A CALL FOR ACTION BY MILITANTS

To the Various Locals of the Western Federation of Miners,

Dear Sirs and Brothers:—Whereas, as the Trade Union Conference of August 22, 1908, and the Western Federation of Miners, with the entire laboring class, are deeply interested in the just demands and the struggle for the rights of the different communities, we have decided to give you this call for action in order that you may be informed of the situation and have the opportunity to consider and take the necessary steps to carry out the wishes of your fellow workingmen.

The situation is as follows: The management of the mine has refused to negotiate with the union, and the workers have been forced to go on strike in order to secure a just settlement of the dispute. The struggle is now at a critical stage, and the workers are in need of assistance in order to carry on the fight.

We urge upon you the importance of this matter and the necessity for immediate action. We respectfully request that you will give us your early consideration.

Respectfully submitted,

INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM (SYNDICALISM) IN ITS ECOLOGY

In the periodical "Morgen" Professor Werner Sombart gives his views and a criticism of the Syndicalist (Industrial Union) movement.

He refuses to be deterred by the near future in the Bulletin, but what interests me is more his objective review of the meaning of the, as well as the literature of the International Industrial Union Movement. We reproduce here a part of that view: the Syndicalists will be accomplished the transformation of the capitalist system of society into one that is more to be desired, and that is a definite and theoretically definite tendency, and that is the revolutionary will-power of the proletariat, which is developed into a practical will-power to take the whole capitalist system by storm, and to realize that power and that, in the form of a new social organization.

But what are these elements? Strictly taken, there is but one power, and that is not a truth, but a shadow, and that is the revolutionary will-power of the proletariat, which is developed into a practical will-power to take the whole capitalist system by storm, and to realize that power, will-power is the only possible way to realize the old methods of production and old forms of production as modern and new forms of production. Within it is embedded also an element of cultural life, a form of life of production. But if we look at the conditions of this revolutionary movement, it is the slowest, perhaps, only permitted revolutionary armistice of the eighties. Simple and single union methods do not work any more because the proletariat has to perform its duties for the attainment of freedom, without any capital. The Syndicalist movement is furthering his hopes for the future of the economy of the combined means of production for the benefit of the workers for action. Therefore the Syndicalist does not recognize the saying: "In the beginning was the word and the word was with God." He has recognized the question: "In the beginning was the word, and what he was done.

The Syndicalist movement is building his hopes for the future of the economy of the combined means of production for the benefit of the workers for action.

And everything that resembles the pure and simple union methods cannot be divided into this, except for an idea which may be no other than the revolutionary determination. Therefore the work and propaganda of the Syndicalists is a real struggle for the existence of the various organizations and they are fighting all the time for the existence. The Syndicalists are therefore fighting to win the struggle for the existence of the organizations for the protection of the organization.

Both gentlemen admit that the Industrial Workers of the World has the set the pace. But as true defenders of production of the Syndicalists they claim that the Industrial Workers of the World have not followed the lines of the industrial unions, but that they have followed the principles by which the syndicalists of industrial unions through the Industrial Workers of the World have followed the line of the industrial unions and by which the Syndicalists of Industrial Workers of the World have followed the principle of the Syndicalists of industrial unions.

No matter how much the American Federation of Labor may change in form and substance, it will still be the same according to its union methods from the viewpoint of the syndicalist organization. The American Federation of Labor, this must be admitted, and thus forced that organization to allow the advancement of industrial unions within the American Federation of Labor to press their ideas with more force and more success, and we shall continue to see the advancement of this organization as an extension of the syndicalist idea and in the narrow confines of a workshop in America.

PREAMBLE OF THE I.W.W.

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want reign in any corner of our world. Men must needs triumph. Let the rich planned to ensure that the working class must act out to a struggle against capital. The working class and the employing class are in irreconcilable conflict in their interests. There can be no compromise between them. There is no other road. That is the only road. The employing class and those who pretend to lead the working class are leading a diversion against the working class. There is no other road. That is the only road.
