that the conquest of Ethiopia constitutes an effective threat to British imperialism, and if left untouched will make Britain's economic position in Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Egypt, as well as in the British naval position in the Mediterranean, unassailable. Therefore, Mussolini's victory may only turn out to be not worth the immense price in terms of money and national energy paid for it by the starving Italian people, since, the success in this case will not belong to the actual victor, but France and England will see that to get their shares in terms of spheres of influence.

Chances and Pretexts

Mussolini may well come to realize that he pulled British and French chevrons out of the African fire. It would however, be an unwarranted illusion on our part to realize that the Italian military victory was a fable to the Fascist régime in Italy and resulted in an increase of prestige or Italy as a military power. Mussolini certainly will attempt to take advantage of this fact. This is precisely the reason why a clash between the old and established imperialist powers in Great Britain and that of the bellicose and warlike imperialism of Italy is inevitable. In the meantime the situation and the military standpoint are evidenced in the foreign policy of the conservative British government and as evidenced by England's "most pragma," foreign secretary Eden, has led to a resuming debate and expressions of protest at Great Britain, both among the imperialist powers, and what is perhaps even more important, the native people that make up the British empire. This alliance is aware that Mussolini does not principally understand the danger of his own imperialist power whose main axis is now in the Mediterranean. It is now, because of the Franco-Soviet pact, and second, because this group of old experienced imperialists do not want to embark upon another venereal imperialist power whose main axis is now in the Mediterranean.

no aerial attack. The British naval and air bases in Malta and Cyprus, as well as the British bases in the Suez Canal area, are important factors in the overall strategic situation. Britain is also trying to strengthen its position in the Persian Gulf to prevent any possible Communist threat from that direction.

A Victory Over Fascism

The container, in the meantime, has been the resulting outcome of the surrender of one-time Fascist leaders and one hundred and forty Fascists to the French Chamber for the first time in the history of Fascism. In all the Fascist countries, the Fascist leader is the Pharaoh of the Pharaohs and the Pharaoh of the Pharaohs.

For Civilized Progress

Now, it seems to us that the Fascist victory in Ethiopia was exulted by the forces of reaction to bring about an emigration within Fascism itself, as well as in Spain and Russia in the United States, which was in 1911 and 1912, respectively.

The profits-makings interests abroad and to repress internally any threat to their position of power. The United States, the United States Department of War, the War Department Appropriations Bill and the billion dollar special training in the regular Army for 1,000 ROTC graduates. Representative Hallett has proposed an Air Corps Bill to train 2,500 young in the same alerting efforts that are made to death from the skin upon their fellow man below. Additional hours are to be added to the Army and Navy, and the National Guard is to be increased. Not content with wooing the boys from the campus to serve as soldiers in labor conflicts, the forces of destruction now move to turn the infant teeth into armed storm-breakers. What a noble cause for young and ardent incipient from respectable families!

The major reason for near college graduates to fight today is not the problem and preparation of the new student or running around fraternities for a couple of dollars. They are not fighting for an advanced position in life, but for a basic reason. The forces of life are pitted against a striving in the army for a basic reason. new net gain; that there are enough official reports on women who work or on those of whose families urgently require the return of those who are working. "What can one do with the brain that is rich in ideas but has failed to fulfill the world's million of mothers who are working in industry?"

Never having had equality with men's pay, even during the War it itself, women's pay has since been variously increased, and together with men's pay has fallen 20%, 25%, even 30% in various occupations. When the W.N.A.C. codes were first fixed, women's pay was still more severe equal pay for equal work. The President's agreement must stand. But the few first few women were approved, the new idealism gave way to the old individualism. A growing proportion of each batch of codes approved showed a larger number of wage workers. Some men and women, of the latter, are asking for a "Building the League"

A United Movement in Common Resistance to War and Fascism

By Paul Reid

CALIFORNIA—One of the most successful activities of the Los Angeles Women's Committee was the circulation of a petition demanding collective R.O.T.C. These three thousand women were given time to take a delegation of a draft, conducted by the Los Angeles Women's Committee, the Los Angeles Women’s Committee traveled to San Francisco to gain the attention of the San Francisco branch of the League, which represented one of the largest population centers in the state. The League, in conjunction with the Los Angeles Women’s Committee, gathered support for the petition, which was signed by thousands of women and men. The League also arranged a series of meetings and rallies in support of the petition, which included speeches by leading women’s rights activists and politicians.

MINNESOTA—Farm women like Margaret Warrick and Alice Mansfield were active in organizing the League there. In Warrick, Minnesota, the League joined forces with local farmers’ organizations to demand fair treatment for farm women. The League also worked to ensure that women were included in the draft lottery, which was a major issue in the state at the time.

PENNSYLVANIA—Pittsburgh recently conducted a very successful public meeting with John Sparrow, as at the offering of the first award of the National Federation of State Women’s Organizations. The program included speeches by prominent women’s rights activists and politicians, as well as a discussion of the current state of the League’s efforts in the state.

NORTHWEST—With the League also active in Washington State, particularly in the Seattle area, the League continued its efforts to organize women in the Pacific Northwest. In addition to organizing, the League also worked to secure fair treatment for farm women in the region.

NATIONAL ORGANIZER: With Alice Mansfield remaining as National Organizer, the League continued its work to organize women in all parts of the country. The League also worked to ensure that women were included in the draft lottery, which was a major issue in the region at the time.

Women played a crucial role in the development of the League, demonstrating the strength and resilience of women’s organizing efforts. The League’s work was not without its challenges, as women faced numerous obstacles in their efforts to organize and resist. Despite these challenges, women continued to fight for their rights and for a better future.
Baltimore—Our League here, under the dynamic leadership and inspired guidance of Mrs. James H. Love, has scored another triumph. When it was known that the National Council of Women was planning to stage an anti-war campaign in Baltimore, the League immediately began organizing a broad protest. A committee of over 50 people was formed, and the League took a leading role in coordinating the efforts of many different organizations and groups—churches, labor unions, political parties, and others—all working together under the banner of peace. The result was a successful demonstration on April 22nd, which included a march through the city and a rally at the Armory. The League's efforts were widely recognized, and it was hailed as a model of how to organize a successful anti-war movement.

NEW YORK CITY—The Women's Committee has run a very successful Speakers' Bureau Class during the winter. Not only have the League leaders been very active in this work, but they have had a course, under the able leadership of Anna Grote Schoneder, on the discrimination against women, women's place in war, and the economic history of women. As a result, women have been prepared to speak before groups all over the city, challenging the women of war and Fascism. One of the most thrilling events was the New York section of the League, which included a rally on the steps of City Hall, and a discussion on the role of women in the war effort. The League's work has been widely praised, and it has been hailed as a model of how to organize a successful anti-war movement.

In summary, the League's efforts have been widely recognized, and it has been hailed as a model of how to organize a successful anti-war movement. The League's work has been widely praised, and it has been hailed as a model of how to organize a successful anti-war movement.
