

The future is up to YOU

YOU — the intelligent, understanding reader of this publication — are one of the most significant individuals in this country today. You are a member of a basic core of like individuals upon whom depends uniquely the winning of world peace.

You have refused to be intimidated, refused to be misled, refused to be cudgeled into non-resistance to the war drive that has characterized virtually every act of the post-Roosevelt Administration on both domestic and international fronts.

The acid test has come since the substitution of hot war for cold in Korea last June. And now the war drive reaches its crescendo. The deadly hypocrisies of the militarist MacArthur—whom Dr. W. E. B. DuBois has most accurately called the Wild Man of Tokyo — monopolize every forum in the land, every publication, every mode of communication from radio and television to the classrooms of our nation's schools.

Against the hurricane fury of this drive the determination of the plain people for peace has stood up and even gained ground. This popular determination for peace could not have come about —there would be no roadblock to halt the rout of public opinion—had it not been for your own, personal steadfastness in your community and that of thousands like you in every corner of the land. You have come through the terrific pressures of this period with convictions strengthened rather than diminished. This must be so, or you would not have continued as a reader and supporter of NATIONAL GUARDIAN.

IN THE WEEKS, months and years since 1948 leading up to this decisive turning point in American public opinion, the GUARDIAN has endeavored to the limit of its resources and abilities to keep step with you, to communicate your steadfastness to others, to provide factual fortification for the convictions which must now take ascendancy to turn the nation toward world peace instead of holocaust.

In this function, the GUARDIAN stands unique. It is the sole existing line of communication linking you with the peace forces of every state in the union and 5,000 of the nation's communities.

The GUARDIAN values your political understanding of the importance of such a medium in America today.

BUT POLITICAL UNDERSTANDING ALONE CANNOT KEEP THE GUARDIAN ALIVE. This can only result from a combination of "little" things — little things like forwarding your subscription renewal on time, sending some added help from month to month when you can afford it, without special urging in "last-ditch" appeals; going out and getting new readers the same way you go after votes for progressive candidates.

These things alone pay the printer and increase the press run. If YOU falter on these important "little" things, if you cheer us with political sympathy and wait for others to come through with dollars and cents and new subscriptions, OUR function can no longer be fulfilled.

WHILE our resources hold out, the GUARDIAN does not ever intend to quit this function—although this current issue, reduced to half its regular size with columns of vital news left out, is a sample of what we may have to resort to constantly to keep going.

To forestall this we must convince you, as an individual, that our principal resource is you yourself. If the GUARDIAN fails of your support, even to the minimum extent of failing to get your subscription renewal, then we have lost one of our most vital resources. If the GUARDIAN should have to quit, you will have lost one of your main resources.

Multiply yourself by a few thousand others whose convictions are as staunch as yours but whose attention to a $2 detail like a GUARDIAN renewal is as faulty — and you have the GUARDIAN's survival problem in a nutshell.

THE problem is you; you alone can solve it. THE EDITORS

THE TRENTON CASE

Prosecution rests after presenting 7 conflicting versions of murder

AS the state rested in the second trial of the Trenton Six last week, the emptiness of the murder charges in the case that was brought to world attention by NATIONAL GUARDIAN had become so apparent that directed verdicts of acquittal for at least two of the Negro defendants seemed to be in the cards for this week.

When, despite defense objections, "confessions" signed by three defendants were read in court, the jury had been presented with no less than seven versions of how junk-dealer William Horner was killed in 1948. These were the "confessions" of McKinley Forrest, Collis English and Ralph Cooper (three other "confessions" had been ruled inadmissible); the testimony of Horner's common-law wife Elizabeth McGuire, of cigar salesman Frank Eldracher, and of Capt. Louis Neese, chief of the Trenton police communication system; and Prosecutor Volpe's reconstruction of the crime. Volpe's version matched one of the others, and all the others differed in vital details.

SIX LIVES SAVED: In its second issue (Oct. 25, 1948) — when the Six were awaiting execution and the case was unknown outside of Trenton — the GUARDIAN voiced the suspicion that the case was "another Scottsboro." Bringing the details to light in article after article by our special correspondent William A. Reuben, the GUARDIAN directed world attention to the apparent frame-up of six Americans. Contributions, mostly in small amounts, poured in to support the fight to free the Six led by the Civil Rights Congress. The death sentences were reversed on appeal, and a new trial ordered. The Six have now been behind bars—for a long period in the deathhouse a few yards from the electric chair—over three years.

When the disgraceful conduct of the police investigation and the first trial came to light in court, a faintly perceptible stir was observed in the American press which had previously ignored CRC's and the GUARDIAN's revelations. The New York Times went so far as to send a reporter in the first days of the second trial, but soon could find no space in its 50-60 pages daily for the proceedings on which hung the fate of six innocent Americans. From time to time a brief report was published, almost invariably when the defense had suffered an apparent setback in the courtroom.

JUSTICE AFTER DEATH? But to such an extent had the GUARDIAN's original suspicions been confirmed, before the defense even opened its case, that the press was more and more taking refuge in the same "line" with which it is "salvaging its conscience" in the case of Willie McGee. The "line" is that the Trenton Six and McGee have hung a millstone about their own necks by accepting help from "Communists."

Ignored in this pharisaic propaganda are two simple facts:

• In both cases the relatives tried to get help from anti-Communist groups when the Six and McGee were already under death sentence in earlier trials. They were turned down.

• Had it not been for the help of those now called "Communists," McGee would have been in Potters Field at least four years ago, the Six at least two years ago.

PAGING THE MILLENNIUM: As the defense opened at Trenton on Monday, some—who had listened to the state building up its almost burlesque of a case against the Six—wondered when Jersey justice and the American press in general might be expected to feel as much concern as "Communists" for human life. Meanwhile the GUARDIAN, which brought the case to international attention, was forced by lack of funds to curtail its size, making it impossible this week to report many other similar assaults on freedom and life itself in cold-war U.S.A.

In the name of all that is good in the American tradition, I urge every GUARDIAN reader to spread far and wide word of this indecency and its unspeakable implications. Literature on the case may be had from the Natl. Committee to Defend Dr. DuBois, Room 311, 16-18 W. 29th St., N.Y.C. The defense is being financed wholly by individual contributions. A Scripps-Howard-Hearst smear

IN articles full of apparently deliberate mis-statements of fact together with the usual innuendoes, NATIONAL GUARDIAN came under attack last week from the Hearst and Scripps-Howard Press for publishing unofficial lists of names of American POWs in Korea. The New York World Telegram & Sun used the term "dirty work" and tried to sic the FBI on us. Our reply to the editor of the World-Telegram said in part:

"You use the term 'dirty work' in commenting on the purpose and effect of our making these names public. Our purpose has been solely to let the families know their men may be safe instead of dead. The effect—especially since your attacks on us—has been a shower of fervent blessings from missing men's families and friends all over the country, for breaking through the curtain of official and press silence which has driven them almost frantic with worry. When names of men reported to be safe as POW's are deliberately withheld from the loved ones by press and government, we trust the public to decide correctly who is doing the 'dirty work.'

More names of U.S. prisoners of war in Korea

NATIONAL GUARDIAN has received the names and details below through the cooperation of the "China Monthly Review," edited by U.S.-born John W. Powell in Shanghai. The list has been appearing alphabetically in the columns of the GUARDIAN beginning with our April 18 issue. If you want us to check the full list for any name, call, write or wire us. In order to avoid any misinterpretation, we repeat our explanation of April 18: this is an unofficial and partial list of names compiled from Chinese sources and containing only names of individuals reported by the Chinese to have signed appeals for peace in POW camps or to have given statements or messages to Chinese correspondents or representatives. Since only a very small percentage of POW can have had the opportunity to send messages or sign statements or would have done so, the failure of any name to appear on this list must not be given undue significance.

WAR & PEACE MacArthur testimony exposes hoax of 'Greater Debate'

It seems to me that the press and radio are presenting essentially two aspects of the same side. I, and many like myself, am against Truman's war and MacArthur's war. I am for withdrawing from Korea and permitting those unfortunate people to solve their own problems without the aid of our B-29's. I am for settling any disputes we may have over a conference table. I am for ending the cold war and with it the inflation, emergency and hysteria at home. If MacArthur and Truman and Co. are desirous of fighting anywhere, they are welcome to—but not with my husband, my son, my brother, my standard of living, my civil liberties, my future existence. I and millions like me have no quarrel, certainly none of "atomic" proportions, with China, Russia, Korea, or anyone at all. Unless it be with the war makers.

Letter to San Francisco Chronicle, April 21, from Florence Heyman.

MILLIONS of Americans who have no quarrel with anybody were excluded from the "Greater Debate" raging last week in Washington. The Senate investigation of Far Eastern policy found both sides preaching holy war against "communism" (i.e., the socialist half of the world). The N.Y. Times conceded it was not even the "grand strategy" of this war but simply its "tactics" that "is really being debated." The people's disgust with the Korean war and demand for peace were being blunted and diverted into a sham debate over the timing of World War III; just as earlier popular outcry to get out of Korea and withdraw from Europe was answered with the "Great Debate" over choice of World War III's battlefields.

In three days of testimony, larded with dramatic appeals to "end the slaughter" in Korea and laments over the "staggering" casualties, Gen. MacArthur emerged as the "most enthusiastic supporter" of the Truman Doctrine (N.Y. Times) and the strongest spokesman for immediate all-out war.

THE MAN FROM HEAVEN: The longer he talked, the more glaring became the contradictions. (A sample: he described Soviet positions in Asia as purely "defensive," while calling Korea the "initiator action" of a Soviet attack on the U.S.) But his words were treated by awed senators as the revelations of a modern Delphic Oracle; by the press, which devoted many pages daily to printing them verbatim, as the Holy Writ of the new crusade.

Americans still able to penetrate the most powerful propaganda smokescreen yet directed against them saw a mythology being built to justify a new war against humanity. Hardly a newspaper in the country did not contribute to its building—to fostering the Truman-MacArthur illusion that the U.S. can with atom bombs lead a world counter-revolution to cheap and easy victory.

MacArthur's testimony confirmed the basic identity of his and Truman's policies. As if to emphasize this, the Administration, which had already sent a military mission to Chiang Kai-shek, let it be known in the UN that it no longer accepted the five UN principles for cease-fire in Korea (they include calling a peace conference to discuss Formosa and China's UN seat); and openly pressed for an economic blockade of China (to "record and proclaim" the blockade already in effect). Meanwhile, to "corroborate" what was supposed to be already proven—the charge of North Korean aggression—the U.S. delegation introduced two North Korean army documents; and the Washington-dominated South Korean government proposed a charge of "genocide" against North Korea, Stalin and Mao Tse-tung.

BRITAIN WOBBLER: U.S. proposals for a blockade "got a chilly reception" (N.Y. Times). West European delegations pointed out that "public opinion in Europe and Asia is overwhelmingly opposed to expansion of the war" (N.Y. Post). But official sources in London said the 14 nations fighting in Korea had agreed they may have to bomb Manchuria. CBS' Howard K. Smith reported from London intense U.S. diplomatic pressure for support of economic sanctions and bombing. He said the breaking point has been reached and the Labour government will surrender to the U.S.

Washington reports said Britain after a 10-day session on the Japanese peace treaty was yielding on its demands that Formosa be returned to China and China allowed to participate. (In Japan, Gen. Ridgway authorized the government to modify the occupation laws and parliament prepared to cancel the purge, rewrite the labor and anti-monopoly laws.)

In London Foreign Secy. Morrison said the West would make no more "concessions" at the Big Four talks in Paris. (Even the pro-Washington press had admitted that most of the concessions have come from the U.S.S.R. Last week, the West rejected a Soviet proposal involving a major Soviet concession—withdrawal of the Atlantic Pact and U.S. bases abroad as agenda items.)

CANNON-FODDER PLUS: But a shift in British policy toward China could bring "internal crisis" and "a serious upheaval in organized labor" which "may find its echo in Western Europe" (Howard K. Smith). A major factor in the anticipated shift was the promise reportedly given in London last week by U.S. mobilizer Wilson that Britain will get more raw materials desperately needed to get its industry going.

Wilson demanded in Paris that the allies cut down on civilian items to speed arms, indicated raw materials will be divided according to each nation's arms effort, compared allied rearmament unfavorably to that of the U.S. The N.Y. Times reported from Paris that this comparison, based on taking estimated national income as a measure of national effort, "was neither just nor economically sound." It did not take account of Europe's most important contribution, which will be manpower.

In France, where living costs have risen 25.7% since January, 1950, and the paralyzed "third force" government is unable to enact taxes to finance rearmament, Gen. Charles de Gaulle said airbases should be granted the U.S. only if France had an equal seat in strategy councils. In West Germany, on the eve of the sixth anniversary of its surrender, the government claimed the right to frontiers existing in 1937—East Prussia, now in the U.S.S.R., and provinces now included in Poland. (The Times reported "on the whole U.S. officials take the favorable view of the West German claims in the East.") And the U.S. launched a new drive to speed German rearmament.

UP THE MORGANS: In Washington the President asked for $60,000,000,000 to run the armed services for a year, raising to $108,000,000,000 total military authorization since Korea. The Pentagon said the figure was based "on the assumption" no equipment would be lost in Korea after July 1. The recent practice of asking military appropriations piecemeal was expected to raise the war appropriations to $85,000,000,000 or more (the Pentagon originally asked $104,000,000,000).

Shankar's Weekly, New Delhi, India
Little Tommy Tucker, will you sing for your supper?

Behind the MacArthur fanfare, the House was busy. It shelved the aid to India bill when Prime Minister Nehru said India would accept no aid to which political strings were attached; quietly but drastically modified the 1948 Housing Act, ending the prefabricated housing program, giving cities the right to veto public housing, cutting the program to 5,000 new units a year; agreed to give private utilities a monopoly on all future transmission of electric power.

The House Ways and Means Committee instead of tightening tax loopholes voted depletion allowances (tax deductions) to 18 more industries and increased such allowances for two others. Motive power of Washington's war program was exposed once again in 1951 first-quarter profit figures, which after taxes showed a 30% increase over 1950's first quarter for 55 firms. The increase was 95% for railroad equipment firms, 70% for pulp and paper, 85% for metal products.

FREEDOMS

The 11th hour of Willie McGee

AS the GUARDIAN went to press those concerned about the fate of Willie McGee—Mississippi Negro sentenced to die for "rape," a charge on which that state has never put a white man to death—had done everything possible to save him. The execution was set for the night of May 7-8. On Saturday 41 persons were arrested in Jackson, Miss., on charges of conspiring to obstruct justice after they gathered there in connection with a clemency hearing the Governor was obliged by law to conduct. McGee's attorneys made a last-ditch effort for federal court intervention. In Washington, D.C., a white and Negro trade union delegation got scant response from government officials to whom they appealed for Presidential intervention. At 4 p.m. Saturday a round-the-clock prayer vigil began before the White House.

"LOYALTY": The U.S. Supreme Court revealed total confusion over President Truman's "loyalty" program. In one 5-to-3 ruling, accompanied by six different opinions, it ordered court hearings to determine if the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, the Natl. Council of American-Soviet Friendship and the Intl. Workers Order were properly listed as "subversive" by the Attorney General. In another 4-to-4 decision it upheld dismissal of a government employe for "disloyalty" without the right to confront or answer her accuser.

The Supreme Court unanimously ordered release on bail for four persons held for deportation on Terminal Island, Calif. They had been imprisoned six months without bail under the McCarran Act.

MCCARRAN ACT: In Washington the Subversive Activities Control Board was conducting hearings designed to force the Communist Party to register its membership as an organization dominated by a foreign power. The Washington Post agreed with defense attorneys' contentions that the Act is a bill of attainder, the hearings a mockery because the board members have not been confirmed by the Senate. During the week three Congressmen urged repeal of the Act.

"CONTEMPT": Mrs. Louise Berman, a leader of the American Labor Party, was acquitted of contempt of Congress for refusing to answer questions of the Un-American Activities Committee. Philip Bart, general manager of the Daily Worker, was convicted on eight counts of an original 32-count indictment on the same charge.

PEACE: In a Washington court Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, dean of Negro scholars, was almost cited for contempt of court, because of a press release distributed in his behalf, at a preliminary hearing on charges that he and four associates were agents of a foreign power as leaders of the now-disbanded Peace Information Center.
