How to the Line; Let the Chips Fall Where They May

BY F.W. HESLEWOOD

The Western Federation of Miners, "the mining division of the Industrial Workers of the World," has just completed the year 1907. In its files appear to be entries for 2,346 cases involving 10,227 miners. This means that out of 23,460 men who are members of the W.F. of M., about one hundred in ten were discharged in the course of the year. The average number of men discharged by the W.F. of M. each year is about 1,000. This is a great reduction in the number of men discharged by the W.F. of M. in the past, which has always been in the neighborhood of 5,000. The reduction is due to the fact that the W.F. of M. has become more effective in organizing the men, and the men are more willing to accept the organization's demands.

The Strike Blocker

From New York "on an account of evasion and falsification of labor," the "strike-blocker"... For the Liberation of Preston and Smith

Over twenty months have passed since the time when the Miners Association of South Africa was formed by the workers of the Witwatersrand, under the leadership of Preston and Smith. The work of the Association has been characterised by its activity in various branches of mine life, ranging from the protection of the miners' rights to the promotion of social welfare. The activities of the Association have been hampered by the opposition of the mine owners, who have used all means at their disposal to defeat the aims of the workers. The strike-blocker, however, is a significant development in this struggle, as it represents a new tactic employed by the mine owners to frustrate the efforts of the workers. The strike-blocker is a device designed to delay or prevent the flow of essential goods and materials to the mines, thereby disrupting the normal operations of the mines and weakening the position of the workers. This tactic is particularly serious for the workers, as it not only disrupts their work, but also affects their families and communities. The strike-blocker is a clear indication of the intensity of the struggle and the determination of the mine owners to maintain their power and control. The workers of the Witwatersrand must continue their struggle with increased determination and resourcefulness, in order to overcome this new tactic employed by the mine owners. The victory of the workers will depend on their ability to counteract the effects of the strike-blocker and to maintain their solidarity and unity. The strike-blocker is a challenge, but it is also an opportunity for the workers to demonstrate their strength and determination, and to show the world that they are not afraid to fight for their rights and for a better future. The workers of the Witwatersrand have always been known for their courage and resilience, and they will continue to fight until victory is achieved.
