It takes a little sacrifice. And a little self-control, and some grin determination.

It takes a deal of self-righting. And a deal of time. And no matter what the battle, it is worth the effort.

You must make a blow or two as well.

You must risk and you must lose. And you must try to make the struggle worthwhile. But you don't waste your future on a battle that cannot be won.

That's the only way to win.

ABE THE "AGITATOR."
The editor of the "Agitator," J. Day, has edited 1,000 books and the literary world is not the only thing that is agitated by the "Agitator." The matter requiring a blow is easy to understand from the text. This blow is falling on the poor and on the great body of the people.

In the "Agitator," which follows the "Agitator," Fred, edited the clean body of the people. A lot of people have no chickens and none have a steak in the form of a steak, or a silk dress.
