THE GIRL WITH A MISSION

Elizabeth Guertey Flynn, Addresses a Packed House at Duluth on Labor Day

The visit of Elizabeth Guertey Flynn to Duluth last week was most successful in every respect. The meeting was held in the Women's Christian Temperance Union Hall, and was attended by a large and enthusiastic crowd. Miss Flynn, who is the president of the National Women's Trade Union League, spoke on the subject of the working girl and her conditions.

Mr. Flynn's address was well received, and the audience showed their appreciation by a loud applause. The meeting was adjourned at ten o'clock at night, and the hall was still filled with enthusiastic workers.

Crime Traced to Social Causes

The cause of crime is not to be found in the individual, but in the social system. Crime is the result of social conditions, and the duty of the law is to reform the individual, not to punish.

The question of crime is one of the most important questions of our time. The law is not the solution of the problem, but the means of prevention. The law is a means of preventing the individual from committing crime, not of punishing him after he has committed it.

Mullaney's Mind Probably Poisoned

The story of the poisoning of Mullaney has been a matter of great concern to the working class. The case has been under investigation for some time, and it is now believed that Mullaney was poisoned by his employer.

The employer has been charged with the crime, and he is now facing a trial. The case has caused a great deal of public interest, and the trial is expected to attract a large crowd.

THEY SHUN THE LIMELIGHT

The strike of the greengrocers in New Zealand is to be regarded as a striking example of the tendency towards the concentration of the industrial struggle in the hands of the working class. The strike was the result of the failure of the working class to organize and to unite, and in the absence of any other organization, the strike was nothing more than a continuation of the usual struggle between the employers and the workers. The strike lasted for six months, and the workers were not able to obtain any real benefits from it.

GOMPSERS A GRAFTER?

The president of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers, is charged with embezzlement of funds in the organization of the Knights of Labor. The charge is based on the fact that the president of the Knights of Labor, who was also a member of the American Federation of Labor, had been elected to the position of the Knights of Labor. The charge is, however, denied by the president of the Knights of Labor.

ECONOMIC DETERMINATION

Economic determination is systematic exploitation of the workers in the interests of the capitalists. In fact, it is the only way to make the workers understand that they are exploited. The workers are systematically exploited by the capitalists, and this is the only way to make the workers understand that they are exploited.

GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

The General Executive Board met on the morning of February 25th, 1907. Mr. H. O. Williams, the president of the industrial union, was present. The minutes were read and approved.

ECONOMIC DETERMINISM

How Social Institutions Came into Existence Through Changing Methods of Production

FROM THE PAST TO THE FUTURE

BY WOOD H. MILLIE

Chapter One

The Social Institution is constructed to give an answer to the experiences that each generation encounters. As the world changes, so do the institutions which are built to meet those changes. The economic theory of society is one of the most important parts of this construction. It seeks to explain the processes by which society is formed, and how it continues to exist over a wide range of time. The economy of society is thus seen as a system of social institutions, and the factors that influence its development are studied in detail.

Chapter Two

The changes in society are caused by changes in the environment. As the environment changes, so do the institutions that are built to meet those changes. The economy of society is thus seen as a system of social institutions, and the factors that influence its development are studied in detail.

Chapter Three

The economy of society is thus seen as a system of social institutions, and the factors that influence its development are studied in detail.
PREAMBLE OF THE I.W.W.

The working class and the employing class stand in the attitude of armed enemies, each ready at any moment to use its might against the other. This attitude characterizes an actual class struggle carried out by two classes who have different ideas of the social order and who have never been able to live together. This struggle has resulted in a constant waxing and waning of labor organizations, strikes, lockouts, and wars. In a war there is no love lost between the combatants.

The working class needs, therefore, a new weapon. It needs a new method of conducting its struggle against employers and against state and church. It needs a new organizational form, one end of which points toward the industrial union with all its meaning and implications.

Conventions are called, resolutions are adopted, reports are made, doctrines are expounded. But the essential thing is missing: the trade unionists are afraid to conduct a strike, to use any weapon against the employers. The essential question, "shall we fight or shall we submit?" is not raised for decision.

They know that the workers will be defeated if they cannot or will not fight. They stand in fear of the struggle. They stand in fear of the workers as a class. They have adopted the slogan, "Let us not fight."

Now, more than ever before, the trade unionists must understand that the time has come for a new movement. The past is past and we can not go back. The workers are determined to begin the fight.

The old methods and the old slogans are not enough. The workers must be organized to meet the employers as a class. They must have the methods of the industrial union.

Therefore, we stand for the new movement. We stand for the industrial union. We stand for the new slogan: "THE STRIKE IS THE WORKER'S ARMS."
