The meeting was called to order at 9:30 a.m. by Distributor E. W. W. of the Rand Union, who took the chair. The meeting was then adjourned until 10 a.m.

What Do You Say To This?

Editor, Industrial Union Bulletin

I have said and will say again that the time to act was in the days of August and September. Another letter is set to be published in the next number of this magazine under the pen name of "W. J. M."

Competition and Exploitation in the Railway Service

BY W. J. MOORE

This survey of exploitation developed a few paragraphs which are always in the air. The Editor has been unable to secure an interview with the President of the S. S. S. T., the head of the Long Island Railroad, the chief of the New York Central, the president of the Pennsylvania, the president of the L. O. W. and other railroad officials, who have not been able to be reached by the Editor. In the stead of these gentlemen, the article is signed by the editor of the S. S. S. T. and the editor of the Long Island Railroad, and the article is accompanied by a letter from the S. S. S. T. and the Long Island Railroad.

LEARN WHAT IT IS

To know what Industrial Unionism is you must read what is said about it in the newspapers and magazines. The following are some of the best articles on the subject:

- "The Industrial Union Movement" by W. E. Trumath, published in the Chicago Tribune.
- "The Industrial Union Movement" by W. E. Trumath, published in the Chicago Star.

INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD

The Industrial Workers of the World (I.W.W.) is an organization of workers who are seeking to improve their working conditions and living standards through collective bargaining and organized labor. The I.W.W. was founded in 1905 and has been active in the United States and Canada. The organization is known for its radical views and often engages in unrest and direct action to achieve its goals. The I.W.W. is considered one of the most successful labor unions in the history of the United States. The I.W.W. has been involved in many notable labor disputes, including the Ludlow Massacre and the Butte Mine Wars. Today, the I.W.W. continues to advocate for workers' rights and social justice, although it has been largely overshadowed by the larger, more conventional labor unions in the United States.

There is a Class Struggle in Society

The following letter by Roy C. Rawson, to the former Executive Board of the Western Federation of Miners, is reprinted here because it is a clear, concise statement of the principles of the Western Federation of Miners. Following your lead, many of us have, we believe, arrived at a similar conclusion. The letter was written several years ago, but it is as fresh and gripping today as it was when it was written. It is an example of the kind of work that the Western Federation of Miners should be doing today.

The Western Federation of Miners is an organization of working people for the defense of their rights. It is a class organization, and as such it cannot be indifferent to the class struggle. It is not enough to organize against the capitalist system; we must also organize against the worker-owners. The Western Federation of Miners must be the vanguard of the working class, leading the workers to victory over the capitalist class.

The Western Federation of Miners must be a political organization, not a social welfare agency. It must be a revolutionary organization, not a reformist one. It must be a class organization, not a sectional one. It must be a national organization, not a local one. It must be a united organization, not a divided one.

The Western Federation of Miners must be the class struggle in society.
