SLAVERY IS THE PILLAR OF LAW—CAN THE PORTLAND SLAVE-DEALERS NOT THE JUGLE?

BY FRED W. NEILLWOOD.

On the 17th in Boston, 11000 dollars of rebel slave-holders were arrested. The numbers of the rebels have been reduced to about 150,000. Of these, 10,000 are in the hands of the United States. The rest will probably be put to work on the railroads. The United States Government will probably not permit them to stay in the country. The rebels have said that they will not go back. They have also said that they will not go back. They have also said that they will not go back.

On page 2 of this issue, you will find an article from the Socialist Review of London, entitled "The Industrial Revolution." This article is quite interesting and contains some excellent suggestions for the improvement of the labor movement. The author, a member of the Socialist Party, argues that the industrial revolution has brought about a tremendous change in the structure of society and that the working class must take charge of the means of production if they are to have any say in the direction of their own lives. He points out that the industrial revolution has created a vast wealth of resources that can be used to improve the lot of the working class, but that these resources are not being used to their full potential. The author also argues that the working class must be educated to understand the nature of the industrial revolution and that they must be organized to take control of the means of production. The article is quite long, so I will only summarize the main points here:

1. The industrial revolution has brought about a tremendous change in the structure of society.
2. The working class must take charge of the means of production if they are to have any say in the direction of their own lives.
3. The industrial revolution has created a vast wealth of resources that can be used to improve the lot of the working class, but these resources are not being used to their full potential.
4. The working class must be educated to understand the nature of the industrial revolution.
5. The working class must be organized to take control of the means of production.

In conclusion, the author argues that the industrial revolution has brought about a tremendous change in the structure of society, but that the working class must take charge of the means of production if they are to have any say in the direction of their own lives. THREE NIGHTS' APART

A SUMMER NIGHT IN 1912

From August 1, 1912, to August 3, 1912, the Lake George region was the scene of an event that has been described as a summer night in 1912. The event took place on August 1, 1912, when a great fire broke out in the town of Lake George and destroyed much of the town. The fire was described as the largest in the history of the town and was caused by a lightning strike. The town was quickly evacuated and many people lost their homes. The event was described as a summer night in 1912 because of the way it affected the town and its residents.

THE TRUMPET CALL OF THE REVOLUTION

We have had a number of different "calls" of late; some were made to the industrial workers and some to the farmers. The workers, especially, can be heard; they have the power and the means to carry out their plans. The farmers, on the other hand, are more passive and they need the help of the workers to carry out their plans. The "call" of the workers is a call to action, to organize and to struggle for their rights. The "call" of the farmers is a call to compromise, to accept the conditions under which they are working and to try to improve them. The "call" of the workers is a call to revolution, to change the system of exploitation and to create a new society based on the principles of equality and justice. The "call" of the farmers is a call to accept the conditions under which they are working and to try to improve them. The "call" of the workers is a call to revolution, to change the system of exploitation and to create a new society based on the principles of equality and justice.

A CHURCH OF LAW

A CHURCH OF LAW

We have two great currents of law in this country now: the industrial and the agricultural. The industrial current is most active and most powerful. It is the one that is making the law, the one that is changing the law. It is the one that is shaping the law, the one that is dictating the law. The industrial current is the one that is making the law, the one that is changing the law. It is the one that is shaping the law, the one that is dictating the law.
