YELLOW FEVER IN BRITISH COLUMBIA
By H. R. Stone

British Columbia has experienced another outbreak of yellow fever. The disease has appeared in several centers, particularly in the coastal areas.

In an effort to control the spread of the disease, the authorities have imposed strict quarantine measures. All incoming vessels are required to undergo a thorough inspection to ensure they are free from yellow fever carriers.

Several cases have been reported in the vicinity of Vancouver, with most of the victims being seafarers. The health authorities are working tirelessly to trace and isolate any potential carriers.

GUEST COURT

They have a regular way of conducting business at the hotel. Three of the hotel guests with Mrs. Michael Johnson, of the hotel staff, are sitting in the lobby, talking about their latest purchases.

They are discussing the new furniture in the hotel's lounge, which has been recently renovated. The guests are impressed by the quality and design of the furniture, and they are planning to order similar pieces for their own homes.

SCARCE SARGE IN THE WET

The wet weather has made it difficult for hunters and fishermen to venture out to their usual spots. Many are staying indoors, waiting for the weather to improve.

Those who do venture out are faced with cold and wet conditions, making it challenging to find game or fish. However, some are managing to find small game, such as squirrels and rabbits, which are becoming more abundant in the wet and cold.

EDMONTON NOTES

The annual salmon run was held in the Labrador. The salmon run was observed by W. C. Smirke, W. T. W. Chief of the Fish and Game Commission, who noted that the run was not as strong as in previous years.

The salmon were observed to be scattered along the river, with a few schools swimming upstream. The water temperature was cooler than usual, which may have affected the migration.

The salmon were observed to be in good condition, with many of them displaying the typical reddish hue of their species. The run was expected to continue for several more weeks, depending on the weather conditions.

DIEU NATIONALE
