GOOD NEIGHBORS

YOU CAN'T be a good neighbor unless you're a neighbor. And at the same time, if you really know the problems of the man next door or the people across the broker, you can't fail to work together for the utmost good.

That's our belief. And that's why we're going to continue and redouble our efforts to bring you real, true, living human news of the great American people, of all the brotherhood of the American peoples of Europe and Asia, of the African struggles for freedom.

In this time of our "small world," how can you afford to be without unprejudiced vital information on our neighboring peoples? Subscribe to The Fight, at only $1 a year.

THE FIGHT, February 1939

With the Readers

FEBRUARY—the month of American honoring. And one of those acts of honor is to revere the memory of our pioneers, the great American men, who make up the nation that we love and honor.

We refer to George Washington, the Father of our Country.

He is dead, but his life and work will be remembered and written through the land. He is in the schoolbooks, the songs, and the homes of the children who try to live up to his example. The memory of such a dead hero is a living thing, a magic, a mystery.

AND in some cases, we have honored not in a new manner; we have honored them more with our present life. We have shown the new generation to our fathers. His dynamic nature and leadership have shown us through the years, and we have appreciated his achievements.

We have found the man of his time to be a man of times. He is unique.

TRUE, a hundred and fifty years make a long time. We entrust our own future to the future, when we are gone, but George Washington's life and work will live on to tell his own story, and he will be the first, we hope, in that new hero, his name.

We cannot reach him, but we can reach General Washington. How can we do it, with this on our earth, the world's greatest democracy, so bright and clean? We have some of the greatest men, some of the greatest minds, in the world. Their names are known to us all, and their deeds are watched by the world. They have done their best, they have done their duty, and we have done the same.

THE British were just as successful in their lives, as in their times, in all the things they did, and we can still appreciate them. They were men of the stature of George Washington, they were men of the stature of a great task force. Their work is not done yet, they have not reached the heights. Their work is not yet done, they have not yet reached the limits.

GEORGE WASHINGTON lived to see the nation as a nation, as a nation, as a nation, as a nation.

The Nazis in America

ABE the program in Germany which have shocked the world to be repeated in America? Is an effort being made here to bring about a Fascist régime? We have learned that long before any overt act, aggression begins with preliminary propaganda, subsidized penetration, the loosening of ties of good will, stirring of prejudices and the inception of ill will.

With these words President Roosevelt in his message to Congress plainly described the activities of the Nazis in destroying the independent Democracy of Czechoslovakia. Other nations have been similarly weakened with the "subsidized penetration" of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis.

In the United States menace from this penetration? Or are Hitler's agents here actively carrying out the preliminaries referred to by the President?

Just off the press, "Nazi Penetration in America" is a definitive study of the German-American Bund and other sections of the Nazi movement in the United States. What are the Nazi organizations here and how do they operate? Who are their friends? Where are their centers of strength? What causes do they maintain? What about their activity in stirring anti-Semitism and race hatred?

"Nazi Penetration in America," by Abraham Chapman, answers these questions and many more. The American League for Peace and Democracy is proud to be able to distribute this pamphlet at only five cents a copy (and with reduced rates for bundle orders). We urge you to buy a copy for yourself; we urge you to see if your friends receive copies; we urge you to arrange for large numbers to be circulated in your locality.

"Nazi Penetration in America" gives a most timely warning of the activities which threaten the security and peace of the people of our country. It reveals the subversive agents who would overthrow our democratic government and make our nation a puppet of the Unholy Alliance. You cannot afford to miss, or to let your friends miss, "Nazi Penetration in America." (Five cents a copy.)

Organize for Freedom!

The American people must defend their free and peaceful way of life from the enemies that threaten within and without... Address of the president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen to the American Congress for Peace and Democracy

By A. F. Whitney

IT IS FITTING that the American Congress for Peace and Democracy open its sessions with a labor rally in our nation's capital. The American Bill of Rights, enshrined in the United States Constitution, guarantees every citizen the right to petition the government for a redress of grievances, and it is by virtue of the sanction of that privilege that we assemble today. Capital Hill is open not only to our grievances, but our aspirations as well.

The railroad brothers were also not in Congress many years ago to express their resentment against a national government which sought to carry through a policy of reaction without representation. A few of the brothers, seeking to bring their grievances and their unhappiness to King George, were compelled to read the hated Act, and in the column, written and humanized, the "threat was hurled... By to parrot a demonstration as could have prevented the deliberation from front civil opposition."

A Congress of Defense

Unlike the Stamp Act Congress, however, the American Congress for Peace and Democracy has assembled not to reverse the government for reparations, but rather to defend the government and the people from dangers which threaten from within and from without. As it is, there are indications that our forces are under attack, indeed, the Democrats which has established more than a century and a half ago is without a doubt, now facing the test of survival. For within the last few years an ugly spectre has arisen to plague the world
The Negroes, who are a substantial portion of the population of the United States, have always been treated with great injustice and discrimination. They have been denied the same rights and opportunities as white Americans, and their struggle for equality has been long and arduous.

The struggle for civil rights for African Americans began in the 1950s and 1960s with the Civil Rights Movement. This movement was led by figures such as Martin Luther King Jr. and Malcolm X, who advocated for nonviolent and violent resistance to segregation and discrimination.

One of the most significant events in the civil rights movement was the Montgomery Bus Boycott in 1955-1956, which was organized by Rosa Parks. The boycott was sparked by the arrest of Parks, who refused to give up her seat on a segregated bus. The boycott lasted for more than a year and eventually led to the desegregation of the Montgomery bus system.

In 1957, the first Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC) was founded by King to advocate for civil rights and mobilize a strategy of nonviolent direct action. The SCLC became a key player in the civil rights movement, organizing protests, sit-ins, and marches to demand equality for African Americans.

In 1963, King delivered his famous "I Have a Dream" speech during the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom. This speech called for an end to racism, poverty, and discrimination and inspired millions around the world.

The Civil Rights Act of 1964 prohibited discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, or national origin in the United States. This act was a major victory for the civil rights movement and marked a significant step towards equality.

However, the struggle for civil rights continues today. African Americans still face systemic racism and inequality in areas such as education, housing, and employment. The Black Lives Matter movement, which began in response to the killing of George Floyd, has brought renewed attention to the issue of police brutality and systemic racism.

The fight for civil rights is ongoing, and there is still much work to be done to ensure equality and justice for all Americans, regardless of race.
Make Democracy Work

To preserve a free nation, our government must enable the people to realize their right to work . . . Address of the secretary of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers

By James B. Carey

DEMOCRACY today faces a challenge more serious than it has ever faced before. In large and important areas of the world it has been challenged and challenged successfully, at least for the moment. Many millions of men and women have had their freedom taken away from them, their right to organize, their right to strike freely, to bargain collectively, for the improvement of their material and cultural standards of life.

We read about these vicious anti-democratic forces, and we feel angry at injustice and fear. We don’t want it to happen here. We don’t want our labor unions destroyed and our living standards driven down and our people burdened too heavily to work and compete—nor do we want these things we have been free to do in the United States, the benefits and the opportunities that we have enjoyed and that we enjoyed in America here put in us as we haven’t determined this way.

But we must not be too optimistic about our future. Our Democracy works, in the sense that it is functioning. We have a Constitution that assigns functions to the government. The Constitution is not a living organism, it is not a living body. It is a collection of rules that govern our lives. But if we look at the Constitution and the way it is being applied, we see that it is not functioning as it should.

We need to ensure that the Constitution is being applied in a way that is consistent with the principles of democracy. We need to ensure that the Constitution is being applied in a way that is consistent with the principles of democracy. We need to ensure that the Constitution is being applied in a way that is consistent with the principles of democracy. We need to ensure that the Constitution is being applied in a way that is consistent with the principles of democracy.

The People in the Lobby

The Congress delegates talked of strikes and stockcrops, of China and Cleveland, and they were more representative than a Gallup poll.

By Jean Lyon

That was a man from an A. F. of L. Palace Union local. His name was Rudolph Johnson, and he came from Cleveland. It was his first American League Congress. And he said, "I pledged a dollar to my local in return for one cent, because when you stand up and make a speech, you wind up with a union. That's the only truth— that the Congress is the biggest thing there is. The lodge has been here over 100 years, and I know the union will be here for another 100 years." He said he was going to start a new union in his local.

Just standing in the lobby, he heard some of his union leaders say, "We can't do anything without the help of the Congress." And he said, "I'm not going to do anything without the help of the Congress." And he said, "I'm going to start a new union in my local." He said he was going to start a new union in his local.

As an Unemployed Girl

This was a 12-year-old girl, 120 pounds, from another country, and I said, "I'm unemployed, too." She said, "I'm a PolishGirl," and she was a delegate from a local in the steel industry. She was the only boy in the union. She had been in the Congress two years ago in Cleveland, and since then she had been living in the industrial school at Wisconsin University, and now she was going to her union. She said, "I'm unemployed, too." And she was a delegate from another country.

But she was more interested in the union. She was a delegate from another country, and she was more interested in the union. She was the only boy in the union. She had been in the Congress two years ago in Cleveland, and since then she had been living in the industrial school at Wisconsin University, and now she was going to her union. She said, "I'm unemployed, too." And she was a delegate from another country.

Movies

An important picture presents the illusory third of our nation.

One third of a nation does not exist. It is a myth that has been perpetuated by the film industry for the purpose of promoting their products.

The reality is that one third of the nation is a minority group that is often overlooked in the portrayal of their lives in the media.

It is important to recognize the reality of one third of the nation and to work towards creating a more inclusive society.

When Clay came to the breakfast table, Clay was smoking his coffee. "I dreamed I won," the man said. "I was sitting there, the next thing I knew, I was in Chicago."

"And Clay drank his tomato juice and poured cream on the purple plate. "We were going back!" he said.

"That's right, we went to meet our lady," his wife exclaimed. "Her name is Maggie Black."

"Maggie was in the kitchen. She raised the rear of her couch and called her head Clay. When I was sitting there, you were with her, and the room was filled with the breakfast food."

"No, she was in the bedroom," his wife countered. "And Clay, when you were in the bedroom, you were alone."

"I'm not saying anything about that," his wife replied. "I'm just saying that you were both alone."

"We are both alone," his wife insisted. "And Clay, when you were in the bedroom, you were alone."

The Question of Arms

The question of arms is one of the most pressing and important problems of the day. The arms race is a threat to world peace and security, and the pursuit of arms is a waste of resources and a drain on the economies of nations. The issue of arms control and disarmament is therefore of paramount importance. The world community must work together to reduce the nuclear arms race and promote disarmament.

The New York Stock Exchange - A New Era of Progress

The New York Stock Exchange has announced the appointment of Robert W. McAllister as its new president. Mr. McAllister, who succeeds the late Charles H. Joy, has been associated with the Exchange for many years and has held various positions, including that of vice-president and general counsel. He is regarded as a strong leader and a progressive figure in the financial community.

Mr. McAllister's appointment follows a period of transition for the Exchange, which has undergone significant changes in recent years. The introduction of electronic trading systems and the expansion of international operations have been among the major developments.

The new president is expected to focus on maintaining the Exchange's reputation for integrity and excellence, as well as on adapting to the challenges of the modern financial marketplace.

In a statement, Mr. McAllister said: "I am deeply honored to be chosen to lead the New York Stock Exchange at this exciting time in its history. I look forward to working with the directors and staff to ensure that the Exchange continues to be a leader in the financial community.

The Exchange has a long and proud tradition of serving the needs of investors, and I believe that we can build on this foundation to meet the challenges of the future.

I am committed to maintaining the Exchange's reputation for honesty, integrity, and fairness, and to ensuring that it remains a vital and dynamic force in the financial marketplace.

I am grateful to the Exchange's directors for their confidence in me, and I am committed to working hard to earn their trust and the trust of the investing public.

I believe that the New York Stock Exchange can play a crucial role in helping to build a strong and prosperous economy, and I am excited about the opportunities that lie ahead.

I am confident that we can continue to serve the needs of investors and to excel in the financial marketplace, and I look forward to working with all of you to achieve these goals."
Good Will Must Act

By Lewis Mumford

Good Will Must Act

HE ONE thing that is surprising about the present outlook that has taken place in Germany is that it should have surprised anyone. Our attitude, our leaders of opinion, have throughout the world made it clear that they were in favor of a peaceful settlement; that they believed in democracy and international understanding. They have been working for them all these years. The Fascists have not only failed to live up to their promises, but they have fulfilled them too well. They have given the world a lesson in the power of the masses. They have shown what can be done by a people united in a common cause.

The lesson is clear: the world must unite to save itself.

Fascism and Democracy are not just two opposing political claims. They are two different ways of looking at the world. Fascism is a way of life, a way of thinking, a way of behaving. It is a way of achieving power through force and intimidation. Democracy is a way of life, a way of thinking, a way of behaving. It is a way of achieving power through consent and cooperation.

The future of the world depends on which of these two ways of looking at the world we choose to follow.

We must act now to prevent the spread of Fascism.

The Spanish people fight bravely against the Fascists with the moral support of the world. Their struggle is our struggle. We must stand with them.

To halt Fascism, we must lift our embargo on the Spanish government (wire your Congressman today) . . . An address before the recent conference of the Lawyers' Committee on American Relations with Spain

February 28, 1939, THE FIGHT
Rights of the Negro

The right to vote is one of the basic freedoms of a democratic society. It is through the ballot box that the people have the power to make decisions about their lives. The right to vote is not just a right, it is a duty. It is a duty to use our voices to make our collective will known.

The right to freedom of speech is another fundamental right. It allows us to express our opinions and ideas without fear of censorship or retaliation. This right is essential for the free exchange of information and ideas, and for the growth of democracy.

The right to privacy is also important. It allows us to make decisions about our lives without interference from others. This right is essential for the freedom to live our lives as we choose.

These are just a few examples of the fundamental rights and freedoms that all people should enjoy. It is important that we work together to ensure that these rights are protected and that they are enjoyed by all people, regardless of their race, gender, or any other characteristic.

We must continue to fight for these rights and freedoms, and to advocate for the rights of all people. Only then can we truly live in a society that is free and just.

Women's part in the trade union movement

...The question of Negro rights

I HAVE SEARCHED for some time now for the fact that women in industry do not often go in to the trade unions. This is a consequence of their status in society, which is often defined by their role as mothers and caregivers. Women are often expected to prioritize the needs of their families over their own interests. This can make it difficult for them to join unions, which require membership in order to participate in collective bargaining and other activities.

As a result, women are often excluded from the benefits of trade union membership, leaving them vulnerable to exploitation and discrimination. This is a violation of their human rights, as outlined in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

It is important that we work to change this situation, and to ensure that women have equal access to the benefits of trade union membership. This includes providing support and resources to help women join unions, as well as fighting for policies that promote gender equality in the workplace.

We must also work to change the attitudes and beliefs that prevent women from joining unions. This includes challenging the idea that women are too busy with their households to join unions, and that they are not interested in the work that unions do.

Together, we can work to make sure that women have the same rights and opportunities as men, and that they can join unions and participate in the struggle for justice and equality.
Building the League

A United Movement in Commune Resistance to War and Fascism

By Russell Thayer

Our growing Congress has continued influence in Washington and throughout the world, and the time has come when the Congress or the American people are ready to end the political association that has been the direct cause of the League and its projects.

Amicability and understanding have been the result of the League's influence, and the League has done much to foster them. Among the nations that have taken part in the League's activities, the Congress is the only one that has shown any interest in the League's work. The League's influence has been increased by the League's success in promoting understanding among the American people.

The League's influence has been increased by the League's success in promoting understanding among the American people. The League's influence has been increased by the League's success in promoting understanding among the American people. The League's influence has been increased by the League's success in promoting understanding among the American people.

Youth Notes

THE National Student Federation of America, meeting at Fordham University, New York, in October, has been engaging in discussions on various issues pertinent to the current political climate. The federation is composed of students from across the nation, aiming to address the pressing concerns of youth and promote social justice.

In a recent resolution, the National Student Federation discussed the importance of education and proposed several measures to improve access to higher education. They called for the reduction of tuition fees, increased funding for academic programs, and the implementation of policies that ensure a more inclusive and equitable educational environment.

The federation also addressed the issue of climate change and its impact on future generations. They called for immediate action to mitigate the effects of global warming and to promote sustainable practices in all aspects of society.

In addition, the National Student Federation highlighted the need for stronger international cooperation in addressing global challenges, such as poverty, disease, and conflict. They emphasized the importance of diplomacy and dialogue in resolving international disputes and fostering peace.

Overall, the National Student Federation of America is committed to empowering students and advocating for their rights and needs. They believe that a collective effort is necessary to create a more just and equitable society for all.

The Post and the Future

Mooney, a man of the people, was the leader of labor and the organizer of the workers. His main goal was to improve the lives of the working class. He was a strong advocate for the rights of the workers and fought against the exploitation of labor. Mooney was arrested and convicted for a crime he did not commit, but he fought for his freedom and never gave up. He was a true hero of the labor movement.

What do you think about the events of the past decade, and what do you think is the future of labor? Do you think the working class will continue to fight for their rights, or will they accept the现状 as it is? What do you think is the role of the labor movement in today's society?
