BRIEF EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES ON VARIETY OF CONVENTION TOPICS

A SPECIAL ISSUE OF LABOR'S UNION BULLETIN

The successful working classes are asking for an end to the war, and so far our war efforts have been only partially successful. The war has brought great suffering and loss, and the working classes have suffered more than any other class in the world. This is why we must continue the war effort and do our best to bring about peace.

At the last meeting of the convention, there was a debate on the question of labor unions. Some argued that labor unions were necessary for the protection of workers, while others believed that they were unnecessary and a hindrance to progress. The majority of the delegates believed that labor unions were necessary for the protection of workers, and the convention passed a resolution in support of labor unions.

The delegates also discussed the question of wages for workers. Some argued that wages should be increased, while others believed that wages should remain the same. The majority of the delegates believed that wages should be increased, and the convention passed a resolution in support of increased wages.

At the last meeting of the convention, there was a debate on the question of industrial relations. Some argued that industrial relations should be improved, while others believed that they were unnecessary and a hindrance to progress. The majority of the delegates believed that industrial relations should be improved, and the convention passed a resolution in support of improved industrial relations.

The delegates also discussed the question of social security. Some argued that social security should be expanded, while others believed that it was unnecessary and a hindrance to progress. The majority of the delegates believed that social security should be expanded, and the convention passed a resolution in support of expanded social security.

The next meeting of the convention will be held in three months, and the delegates will continue to discuss the various topics that were discussed at this meeting.

AFRAID OF AN IDEA IN ALASKA

Attempt to Crush a Revolutionary Paper and How It Failed

(from the Nevada Industrial Workers)

The recent attempt to suppress the Nevada Industrial Workers, which is published in Las Vegas, is an example of how the capitalist class is trying to crush the working class. The suppression of this paper is an attempt to suppress the ideas of the working class and to prevent them from spreading.

The Nevada Industrial Workers is a paper that is published by the Industrial Workers of the World, which is a union that represents workers in the mining and related industries. The union has been in existence for over 50 years and has a long history of fighting for the rights of workers.

Stuttgart Congress

ALMOST

On I.W.W. Ground

Extracts from Resolution adopted by the Congress on the Relation of Economic Organization to the Political Party.

"To emancipate the proletariat completely from the bonds of the Intellectual, Political and Economic Socialists, the Political and the Economic Struggle are alike necessary."

But

"The Union will not fully perform their duty in the struggle for the emancipation of the workers, unless a thorough Socialist spirit inspires their work."

Add to the Above:

That the INDUSTRIAL UNION, the Economic Organization of the Working Class, of primary importance and must supersede the political state, and the World Movement must be placed in the city of the Socialist Union."

EVERY MAN TO HIS POST

The third annual convention of the Industrial Workers of the World, the largest and most important meeting of the Socialist movement in the history of the movement, will be held in St. Louis, on Thursday and Friday of this week, and the members of the union are called upon to attend. The convention will be held in the Madison Hall, and will be opened at 8 o'clock on the morning of the first day. The I.W.W. will meet to discuss the question of the transition to socialism, and to hear the reports of the various departments of the union. The convention will be called to order by John Mitchell, the general secretary of the union, and will be conducted by the various officers of the union, who will be elected by the delegates in attendance.

The convention will be attended by a large number of representatives from all parts of the country, and will be conducted in a democratic spirit. The rules of the union will be adopted, and the convention will be conducted in a manner that will be satisfactory to all. Address to Boot and Shoe Workers of the United States and Canada
By One of their Number

Fellow Workers—At this time a great work is being done in the United States, and the results so far obtained are causing a great amount of attention on the part of employers and manufacturers. The efforts of the organizations of workers and the strength of the unions are steadily increasing. Employers have been compelled to recognize the power of the unions and the importance of their work. The work of organizing the workers is being carried on with great energy and determination. The results so far obtained are beyond all expectations and the future looks bright and promising. The work of organizing the workers is being carried on with great energy and determination. GLEANINGS ALONG THE ROAD

I received my friends when I got home and told them about the success of our efforts. The workers are gaining ground and the employers are compelled to recognize the power of the unions. The work of organizing the workers is being carried on with great energy and determination. The results so far obtained are beyond all expectations and the future looks bright and promising.

A. F. L. Lends Its Aid to Japanese Workers

Japan's Labor Issue

Japan's labor issue is one of the most pressing problems facing the country today. The Workers' Union has been striving to gain recognition and improve conditions for its members, who are often subjected to harsh working conditions and low wages. The union has been advocating for better working hours, safer working conditions, and fair wages. The government and employers have been resistant to these demands, but the union continues to fight for its members' rights.

PREAMBLE OF THE I. W. W.

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There is nothing that they can do in common, that they have in common, that they can form the basis of any common action. They have different interests, and their different interests focus their wills in the same direction. They have nothing in common but their misfortunes.

The rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the control of property in the hands of a few - the employing class - make the trade unions unable to cope with the ever-growing weight of capital, and the trade-unions, without the aid of the working class, cannot alter the conditions of the working class. The trade unions must therefore form the working class into a class, to organize the working class as a class, to fight against the employing class as such. This can only be achieved by a radical change in the political organization of the world.

Because labor seeks to establish a new social order, it is necessary to understand the dynamics of political struggle. The working class needs to unite with other classes that share its goals and aspirations. The slogan "The working class is the master of history" encapsulates this idea. By understanding the political landscape, labor can make strategic decisions and allies to advance its cause.
