IT IS WORK FOR THE WORKERS.

To live or not to live, that is the question? Whether 'tis better in the end to serve our masters, or by opposing, eat the guidance which with a cheerful act—to die perhaps, and in that death to live far more gloriously than up to the moment, and leave the complaints to Utopia. Freedom is life and life is freedom and clothes and love and happiness. —Harriet E. Thistlethwaite.

Here's hoping the spirit of May First may last.

May Day is not a day of rest. It is a day of work.

The broader are your views the more restricted is your view liable to be. All libelere have been jew-birds.

Although hangmen may die, there are thousands of persons without brains. They will live on after your death. The I. W. W. accepts conciliation as its due, but has conquered for its final aim. The capitalists know it too.

The workers are still paying profits to lobbies for the privileges of earning their own wages. But not as willingly as they may.

Some workmen report that 80 per cent of the tools are produced in Wigan, G. C. It may be where work is. The tools are not found in factory. They can be found in factories.

Craft unions persist in the system of small skillful production. It has made no improvement on large indifferent centers. Today skill is getting to be a drug on the market and trade unions to be a bore. The crafts must go and in their place rise the industrial unions.

DISTRIBUTED LABOR

On the surface it does appear that the I. W. W. is a purely desorative force. The added fact that our greatest publicity is gained through strikes, free speech fights and open demonstrations against established authority, gives the idea a former flavor. Now we have labor as the subject of all social activities will be handled through the union. With Capitalist overthrow all over the world of a new form of social control will be accomplished.

William E. Schwartz is the enemy of the working class. As this class controls the existing ideas of morals, religion, patriotism, and in fact all the influences of society, immorality, anti-patriotic, anti-social, and in opposition to the capitalistic régime, it is a fact that the class is in danger of being destroyed. We refuse to play the legal game of politics, knowing that the power rests on control at the point of production. We strive for that necessary control.

We fight all institutions of capitalism in just the measure that they are used to try to prevent our development of real economic freedom and fight against the present one.

But aside from that the I. W. W. is the greatest constructive force the world has ever known.

Construction can take place only on the industrial level; the building up of worker's control in the actual working life is the only real work for our society. The industrial union builds for industrial control with every move it makes and thereby prepares itself on the producing classes for leadership. Of the federations, the American Federation of Labor and the Knights of Labor are the only organizations that are working at this time to do this.

May Day is the International Labor Day, as distinguished from the Labor Day that the so-called industrial unions celebrate. It is on this day that the toilers of the whole world band in class friendship and social hatred.

While the struggles of the past have been real heart-breaking and have created a situation one can never get away from. A lot of our old leaders and some of our new leaders are making the mistake of being satisfied with the existing economic situations. We are not satisfied with the present situation and we are not going to be satisfied with the existing economic situations.

THE TWO CIVILIZATION MOVES

The capitalistic and socialistic civilization moves. The capitalists and socialists are the only two civilizations that are left in the world today. The capitalistic civilization is the only one that is going to exist in the world, and the socialistic civilization is the only one that is going to exist in the world.

The capitalistic civilization is the only one that is going to exist in the world, and the socialistic civilization is the only one that is going to exist in the world.

The capitalistic civilization is the only one that is going to exist in the world, and the socialistic civilization is the only one that is going to exist in the world.
To Gain the Shorter Workday

By James P. Thompson

When I asked some of the men at the Chicago office to work a shorter day, they were impressed. Many of them had been suggesting it for some time, and I was pleased to see them so interested.

The idea of working fewer hours and being paid for the number of hours worked was not new to them. In fact, it was something they had been discussing for quite some time. But I was happy to see that they were open to the idea.

I explained to them that by working fewer hours, we could get a certain amount of work done and still have time for other activities. I also pointed out that they would have more time to spend with their families and friends.

The men were very interested in this idea and were eager to try it out. I suggested that we begin by working a shorter day and see how it went.

The results were very positive.
Many of the men were able to finish their work in less time than they had been used to, and they had more time to spend with their families. Some of them even began to enjoy working fewer hours.

I am pleased with the results of this experiment and believe that we should continue to work fewer hours. It is a win-win situation for everyone involved.

Another View of the Land Question

By L. W. Perlmutter, Worker

The orthodox view of landlordism used to be that the landowners were the bosses and the workers were mere tenants. But this view is no longer accepted.

In recent years, there has been evidence that the landowners are exploiting the workers. They are paying workers very little for the work they do, and they are keeping the bulk of the profits for themselves.

This is not fair. The workers should be receiving a fair share of the profits. The landowners should be paying more to the workers and less to themselves.

The solution to this problem is simple. The workers should form cooperatives and own the land themselves.

Then they would not have to pay rent to the landowners and would be in control of the land. This would give them more power and influence in the economy.

I believe that this is the way to solve the land question.

Strikes at Rock Island

A strike of 1500 men and women workers at the Rock Island Arsenal, a federal arsenal, was called on April 18. The T.W. L. W. is in support of this strike.

The demands of the workers are as follows:

1. A minimum wage of $2.00 per day and a 7-hour working day.

2. Better working and living conditions.

3. The right to form unions and engage in collective bargaining.

The striking workers are members of the United Auto Workers Union.

Affairs in Youngtown

W. J. Shelton, the city manager of Youngtown, was arrested on April 18 on charges of bribery and corruption. He had been accused of taking bribes from local businesses in exchange for favors.

Mr. Shelton had been in office for several years and was known for his connection with the local political machine.

I believe that this is a very important case and that the people of Youngtown should have a clean, honest city manager.

Lucy Parsons Maltreated

Lucy Parsons was one of the main supporters of the Wobblies, a radical labor group. She was arrested on April 18, charged with inciting a riot at a meeting of the Wobblies, and held in jail on $10,000 bail.

The police arrested Mrs. Parsons at her home in Chicago and took her to the police station where she was made to stand in the cold, wet and dark for several hours. She was then questioned by a police officer who was known for his brutality.

Mrs. Parsons was physically abused by the police officer and was left with bruises and wounds.

The Wobblies are demanding Mrs. Parsons' release and an investigation into the police actions.

Los Angeles

"We do not make political attacks on any political party. However, we do make political attacks on any organization that supports wars, the monarchies, or the ruling classes."

The Wobblies are supporting the strike at Rock Island.

Deaver Cly O'B., April 18—Deaver Cly
Obrecht, a member of the Wobblies,
was arrested on April 18 on charges of illegal possession of a gun. He was arrested at his home in Los Angeles, where police found him with a loaded shotgun.

Obrecht is a known member of the Wobblies and is known for his radical views.

The Wobblies are demanding Obrecht's release and an investigation into the police actions.

Agitation Committee, LOCAL 26

S. A. L. is happy to announce that the Agitation Committee has published a new pamphlet on the Wobblies and their accomplishments.

The pamphlet is available for free
at any Wobblies
meeting.
The Mailed Fist Against the Revolution

The distinctly visionary manner in which the ruling class has attempted to stop street speak-ers, strike leaders, and radical intellectuals from speaking out against injustice is becoming more evident by the day. The tactics range from legal harassment to outright violence, often coupled with police brutality. The overall effect is to silence dissent and suppress critical voices.

In recent weeks, there have been several instances of workers being forcibly removed from their homes. In each case, the authorities have been quick to label the residents as "agitators," and the homes themselves as "hotbeds of rebellion." These actions are part of a larger strategy to silence dissent and prevent the spread of revolutionary ideas.

The ruling class is well aware that the workers' movement is gaining strength and gaining support. They are determined to do whatever it takes to keep the workers quiet and prevent them from organizing. This includes everything from outright violence to subtle pressure tactics.

The workers must remain steadfast in their fight for justice. They must continue to organize and to распространять the message of the revolution. Only by standing together can they hope to overcome the forces of reaction and to build a better world.

Wages and Prices

(For Robert Breeden, Cedar Grove, N. J.)

The recurring problem of wage and price controls requires the same answer at the same time whenever the problem arises. The United States Steel Trust, dissolved in 1911, was embarked on a program of wage and price controls. The federal government, believing that wages and prices were too high, ordered the company to reduce its prices or be prepared to face the consequences. The company complied, and the public benefited. The government has not had more success in its efforts to control wages and prices since then. In fact, it has been less successful.

It is not the purpose of this article to discuss the merits of wage and price controls. The purpose is simply to point out that the same answer is always given when these questions arise.

The fact that wages and prices are controlled is to be expected. In a free market economy, wages and prices are determined by supply and demand. When supply is greater than demand, wages and prices tend to fall. When demand is greater than supply, wages and prices tend to rise. Wage and price controls are attempts to use government power to influence wages and prices in a direction that is thought to be desirable.

The government's attempts to control wages and prices have been unsuccessful because they are based on a fundamental misconception. The government believes that wages and prices are determined by supply and demand. However, wages and prices are also determined by the expectations of buyers and sellers. Buyers and sellers form expectations about what wages and prices will be in the future. These expectations influence their current behavior, which in turn affects wages and prices.

The government tries to control wages and prices by setting maximum and minimum wage and price levels. However, these levels are arbitraged by the market. Buyers and sellers will not pay more than the maximum wage or price, and they will not offer less than the minimum wage or price. The government's attempts to control wages and prices are therefore doomed to failure.

The government should not try to control wages and prices. Instead, it should recognize that wages and prices are determined by supply, demand, and expectations. The government should work to create a stable environment in which wages and prices can be determined by these factors, and it should allow the market to operate as efficiently as possible.
Government by Commission

So intensely pertinent have the most of our arguments been that we can say very little to which to which we are not agreed. All the arguments which are not in favor of a limited time of office for our representatives, and for the restriction of inside political campaigns, are based on the fact that commissions are necessary in order to bring about a better political system. The fact that commissions are necessary is an assumption that has been used to justify the commissions system, and it is an assumption that is not based on any real facts.

Commission government and scientific men- agement are closely related, but in this article we are concerned with the latter. Commission government is a method of managing business and industry that has been used for many years, but it is not a method that is currently being used in government.

The idea of a commission system is to have a group of experts manage a business or industry, and this group of experts is known as a commission. The commission is responsible for making decisions about how the business or industry should be run, and the commission is also responsible for overseeing the work of the management team.

The commission system has been used in many industries, including railroads, utilities, and banks. It has also been used in government, and it has been used to manage the government's economic policies.

The Tactics of Moses

(Or by R. H. Mabey, Portland, Me.)

My curiosity was aroused when I saw the title "The Tactics of Moses" in a recent number of the "Journal of the American Institute of Architects." I have always been interested in the methods used by Moses to influence the Israelites, and I wondered if the author would be able to discuss "the story of the exodus from Egypt, how the Israelites were led into the desert, and what they were to do there." I am therefore pleased to announce that the author has given me a detailed account of Moses' tactics.

It is quite clear that Moses, as a master tactician, knew how to win over his enemies. He understood the power of persuasion, and he knew how to use it to his advantage. He was a master of propaganda, and he knew how to manipulate the emotions of his followers. He was a master of strategy, and he knew how to outmaneuver his opponents. He was a master of psychology, and he knew how to read the minds of his enemies. He was a master of rhetoric, and he knew how to communicate his message effectively.

It is also clear that Moses was a master of the art of war. He knew how to plan his battles, how to choose his battles, and how to win them. He knew how to use his superior numbers to his advantage, and he knew how to use his superior resources to his advantage. He knew how to use his superior intelligence to his advantage, and he knew how to use his superior will to his advantage.

In short, Moses was a master tactician, and he knew how to win over his enemies. He was a master of propaganda, a master of strategy, a master of psychology, a master of rhetoric, and a master of the art of war. He was a true master of the art of war, and he knew how to win over his enemies. He was a true master tactician, and he knew how to win over his enemies. He was a true master of the art of war, and he knew how to win over his enemies.

The Dishwasher

By Jim Seymour

Along in the kitchen, in greensleeve slats,
I pause for a moment, to dream.
For ever a dishwaher thinks of a boy.
Weariness will be lesson for rest and for play.
And now that I pause or the trainee there stands
A stream of the Troubador's mellow plaints, Rigshots in a blinding sorrow and grief.
I wonder that more can reach even me.
For now I am thinking, my brain is stirred,
The voice of a master the loveliness found,
The heart-breaking smile of the sun.
Ahame am sure the thoughts of the "we'll have been!
Mayhem been born and the tale of time
Would shield them from poverty, free them from pain.
Would wish them not in the Mistletoe night.
Because of your judgment in choosing a site.

But now I am only a slave of the mill
That slave and roam with me as it will.
That makes me a dullard in burning heat
That slave and roam with me as it will.
That slave and roam with me as it will.

Dark days are up, black hands are strung across.
No dawn, no night, no solitude my course is.

Oh, man, oh man, the light of life is gone.

For the music has revolved, but the leaves it wrought
Within the pure brain it wove its thread
Such never ever did, or cannot.

But now I am only a slave of the mill
That slave and roam with me as it will.
That makes me a dullard in burning heat
That slave and roam with me as it will.
That slave and roam with me as it will.

The music has revolved, but the leaves it wrought
Within the pure brain it wove its thread
Such never ever did, or cannot.
