

Belfrage counsel rips holes in govt. deportation case

By Lawrence Emery

JUDGE Edward Weinfeld last week still had not ruled on whether GUARDIAN's editor Cedric Belfrage shall be admitted to bail pending deportation proceedings. His detention on Ellis Island followed by 24 hours a threat by Sen. McCarthy to have him picked up. Belfrage had refused to answer McCarthy's questions as to his political beliefs and associations at a hearing May 14.

Before the Judge were two new documents—the government's "case" against Belfrage (which bore out an earlier admission by U.S. Asst. Atty. Gen. William Sexton: "Your Honor, I don't know what this case is all about"), and an answering brief by Belfrage's attorneys which declared:

... the allegations contained in the return are general and unverified ... unsupported by evidence or facts.

ANTI-CAPRICE: Belfrage's detention without bail was characterized as "... arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable and therefore unlawful."

In the brief Belfrage said he is not a Communist, the main and unsupported charge against him. The brief points out that in July, 1937, immediately after he had established his status as a legal permanent resident, Belfrage had taken the necessary steps to acquire citizenship. Active war service beginning in 1941 and including a two-year tour of duty in Europe under the direct control of the U.S. Army ending in October, 1945, interrupted the citizenship process; his war service was not credited to his length of residence here. The brief asserts:

However, it always was and still is [Belfrage's] intention and hope to become a United States citizen.

He has two American-born children.

SIX YEARS LATER: The brief, denying other allegations by the government, points out that in 1947, after Belfrage had been named by a professional anti-Communist, he had been

Rosenbergs spurn Brownell's offer of life for lies

By John T. McManus

GOVERNMENT officials announced last week that Ethel and Julius Rosenberg face death in Sing Sing Prison's electric chair at 11 p.m. on Thursday, June 18. The early execution date, less than two weeks away, was set in face of mounting new evidence of perjury in their conviction as "atom spies." As world protests against the unprecedented death sentences swelled last week, the Rosenbergs were openly confronted with the final grisly stratagem of their government against them:

Confess or die to save the face of U. S. justice in the eyes of the world.

The maneuver was revealed on Tues., June 2, in a telegram from Julius and Ethel Rosenberg to their lawyer, Emanuel H. Bloch:

MR. BENNETT, DIRECTOR OF FEDERAL PRISON BUREAU, AT DIRECTION OF MR. BROWNELL SAW ETHEL AND MYSELF TODAY AND TOLD US IF WE WANT TO COOPERATE WITH THE GOVERNMENT WE CAN DO SO THROUGH HIM AND HE WILL PUT US IN TOUCH WITH THE PROPER OFFICIALS.

WE BOTH REASSERTED OUR INNOCENCE AND SAID SINCE WE ARE NOT GUILTY WE CANNOT TELL THEM ANYTHING ABOUT ESPIONAGE.

ALSO THAT HE SHOULD TELL THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL TO RECOMMEND A COMMUTATION OF OUR SENTENCE.

MOTION DENIED: The emergency telegram was signed "Julie and Ethel."

It arrived within minutes after Bloch had learned by phone that three justices of the Circuit Court of Appeals had denied his motion to compel Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman to reduce the death sentences. Bloch had argued that the sentences were originally levied as "instruments for the coercion of confessions." He cited Judge Kaufman's statement that the 15-year sentence given the government's chief witness, David Greenglass—charged as a co-conspirator—was merited by "the cooperation the Government received from him."

That the "cooperation" offered by Greenglass to help convict his sister Ethel and her husband was a trumped up story to save his own skin became increasingly clear this week: Greenglass' brother Bernard signed an affidavit that Greenglass had admitted stealing uranium from Los Alamos while assigned there as an army sergeant in 1944.

The affidavit (see full text, left) reveals deliberate perjury during the trial by both David Greenglass and his wife, Ruth, with the knowledge of the prosecution. It corroborates the testi-

MORE PROOF THAT GREENGLASS LIED

My name is Bernard Greenglass. I live at 64 Sheriff St New York, N. Y. I am the brother of Ethel Rosenberg and David Greenglass.

State of New York
County of New York SS

My name is Bernard Greenglass. I live at 64 Sheriff St. New York, N. Y. I am the brother of Ethel Rosenberg and David Greenglass; Ethel is my elder sister and David is my younger brother.

Some time in the year 1948 my brother David told me he had taken a sample of uranium from Los Alamos without permission of the authorities. He told me this at his then home 265 Rivington Street, New York, N. Y. I do not remember whether Ruth, David's wife was present at that time.

Sometime later, and I don't remember whether it was a year or more later or sometime before David's arrest in June 1950, David told me that he had thrown this uranium into the East River.

About a month ago, on a Friday night, David Rosenberg, Julius Rosenberg's brother came to my home to discuss the case of Ethel and Julius. There was also present Ruth Greenglass, and my mother Tessie Greenglass. The subject of uranium came up. I told Dave Rosenberg the same story that I am stating here.

Ruth, David's wife said "David took a sample of uranium but he threw it into the East River."

I told this same story about the uranium to my sister during my visit to her about a month and one half ago on a Saturday at the Sing Sing death house.

I also told the same story to Rabbi Koslowe at his home in Mamaroneck, N. Y. in the presence of David Rosenberg on the evening of May 25, 1953.

I have voluntarily related this story again to Emanuel H. Bloch at his office at 401 Broadway, New York, N. Y., on this 31st day of May, 1953.

*The above is true,
sworn to before me
this 31st day of May 1953 - Bernard Greenglass*

The above affidavit by Bernard Greenglass, containing its own affirmation by David Greenglass' wife Ruth, shows that his brother David lied in court when he said he could not recall why the FBI had come to visit him in Feb., 1950. A statement by Ruth in June, 1950, contained in a document traced to the files of the Greenglass attorney, O. John Rogge, said that the FBI had asked them if they had a specimen of uranium in the house. Hence both the government and attorney Rogge knew during the trial that the Greenglasses were deliberately withholding this information from the jury and the public. The information corroborates many aspects of Julius Rosenberg's testimony, especially relating to Ruth's appeal to him in 1944 after Greenglass' first furlough and before she joined him in New Mexico. Rosenberg said she asked him then to help her straighten David out in connection with theft of government property. The affidavit also confirms the real motive for Greenglass' efforts to get money and vaccination certificates to leave the country following the FBI's visit to him in Feb., 1950. The complete background is available in an excellent new pamphlet, "New Evidence in the Rosenberg Case," obtainable from the Natl. Comm. to Secure Justice in the Rosenberg Case, 1050 Sixth Av. New York 18, N. Y. A contribution should accompany order.

REPORT TO READERS

Mountain of Strength

FROM THE CAGE on Ellis Island this week came a typically heartening letter from Cedric Belfrage to us at the GUARDIAN. "I am tremendously impressed," he said, "by the effectiveness and quality of the last two issues." And we were tremendously pleased. Then he went on: "One can't help being impressed by the mountain of mail I am getting, and the variety of good things said."

Cedric sent us excerpts from dozens of letters, and when we put them together with mail on the "Belfrage Affair" that has come to 17 Murray Street, they made a mountain indeed. We thought, as a tribute to the magnificent people who are standing firm with us, and as an everlasting demonstration to the hate-filled McCarthy mob of the basic decency of America, we would devote most of the Mailbag this week to the mountain. Show it to your friends; show them what the quality of a man like Cedric Belfrage has done for the people of his adopted land.

ON OTHER embattled fronts these same Americans are doing what they told Cedric they would do — build the GUARDIAN. The No. 1 job they tackled was sub expirations, and this is what a partial cross-section report around the nation showed:

Jean La Vine in North Dakota has just sent us a report: 104 letters sent throughout the state. . . . Lester Roxin in Rochester, N. Y., writes: "We shall be proud to visit the people who should renew their subs." . . . Louise Dennis in Harrison, Idaho, says: "Your two-pronged renewal campaign, Will Do and immediately (her emphasis)."

Ray Gailey in South Portland, Maine, says: "I'm with you. It may be important for the NG to get those renewals, but it's vital to us. We here in Maine might not survive without the NG." . . . Our one lonesome sub in Cheyenne, Wyo., writes: "My contacting old Wyoming subscribers is a novel idea to strengthen the paper in this great state. I shall do my best." . . . I. O. Ford of Kentucky says: "We'll do our best to save those 'expiring liberals' from back-sliding. Hope the NG can evade persecution and bankruptcy till McCarthyism and war hysteria subside."

L. F. Kellogg in Gardena, Calif., says: "We'll do all we can to regain our 'lapsed' friends." . . . Art Koznek of Warroad, Minn., writes: "My pep is low and my pocket book is lower. The NG is a grand little paper and I'll do what I can to promote its circulation so it can continue to grow. The GUARDIAN must stay on guard." . . . The IPP of Los Angeles has worked out a system of GUARDIAN quotas for each club. . . . Rufus Frasier of Buffalo, N. Y., back as a civilian again, reports: "Am now getting back into activities and will be very glad to do what I can."

Nathalie Gross in El Paso, Tex., has already covered almost all the 1952 expirations and is clamoring for other back lists that she can tackle. . . . P. J. Gleason of Minneapolis, Minn., writes: "We now have an auto available to us and are visiting old subscribers an hour or two every evening." . . . Virginia White in Chapel Hill, N. C., reports: "There's really no excuse for some of those on your expired sub list. . . . The work has already been delegated among a group of us here." . . . and there's lots more from all over the country.

THE EDITORS

This country going out from the Roman Catholic hierarchy which planned to make the U.S. Catholic for decades. I warned the GUARDIAN repeatedly against this great danger which now approaches a climax by the combination with Wall Street and the Pentagon. I warned you against that clandestine movement, The Christophers, which is mystifying the nation.

This is not directed against faithful Catholics and their creed; I count some as my friends, and already many lay Catholics are opposed to the hierarchy so greedy for power. This must be emphasized.

NEW YORK, N. Y.

McCarthy is an alarming, ugly symptom of deep rotteness in our body politic. If the symptom is allowed to grow into an epidemic the democratic life of the country will become feebler and feebler. We need to emulate the fearless patriots of the time of John Greenleaf Whittier, who wrote these lines:

Is this the land our fathers loved,
 The freedom which they toiled to win?

Is this the soil whereon they moved?

Are these the graves they slumber in?

Are we the sons by whom are born
 The mantles which the dead have worn?

And shall we crouch above these graves,
 With craven soul and fettered lip?

Yoke in with marked and branded slaves,
 And tremble at the driver's whip?

Bend to the earth our pliant knees,
 And speak — but as our masters please?

I would like to express my gratitude to the GUARDIAN for being one of the few sources of truth in printed form in this country. Of the four freedoms Americans are supposed to enjoy only one (no thanks to the Government), that is the freedom of worship. Even this is indirectly censored by failing to punish members of the Ku Klux Klan and similar organizations. Here in Phila. FEPC is a law but it is not being enforced. Freedom of speech is long-forgotten. If I would get up and express these thoughts in my classroom my father might be deprived of his citizenship and then be deported.

I only wish other newspapers and more people would fight for the Four Freedoms as the GUARDIAN does. V. E. M., age 12

WAR & PEACE Taft strips bare U.S. global get-tough plans

By Tabitha Petran

THE deepening crisis of U.S. policy becomes increasingly plain. Paris' conservative Le Monde said (5/22):

• The policy of the cordon sanitaire [post-World War I term for the capitalist effort to crush socialist Russia, now described as "containment" or "liberation"] has proved its inanity from 1918 to our time.

Reflecting W. Europe's growing demand for a new policy, Le Monde saw the world moving towards "a new political orientation which could end East-West division in Europe and Asia." But it also warned that the combination which profits from East-West antagonism is organizing to try to block this new orientation.

WHAT TAFT DID: In the U.S., Sen. Taft expressed the frustration of U.S. policy in a speech (5/26) demanding that the U.S. "abandon the idea of working with the UN in the East and reserve to ourselves a completely free hand." To the Washington Star the speech was so "filled with doubts and misgivings" as to be "defeatist." Taft marked an important step in the unfolding of U.S. policy. His speech did these things:

• It exposed Washington's position by acknowledging: (1) the illegality of UN involvement in Korea; (2) NATO's "complete antithesis" to the UN charter; (3) the fact that "our policy has not been based on any reliance on the UN or any other country," but rather on military power and alliances.

• It indirectly admitted a major U.S. political-strategic defeat by recognizing that Washington's allies are unwilling to fight the U.S.S.R. and that the U.S. is unable therefore to wage victorious land war in Europe or Asia.

• It revealed the recklessness of U.S. policy and strategy: it doubted that the "policy of uniting the free world against communism in time of peace" could be "a practical long term policy"; it demanded a "completely free hand"—for global atomic war?

Liberation, Paris

"If you Chinese were sincere you'd offer to make peace between the British and Americans!"

BERMUDA-BOUND: Taft's power in the GOP has spawned the current Washington witticism: "If Taft should die, Eisenhower might become President." The President's gentle repudiation bore out the crack. James Reston remarked (N.Y. Times, 5/28):

There was no indication that this marked the beginning of a test of strength between the President and his Senate majority leader over the conduct of U.S. foreign policy.

On the contrary Taft appeared to have won an invitation to attend the Bermuda Conference of Mr. Eisenhower, Prime Minister Churchill and the French Premier.

There is, in fact, no real split either within the Administration or between Republicans and Democrats over policy or strategy. The policy is destruction of the socialist world; the strategy is global atomic war waged from peripheral bases—land, sea and air—on both sides of the world.

THE BURST BUBBLE: The military expert of the Tribune des Nations, Colonel X, commenting on the reorganization of the American Joint Chiefs of Staff (5/15), punctured the popular myth that the Democrats stand for a "European," and the Republicans for an "Asian" strategy. He wrote:

SEN. WILLIAM KNOWLAND
Bang!

From the American point of view there is no incompatibility between the military organization of Asia and that of Europe; on the contrary Washington considers the two fronts to be complementary.

A BIT TOO EARLY: Taft's disclosure of the real nature of U.S. policy, some Washington leaders felt, was premature—certain to hasten the crumbling of the western coalition. Walter Lippmann (6/1) chided Taft for not recognizing that "the whole machinery of strategic air power is founded upon the Western alliance." Lippmann seemed to ignore two things: (1) Taft's implication that Washington must have "a free hand" to act before it is too late and the coalition splits up completely; (2) that U.S. air atomic strategy envisages the over-running of W. Europe after the initial assault, so that only the initial phase, not "the whole machinery," depends on the coalition.

Taft's speech was part of a developing pattern which included:

• The naming of the new Joint Chiefs months ahead of schedule and the choice of outspoken war-with-China advocates for these posts; Admiral Radford's immediate departure for Formosa, upon his confirmation as Joint Chiefs chairman.

• Sen. Knowland's resolution to pull the U.S. out of the UN if China is admitted and his demand for expansion of the war even at the risk of World War III (the UN's truce terms, he said, would "lose most of Asia to the free world"); Sen. Sparkman's agreement that a stalemate is preferable to a truce.

• The President's pledge—under a Senate threat to bar U.S. funds to UN if China is admitted—to lead an all-out fight against China's admission.

• Sen. Mundt's warning that a

British Quaker in

BRITISH pacifist leader Stuart Denton Morris, imprisoned on Ellis Island since May 15 under the McCarran-Walter act, was allowed to enter the U.S. May 28.

The Board of Immigration Appeals in Washington overruled a finding that Morris, 63, general secy. of Britain's Peace Pledge Union, was an inadmissible alien. An immigration official had ruled previously that Morris was ineligible to enter the U.S. under a section of the McCarran-Walter act barring aliens whose activities would endanger the welfare, safety or security of the country.

seat for China will tie up foreign aid funds for nations supporting China's bid for UN membership and Sen. McCarthy's drive to force Washington's allies to impose a total embargo on trade to China.

FOXY GRANDPA: David Sentner, Washington bureau chief of the N.Y. Journal American, called these moves (6/1)

... part of a concerted campaign ... to forestall a threatened sellout to Moscow and Red China ... [to warn Britain and other allies the U.S.] will not stand for UN admission of Communist China ... [to notify the President] that he must not be taken into camp at the Bermuda Big Three conference by the wily Churchill. ...

But rising popular pressure in the West, including the U.S., continued to demand a Korean truce and talks with Moscow to end the cold war. The President acknowledged it when he said (5/28) that mail "was running three to five times above the White House record and did not show any trend to isolationism" (NYT, 5/29). A legitimate assumption is that much of this mail favors the allied position for compromise. Increasingly, letters to local papers reflected growing impatience over the President's failure to fulfill his campaign promises to end the Korean War and lower taxes. Editorially the Lawrence (Mass.) Evening Tribune said:

Now that the Communists have yielded in the matter of the forced repatriation of prisoners of war, and have agreed further that reluctant POW's need not be transported to a neutral country, it does not seem that it should be too difficult to arrange an armistice.

UNITY AND TRADE: Le Monde (5/23) declared that Eisenhower's call for the Bermuda talks was an answer to Churchill's threat to talk to Malenkov alone. AP (5/30) said Churchill would ask support for four-power talks from Commonwealth leaders gathered in London for the Coronation. Thomas J. Hamilton reported (NYT, 5/31):

Almost every [UN] delegate this writer has encountered is in favor of a Big 4 meeting without bothering too much about the pre-conditions fixed by the U.S. ...

In W. Germany Erich Ollenhauer, leader of the powerful Social Democrats, demanded four-power talks to discuss the reunification of Germany.

WORLD Dulles seeks Asian 'NATO' as West Europe crisis deepens

By Kumar Goshal

SECY. of State Dulles, returning from his lightning tour of the Middle and Far East, presented to the U.S. the formidable task of finding solutions to: the Arab-Israel conflict; the Anglo-Egyptian struggle over control of Suez; the India-Pakistan dispute over Kashmir; and the building of NATO-like Middle and S.E. Asia Army treaty organizations (although the fate of the European Army treaty remains uncertain).

Referring to the widespread feeling that the U.S. was trying to bolster imperialist interests, Dulles said that the U.S. must make clear to all nations that the NATO alliance was not meant to help colonial powers keep or recover their colonies.

BAD BUSINESS: In an editorial on Dulles' tour, the N.Y. Daily News (6/1) said:

... the U.S. tentacles of power and influence are spread around the world in a manner which would have appalled Americans of 20 years ago; ... a person's own business suffers when he takes to minding everybody else's business ... this is as true of nations as it is of persons; the old [colonial] habit of crooking the knee and yielding all the profits in sight to the all-wise European is doing a fadeout of breath-taking swiftness and size ... [never to] revive.

The pressure also showed in what even American observers admitted was an almost irresistible demand for expansion of trade with the socialist world. This demand dominated the recent Intl. Chamber of Commerce trade meeting in Vienna—though East-West trade was not on the agenda. The April meeting of the UN Economic Commission for Europe in Geneva resulted in East-West bilateral trade talks all over Europe.

DANGER AHEAD: The Washington tempo has been stepped up to block—if possible to smash—these popular pressures which are slowly pushing the world toward a new political orientation. The Taft-Radford-Wilson-Dulles-McCarthy offensive is backed by great power and resources: top posts in the Administration, on Capitol Hill and throughout the U.S.'s far-flung military command; powerful allies in all capitalist countries.

Drawing by Dyad, London

"Further outlook: fine and warm."

The President has docilely followed their lead and there is great danger that they can block a Korean truce. S. Korean President Syngman Rhee's manufactured defiance of the latest U.S. truce proposals demonstrated the variety of tactics at the disposal of these forces.

Business Week pointed out (5/23): "If there is no truce, a bigger war in Asia is almost inevitable." CBS reporter Bill Costello warned (5/31) that unless there is strong popular pressure on the President, the war-with-China forces "may take the U.S. into the most expensive war in history."

AFRICAN EMPIRE: Albion Ross (N.Y. Times, 6/1) found in Kenya signs of Britain's "firm intention to build up ... the imperial structure of East and Central Africa [to] replace the loss of India and [her] crumbling ... position in the Middle East." Ross reported a revival of the wartime East African command under Gen. Sir George Erskine, former commander of British forces in Suez, with Frederick Crawford, World War II director of economic warfare in E. Africa, the Deputy Governor of Kenya. Gen. Erskine's new command includes all of British-occupied territory within the old Middle East Command, stretches from the Zambesi River in Rhodesia to Ethiopia and into the Indian Ocean as far as the islands of Seychelles and Mauritius. Assured of the support of the South African, Belgian Congo and Portuguese Mozambique governments, Britain clearly aimed at a new center of power in E. Africa.

THE FARE DEAL

City Hall hands over subways; 'Day of Infamy,' ALP says

By Elmer Bendiner

DESIGN for a subway fare token, smaller than a dime but worth at least 15c, was approved before the city's seal was affixed last week to the deal turning over the $1,700,000,000 transit system to a Transit Authority on a 10-year lease.

The ceremony sealing the deal on Monday was to be a formality, climaxing a six-months mock battle against it by City Hall politicians, most of whom are running for the Mayoralty. Throughout the campaign, whenever anti-fare-boost forces pressed hard, City Hall retreated "regretfully," ducking the blame by pointing to the Governor.

EASY OUT: Until two days before the sign-over Controller Lazarus Joseph had maintained he would cast his 3 decisive votes on the Board of Estimate against the plan but he had been careful to leave himself a way out. Last Monday he took that out, apologetically but nonetheless effectively guaranteeing a fare boost. All blamed Albany, insisted they were taking the "lesser evil." Earlier Mayor

Impellitteri had posed as an alternative a budget that would make the city a "ghost town."

Council Pres. Halley and Manhattan Boro Pres. Wagner cast their five votes, as expected, against the deal. Halley had earlier projected a devastating belt-tightening as his alternative.

At the show-down the Board of Estimate chamber was filled mainly with the press, the kleig lights and cameras set to record the closing of the deal. In the audience the one group represented in opposition was the American Labor Party.

Before the final vote, ALP's exec. secy. Arthur Schutzer asked to be heard. Board members stirred restlessly. Schutzer first offered newsmen a picture caption: "Day our throats by the Governor."

Schutzer answered Halley: "If he rammed it down your throats, then the throats of the honorable members of the Board are the most receptive throats I've ever seen."

Put on the spot by ALP's lone voice, the members of the Board drew together. The Daily Mirror reported that the session had been "marked by verbal pot-shots except when members closed ranks to support the Mayor against an ALP charge that he and Gov. Dewey had cooked up the transit proposal as part of a secret plot."

The Transit Authority was to decide by July 15 how high the fare would go, effective July 30.

BIG MEDICINE VOTED NO, BUT . . .

Carver Houses will get low cost clinic

RESIDENTS of Harlem's Carver Houses are to have a low-cost clinic. State Housing Commissioner Herman T. Stichman decided last week. The state-subsidized project, to be built in the area from Madison to Park Av. and from 99th to 106th Sts. adjoining Mt. Sinai Hospital, will have apartments costing from $32 for 2½ rooms to $45 for four or five. It will house 1,400 of the Negro, Puerto Rican, Italian and other national-group families of that area whose annual incomes are from $1,200 to $2,800.

The Housing Commissioner made his statement the day after a majority of the 300 doctors at the Medical Society of the County of New York's 148th annual meeting had voted down what the minority called "a preventive psychiatry service and research unique in the field of preventive medicine."

The plan has been fought by the N.Y. state and county medical societies and the Greater N.Y. Hospital Assn. (representing 93 voluntary and 30 municipal hospitals)—assisted by most of the press—since Stichman first proposed it Dec. 7, 1950.

In the Medical Society debate, doctors offered these arguments against the plan:

- The clinic would be operated outside the premises of Mt. Sinai, "a step toward corporate medical practice."

- Patients, when too ill to go to the clinic, would have doctors calling at the apartments.

- The agreement negotiated between Mt. Sinai trustees and the state has not been submitted to the hospital's medical staff.

- The "poor man" has a "right to pay his own doctor bills."

- It is an effort of "politicians" to ride "to power on the backs of the poor."

- "The indigent are entitled to self respect. They will not accept charity."

- It represents "alarming" "business tendencies" in hospital management."

Dr. Martin R. Steinberg, director of Mt. Sinai, analyzed the plan as follows:

- "All Carver Houses residents, as well as families living in the slums adjoining . . . would be entitled to clinic ambulatory services in the Mt. Sinai Hospital Carver Clinic" just as "low-income families are now eligible to clinic care in Mt. Sinai."

- A research project would "make it possible to study the effect of good housing on the physical and mental health of . . . 400 families of the 1,400 which are to be housed in the Carver Houses."

- "Each enrolled family will have a family doctor who will have office hours at the Center three times a week. The family doctor will also make home calls upon members of the family too ill to consult him at the clinics."

- "The medical aspects of the program, especially as it relates to preventive psychiatry, will have to center around the 'family doctor' and his relationship to the residents of the project. . . . Not only the physical aspects of pregnancy and pre-natal care will be considered, but also the preparation for the psychological aspects of parenthood, the mother's emotional reactions to pregnancy and the advent of the child will be presented through the medium of the psychiatrist, social worker, nurse, obstetrician and pediatrician."

- "A well-baby clinic which would meet at least twice weekly would provide the necessary care and advice as to proper nutrition, the maintenance of the good health of the infant, immunization against diphtheria, smallpox, whooping-cough, and other infectious diseases. This would be tied in with lectures, discussions of the emotional problems presented at this age."

- "In conjunction with the pre-natal and well-baby clinics, a nutritional guidance service for the whole family will be set up," involving work "not only with individual families but also the education of the community, utilizing known effective techniques." P.T.A. groups, "individual house units, political affiliations, and all other group units that might be available in such a community," would be consulted.

MOST RECEPTIVE: The Mayor flushed angrily, charged Schutzer with "an outrageous statement of villification." Halley who, when he campaigned in the early days of the fare fight, had made exactly the same accusation, now switched to the Mayor's side, said the fare rise is "obviously something rammed down fare boost was enough in an election year, balked at the cost in votes implicit in the Mayor's plan to extend the sales tax.

Controller Lazarus Joseph discovered at the last minute that in his earlier reckoning he had miscalculated funds on hand from last year's taxes by $12,000,000, making more taxes needless. Simultaneously Joseph announced his availability for the mayoralty.

Defeat of the tax rise proposal came after business groups had threatened an "all-out-war" (NYT, 6/3). Their protests seemed more effective than those of subway riders.

Vito Marcantonio: The American Labor Party and the Future

American Labor Party Chairman Vito Marcantonio recently reported on the 1953 municipal elections to the ALP State Conference in the Stuyvesant Casino. Here is an abridged version of his speech:

By Vito Marcantonio

LINCOLN OPENED his famous "house divided" speech with these words: "If we could first know where we are and whither we are tending, we could then better know what to do and how to do it."

This advice is as sound today as on June 16, 1858.

The issue fixes where we are and whither we are tending. The issue today is whether or not our country can live at peace with the Soviet Union, China and other countries whose economic, political and social system vary fundamentally from ours. On the resolution of this great question rests the present and future welfare of Americans.

We have asserted throughout, that war between us and those who have differing systems would be as insane as the religious wars that almost destroyed Europe. World War today would destroy civilization. That is why time and time again we have stated that the best defense of America is peace.

Today, the present phase of the question is an early and honorable peace in Korea, preventing our being catapulted into the Indo-China war, and to stop the spreading of the war to engulf the entire Asian continent. On this issue, again we find that the leadership, those who control the machines of the Republican, Democratic and Liberal parties stand as one on the negative and we again reiterate our position in the affirmative for peace.

This fixes where we are. Now, whither are we tending?

AMERICANS ARE definitely tending towards peace. They are forcing their government toward it. They are tending towards the restoration of their civil liberties and the establishment of equality and the guarantee of the general welfare.

I now deal with the question of what to do and how to do it.

The answer to this problem is a political movement, national in scope, which will give political expression to the desires of the people and to the establishment of the affirmative of the issue. It is obvious that this cannot be done through the machines of either the Republican, Democratic or Liberal parties. The three stand together. They are owned and motivated by the same masters. They strive to thwart the will of the American people for peace. The simulated difference between them is used by the same manipulators to confuse and confound and divide Americans so as to nullify any effort by the people to achieve political action in their own behalf.

It is significant that not a single leader of any one of these three machines, either in the upper or lower echelons, has at any time expressed any word of opposition on the great fundamental issue of peace.

I have been speaking of the machines of these parties. I expressly and with all the emphasis of which I am capable assert that these sins are not those of the 33 million who voted the Republican ticket and of the 26 million who voted the Democratic ticket.

If given a genuine, independent third party movement, the American people will join it and will support it and make it the other party of genuine opposition, thus once again re-establishing the two-party system.

THE OVERRIDING question here has been since the end of World War II who shall pay the cost of an ever-expanding city?

The Dewey-Impelleri program is to let the real estate gang escape their responsibility by placing the burden on those who have to ride to and from work by increasing their fares.

The Halley-Liberal Party way of letting the real estate gang escape is by so-called economy which means taking it out of the necessary services which the little people so badly need and in which there are so many shortcomings such as relief, child care and health.

The Halley plan would turn back our hospitals and schools to the pre-World War I days. It would turn the clock back to 1910.

Therefore, in answering the question of what to do in the City elections, I apply what I have attempted to establish with respect to the question of what to do nationally.

Here in the City of New York, the people's interest cannot be protected through the machinery of the Republican, Democratic and Liberal parties any more than they can be protected on a national scale through these machines. I have sought to meet the problem nationally by calling for the establishment of an independent political party. I offer the same for the City, the establishment of an independent political movement. This can best be accomplished with the aid of the only political party which has carried the fight in the interests of the little people—our own American Labor Party.

Some now state that this is not what to do. They say we have experimented with the third party and that it has failed. They tell us that the vote which the third party received in 1952 was inconsequential.

This is true but where I differ is in the discernment of the cause and with the solution offered for it. They say that people will not leave the Democratic and Republican parties for a third party. This is not true. I firmly believe that millions of Americans will join and support a new national third party so as to re-establish once again a two-party system by which their aspirations can be served.

AS FOR OUR PAST experiences, I maintain that the Progressive Party prior to the convention of 1948 had a potential of many millions of votes. Its program was the restoration of the Roosevelt foreign policy and the Roosevelt domestic program. This was the enunciated objective of that Party prior to the convention in July, 1948.

At that convention, I recommended, as the Republicans of one hundred years ago did, "the affiliation and cooperation of men of all parties, however differing from them in other respects, in support of the principles declared."

Our Party failed to live up to this precept—a simple political precept of gathering the greatest number of people around a few all-important central issues irrespective of their disagreement on other matters. We violated this principle. From the beginning of the convention to this very day, we have operated not on the basis of fundamentals but on tangents. We have been everything but a political party.

We have been a civil rights organization, a peace organization, a defense committee, and time and time again we functioned as though we were not even remotely connected with the basic issues on which we were formed.

We have been off the main beam politically time and time again. As a result, many refused to join while others left us. This was the cause of our failure as a third party. It was not the concept of a third party that was wrong but it was the way we did it. Consequently we do not abandon the concept of a new national political party and of the strengthening locally of the American Labor Party. In fact, we reaffirm that concept.

IUTTERLY repudiate any idea of abandoning our Party or its functions as a political party. I also likewise repudiate the alternative that is offered, and that is of liquidating our party either directly or indirectly, and that of our people subordinating themselves to the machinery of the Republican, Democratic and Liberal parties.

This means that they are to become the "untouchables, the invisibles and the mutes within the Democratic Party or the Liberal or Republican party. This would mean to allow the American people to be tied to the machines of these parties, depriving them of any opportunity of establishing a political opposition to these machines. This course means the paralysis of any effort to cause the realignment which is so necessary to the welfare of the American people.

I refuse to believe that what to do is to surrender.

I believe in a two-party system. I reiterate that the three parties are one and that there must be another one.

This can be best accomplished with the establishment of a new political party which again I say would help bring about the realignment, the second party. And here in the City of New York, again I say this can best be accomplished with an active, independent, growing American Labor Party dedicated to the principles that I have herein enunciated calling for the "affiliation and cooperation of men of all parties, however differing from them in other respects, in support of the principles declared."

I now come to the question of how to do it. There must be a beginning. Here in 1953, we can continue to begin in the face of the situation as I have described it.

The American Labor Party, in order to give political expression to the forward march of the common people of this country which has at long last resumed its course, must nominate candidates for all of the major offices to be elected in the municipal elections in New York City in 1953.

Those who have abandoned the course of a third party as the surest way toward bringing about the necessary realignment would urge upon us not to nominate candidates. Failure to nominate a candidate is a rare exception engaged in by political parties only under the most extraordinary circumstances. The conditions of 1953 do not warrant any such exception. Not to nominate our candidates under these circumstances is liquidation by indirection.

NOT TO NOMINATE would force on us the role of a pressure group. The moment we assume the role of a pressure group, we die as a political party and we soon become extinct as a pressure group and fail to survive in any manner.

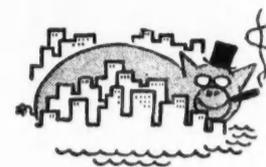

We are not a political maneuver, we are a political movement. We are not a pressure group; we are a political party. The question is not one of going or not going it alone. To raise such an issue at this time is dishonest for the realities of the situation preclude any such issue. We face the political realities of 1953 without indulging in political metaphysics. We seek no partisan advantage. We are ready to stand with anyone who stands right.

The coalition of the real estate gang consists of the Democratic Party leadership on the one hand and the Republican and Liberal party leadership on the other, the Impelleris, the Deweys, the Javits', the Halleys, the Windels, the Rockefeller, and the Riegelmans. All of these either through a higher fare or by cutting or by reducing the necessary services of the people serve those who benefit from low assessment. They are the candidates of the big real estate gang. They hide behind the false facade of good government.

They do not stand right. They stand wrong.

WE ARE READY to nominate anyone who stands right even though he be not a member of our Party. In fact, we will withdraw our candidate and nominate him, if such an occurrence should take place. Please note that I use the word—nominate.

This means that while we are ready to subordinate our partisan interests, we will not subordinate our identity as a political party, nor compromise the fundamental issue or the fundamental principles. This means we will place him or her on our ticket. It is inherent in anyone who will not run on our ticket that he does not stand right under the conditions of the day, and on the fundamental questions of the time.

I say we are ready to seek any and every alliance of the common people, the little people of this city, in this election. We do so as a political party seeking to serve the best interests of the common people of our city.

Doing what I have recommended and doing it in the manner that I have suggested here, I know is not easy. The course of progress has always been difficult. The fight in the interest of the indigent, the poor, the Negroes, labor, and farmers, and for the affirmation of peace, equality and freedom, has always been a severe and painful endeavor.

What is the alternative—to surrender the fight, to listen to the words of those who would have us become a pressure group, to liquidate our party as a result of not functioning as a political party, to disperse and give up our political enterprise toward the establishment of the realignment which everybody admits is so necessary? I think not.

As your chairman, I say—I pledge my personal endeavor in the exercise of my leadership to guarantee that this will not occur.

IBEGAN THIS speech with the words that Lincoln used in his "house divided" speech. I now humbly adopt the words he used in closing that famous speech:

"We did this under a single impulse of resistance to a common danger with every external circumstance against us. We formed and fought the battle through under the constant, hot fire of a disciplined, proud and bitter enemy. Would we brave all then to falter now—now when the same enemy is wavering? The result is not doubtful. We shall not fail—if we stand firm—we shall not fail. Wise counsel may accelerate or mistakes delay it but sooner or later the victory is sure to come."

The Manhattanville story

NEW YORK, N. Y.
Since I have lived on Morning-side Heights since 1921, I know the Morning-side-Manhattanville area pretty well. I feel that I have some basis for saying that the article in the June 1 GUARDIAN called "The Manhattanville Story" is quite unfair and one-sided. Certainly you are justified in exposing Earl Brown's silly discovery of a "plot" to capture the PTA at P.S. 125, but when you go on to discuss the housing situation, the "hill and valley" division, as you call it, and the motives you ascribe to the "hill" people, you are definitely unfair. To write as though the "Save Our Homes Committee" was composed of angels of light and all the rest of the Morning-side-Manhattanville residents were villains and oppressors is a very great oversimplification.

You say almost nothing of the constructive work that the Morning-side Citizens Comm. has done in the situation. And you say almost nothing about the low-rent public housing planned for the area near 125th St., which would house 1,536 families. Surely this is far more important than the cooperative, and it takes priority in construction over the cooperative. The low-cost housing is badly needed in that area. If Federal funds are withheld and the low-cost housing project is delayed, that will not be a very desirable result for the thousands of families in that section who do need and want better housing.

Come and hear what you can do to stop McCarthyism

FRIDAY, JUNE 5, 8:30 p.m.
 PALM GARDEN, 306 W. 52d ST.

JUNE 4 TO JULY 4 IS AMNESTY MONTH

The fight for amnesty

IN THIS TIME of McCarthyism, we can ill afford to neglect the fight against the thought-control Smith Act, upheld two years ago by a 6-2 majority of the Supreme Court.

The decision in the Dennis case did more than order 11 Communist Party leaders to prison. It lifted the curbs placed on Congress by the First Amendment. It made opposition to the policies of a reactionary administration a "conspiracy to teach and advocate" forcible overthrow of government. It gave credence to the testimony of perjured witnesses, who now ride the McCarthy-McCarran-Velde-Jenner circuit—ruining reputations and robbing hundreds of their means of livelihood.

All of us are paying a big price for letting the Smith Act sneak up on us. All of us have good reason to support the campaign to free those whom it has imprisoned, or threatens with imprisonment.

AMNESTY—especially for labor and political prisoners—is no new concept in the U. S. As early as 1801 President Thomas Jefferson freed all the jailed victims of the Alien and Sedition Acts. President Andrew Johnson granted amnesty to many prisoners convicted of overt opposition to the Federal government during the Civil War. In 1898 Gov. John Peter Altgeld of Illinois gave full pardons to the three surviving victims of the Haymarket affair. (Four were hanged before Altgeld took office.)

President Wilson freed some of the victims of World War I "red" hysteria; President Harding released Eugene V. Debs from a prison sentence, freed 23 other political prisoners. Debs was sentenced to ten years for a speech opposing

U. S. entry into World War I. The Socialist Party, which he headed, had no more than 5,000 members at the time. But they, together with many in all other parties, gathered more than 300,000 signatures to an amnesty petition and won the support of 700 organizations with a combined membership of more than 3,000,000. Debs while behind bars received nearly 1,000,000 votes as his party's presidential candidate.

MOONEY FREED: When Calvin Coolidge assumed the Presi-

SINCE the current cycle of prosecutions under the Smith Act began with the indictment of the top Communist Party leaders in July, 1948 (neatly timed with that year's Presidential elections), these are the present grim statistics:

Indicted	86
Convicted	44
In prison	14
On appeal	27
Now on trial	19
Awaiting trial	12
Severed for illness	5
Acquitted	2
Political refugees	7

dency, there were still 165 political prisoners behind bars; he freed them all. Franklin D. Roosevelt restored full civil rights to all World War I victims, pardoned Earl Browder, then head of the Communist

The basic right

WE are troubled that men, whose crime is a lively conscience in the face of what they consider the inequities of society and the advocacy of social change which they believe will result in a larger benefit for all, are in prison. Whether their views are right or wrong, justified or unjustified, wise or unwise, is beside the point. Under our traditional concept of freedom, conscientious advocacy is a basic democratic right and the glory of all is in jeopardy when any are penalized and silenced.

—From a statement addressed to former President Harry S. Truman signed by 161 church leaders.

Party. California's Gov. Olson pardoned Tom Mooney, who had originally been sentenced to death. President Truman in 1947 set up an Amnesty Board that freed many World War II

The National Committee to Win Amnesty for Smith Act Victims has designated June 4 to July 4 "Amnesty Month." It is using the occasion of the second anniversary of the Supreme Court decision to launch a movement to put an end to thought-control prosecutions, and free all those convicted solely for their political views and activity.

WE THINK all readers of the GUARDIAN will want to support this campaign. That is why we have asked this space to tell the story of the amnesty tradition, and the high-lights of the current amnesty campaign.

For more information about the Smith Act, and the story of the men and women now in prison, we suggest that you mail the coupon below.

BENJAMIN DAVIS
He was early

The Davis story

BENJAMIN J. DAVIS Jr., former New York City Councilman, was one of the first to be convicted and sentenced under the current Smith Act trials. Last week he was transferred from the Federal penitentiary at Terre Haute, Ind., to the Allegheny County jail; he will appear as a defense witness for five Smith Act victims being tried in Pittsburgh.

Among the Pittsburgh defendants are Steve Nelson, outstanding veteran of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, which fought in Spain, and Ben Careathers, long-time Negro leader in the steel city. Nelson is already serving a 20-year sentence under a World War I state sedition law; Careathers has been denied a severance despite a serious tubercular condition.

The Natl. Comm. To Win Amnesty expects Davis' appearance in the Pittsburgh court to widen the growing movement to free all Smith Act victims. During Davis' stay in Pittsburgh, letters can reach him in care of the Federal Court House there.

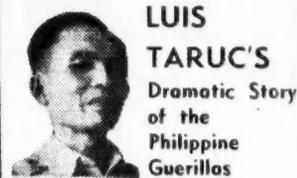

JOHN GATES
No overt acts

The Gates story

CURRENT attacks on freedom of the press began with arrest, trial and conviction of Daily Worker editor John Gates in 1948-49. He has now served 23 months of a five-year sentence for "teaching and advocating" ideas forbidden under the Smith Act. No overt acts were charged against him.

All told, seven newsmen—editors and reporters—have been indicted under the Smith Act.

The attack on the press, begun with the indictment of Gates, has now widened to include both the GUARDIAN's own editor, Cedric Belfrage, and editor James Wechsler of the violently anti-Communist N.Y. Post.

LUIS TARUC'S
Dramatic Story of the Philippine Guerrillas

BORN OF THE PEOPLE

Foreword by Paul Robeson

Written in bivouac, forest, and swamp, this monumental and moving book tells for the first time the full story of the Hukbalahap—the People's Liberation Army of the Philippines. Luis Taruc, author of the book and commander of the army, has been called "bandit," "murderer" and "traitor"—even as George Washington was called by these very names when he led the ragged, embattled farmers in the American War for Independence. Taruc's autobiography tears aside the curtain of lies and gives us a true glimpse of colonial people fighting for their freedom. Luis Taruc, guerrilla commander and political leader, is also a writer who has produced a literary masterpiece with a rare beauty of style and depth of feeling.

"A MASTERPIECE OF OUR TIME"

DR. W. E. B. DuBOIS—"A long-needed addition to the history of American imperialism. Every honest American should read Luis Taruc's calm, factual and detailed story of his bitter life."

HARRY F. WARD—"This is life expressing itself. Nowhere else that I know is the welding of a people and a leader so clearly portrayed. All through this book are vivid touches of the beauty of ordinary human living and gleams of the faith, hope and courage of the common people."

HOWARD FAST—"A masterpiece of our time . . . the greatest of all things I have read about colonial struggles for liberation today."

IN 1801 President Thomas Jefferson freed every victim of the Alien and Sedition Laws still in jail at the time. He later explained his action:

"I discharged every person under punishment or prosecution under the sedition law, because I considered, and now consider, that law to be a nullity, as absolute and as palpable as if Congress had ordered us to fall down and worship a golden image."
Works, Vol. X, p. 87.

W. E. B. DuBOIS WRITES

Of a man born of the people

By W. E. B. DuBois

THERE is a widely believed legend that the treatment of the peoples of the Philippines by the U.S. has been an ideal case of contact between a white industrial nation and a colored colonial people, with philanthropy, missions and education. This autobiography of a Filipino peasant, Luis Taruc, is bitter proof to the contrary.

Our own historical annals should have taught us this long ago. The description of the U.S. as a colonial power of the classic type is not a Russian lie. As early as 1898 our liberal newspaper editor, William Allen White, wrote in his Emporia Gazette:

"Only Anglo-Saxons can govern themselves. . . . It is the Anglo-Saxon manifest destiny to go forth as the world conqueror. He will take possession of the islands of the sea—this is what fate holds for the chosen people."

Young Senator Beveridge echoed this in his first speech:

"The Philippines are ours forever. . . . And just beyond the Philippines are China's illimitable markets. We will not retreat from either. The Pacific is the ocean of the commerce of the future and most future wars will be conflicts for commerce. . . . We will not renounce our part in the mission of our race, trustees under God, of the civilization of the world. . . . that power is and will forever be the American Republic. . . ."

EARLIEST MEMORY: Thus we made our debut as Colonial Imperialists, and Taruc tells us to what ends we have come. He is the son of peasants, born in Pampanga in 1913. He was "born of the people," a serf of the landlord:

"Perhaps the biggest fact in my life was the landlord. When I was still crawling in the dust of the barrio street, I remember the landlords coming into the barrio, shouting 'Hoy, Puneta!' (Hey, you so-and-so), and making the peasants run to carry out their demands. Our people would have to catch the fattest hen, get milk and eggs, and bring the biggest fish to the landlord. If they delayed, or perhaps did not do things to the landlord's liking, they were fined, or given extra work. In an extreme case they might be evicted. And where would they go for justice? The landlord owned the barrio. He was the justice, too."

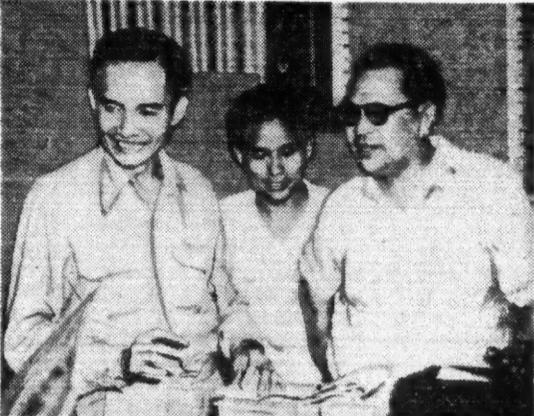

HEART AND HEAD: His grandfather had owned land but the landgrabbers got it. His father's only defense was "his goodness." He was "so soft-spoken, so humble, so kind," who would never think of harming anyone. Luis grew up resentful:

"I saw that you need more than a good heart, that you need a good head, if you must fight for your rights. I determined to study, to gain knowledge, to know how to fight if I had to."

His schooling was a grim fight with starvation, but he finished high school in 1932, in the midst of depression, with hunger strikes. He tried to enter the law school at the University of Manila, and to support himself he dug ditches until his strength failed. He returned to his peasant home to work as a tailor. When the Americans had come to oust the Spaniards, all had hoped for democracy and land reform. But laborers were still getting five cents a day, and the American Sugar Trust was in the saddle.

THE NEW WIND: Taruc dreamed of becoming Robin Hood. He heard of Socialism and Communism and listened to their speakers. When he himself began to speak publicly he found himself talking Socialism before he quite knew what it meant. Strikes and disorder spread.

"THE STRUGGLE WILL BE COMPLETED. . . ." Luis Taruc (l) with Alfredo Saulo (c) and Amado Hernandez, labor leader sentenced to life by Quirino.

"The tide that reached Pampanga was now sweeping the whole world. It was the anti-fascist spirit of the people. Filipino peasants and workers, as well as the industrial workers of other nations, were awake to the menace of fascism. From our fields we had watched the Spanish people in their heroic, single-handed struggle to the death against Hitler, Mussolini and Franco, and the unquenchable struggle of the Chinese people against the Japanese aggressors."

In December, 1941, when the Japanese attacked, the peasants offered help:

"Labor battalions were organized to cooperate with the American and Philippine armies. Casto Alejandrino, the Socialist mayor of Arayat, contacted by the U.S. engineers, promised 5,000 workers in 24 hours. The entire number was organized in less than that time. They helped to construct defenses and camouflaged positions from Concepcion to Candaba."

For three long years the struggle kept up, not simply against Japanese but against Filipinos who sold out to the enemy and to the landlords.

BUT NO FRIENDS: The story of this fight of the Hukbalahaps is a saga of classic proportions, which must be read in Taruc's autobiography to be appreciated. A people's army grew and spread, it fought and failed and fought and was victorious. It saved the Philippines from complete conquest by Japan, and yet when "liberation" came from the returning Americans, Taruc and the guerillas found the Americans suspicious enemies rather than friends.

The Philippines were then finally re-organized under Roxas, and Philippine independence proclaimed July 4, 1946. Reaction had a free hand, and a pacification campaign was started, which meant that the Hukbalahaps were now the hunted bandits.

THE CARPETBAGGERS: Roxas paid his debt to the Americans by accepting the Bell Act, which allowed American goods of any kind and in any quantity to enter the Philippines free, while only a few Philippine raw materials under quota could be sent to the U.S. The value of the peso was fixed to that of the American dollar, and American capitalists had the right to enter the Philippines without restriction to participate in any business including public facilities, on an equal basis with Filipinos, and to exploit natural resources. In addition to this, American military forces were given the right to maintain bases in the country for a period of 99 years. American officers were to train Philippine forces.

Roxas died in 1948 at a U.S. Army air base, and the Vice President, Quirino, succeeded him. He tried again to compromise with the Hukbalahaps and conferred with Taruc in Manila. Taruc was allowed the seat in Congress to which he had been previously elected, but soon the terror launched by Quirino exceeded that of Roxas, with murder, torture and rape.

OIL OF JERSEY: Despite American education, one half the Filipinos are still illiterate, and large numbers of the rest can hardly read or write. Tuberculosis and beri beri are widespread. The Filipino moves about in an American-made world. He grows pineapples and sends them to California to be canned. He grows coconut and then buys toilet soap made in New Jersey out of coconut oil. He uses sugar grown at home and refined in America.

But Taruc and his followers still fight. The last words of his book are:

"The final pages of this book are being written in a very small nipa hut, somewhere on the slope of a mountain above the central plain of the island of Luzon. It is a temporary shelter, newly built, and it may have to be abandoned quickly, perhaps today, perhaps this afternoon. Perhaps even as I sit here writing, an alarm will come. The enemy is not far away."

"Here in this small hut on the side of a mountain, looking out upon the soil that bred me, upon the land of my people of whom I was born, I complete this book, which is more their record than mine. The struggle of which I have written, and to which I have tried to contribute, is still not completed, but it will be, and the people will triumph."

BORN OF THE PEOPLE. By Luis Taruc. With a Foreword by Paul Robeson. International Publishers, New York, 1953. 286 Pages with glossary and biographical notes. Cloth $3, popular ed. $1.75.

Dulles seeking an Asian 'NATO'

FORCED LABOR: The Kenya government, announcing Gen. Erskine's "first job will be to restore law and order in Kenya," issued a forced labor decree applicable to Africans only, and planned—against white people's misgivings—to raise an armed force among Asians in Kenya. This was an indirect admission that the Kikuyu liberation movement "has been extending rather than contracting" (NYT, 6/20, 23, 29). Observing the increasing publicity given to gruesome tales of atrocities allegedly perpetrated by the Kikuyus, London's New Statesman (5/23) said: "the fact that the war in Kenya is nothing but an effort to put down a revolutionary rising of Kikuyu against . . . servile conditions is being rapidly forgotten."

FRANCE TRIES FRANCE: Pierre Mendes-France, French representative on the International Monetary Fund, attempted last week to form a new cabinet. In the past he has vigorously contended that France was overburdened by rearmament. He told Le Monde (5/16):

... facts have forced us to admit for a long time that no military victory is possible [in Indo-China]. The only solution is . . . negotiation. Our position to negotiate was better two years ago than last year; better last year than now; is probably less bad today than it will be a year from now.

Last week, however, Mendes-France told the press that, since France had accepted U.S. aid in the Indo-China war, an international solution of the war must be found (NYT, 6/1). He is called a financial wizard, but the New Statesman's Paris correspondent pointed out (5/30) that "the French financial crisis cannot be solved . . . until clear decisions are taken on European defense army, on rearmament, and, above all, on whether the war in Vietnam is to go on or not."

ADENAUER'S STAKE: Chancellor Adenauer "has been advised" that the Federal Court was certain to declare several features of the European Army treaty unconstitutional (N.Y. Herald Tribune, 6/1). Adenauer, who "has staked his government's fortunes" on this treaty, was said to be trying to persuade the court to withhold its decision until after the September elections.

From Bonn M. S. Handler reported (NYT, 6/1) that the powerful Social Democratic Party, second largest, "which has its ear very close to the ground," appeared certain that "more Germans are prepared to accept a reunited Germany even at the cost of neutralization than is generally believed." According to Handler, Social Democratic leader Erich Ollenhauer has demanding that "the three Western High Commissioners meet with Vladimir Semyenov, newly appointed Soviet High Commissioner [to E. Germany] to discuss reunification of Germany. . . . The official U.S. concept of a Soviet rollback under strong . . . pressure from the West is finding less credit today than when originally enunciated. . . . [The] idea of achieving reunification through a four-power agreement has been making noticeable, if discreet gains. . . ." Adenauer was worried because his government "would have a very poor prospect in united Germany" (Walter Lippmann, 5/21).

Vie Nuove, Rome
"As you can see, this is the millionaires' part of the city."

ITALIAN CAMPAIGN: On the eve of elections June 7, strong pressures were exerted on the electorate to return pro-U.S. Premier De Gasperi to power. Every parish priest read during mass a "notification" from Clemente Cardinal Micara, the Pope's vicar for the Diocese of Rome, to "vote as Catholics and . . . as Romans" (NYT, 6/1). In Milan, Cardinal Schuster—credited with pro-fascist leanings during Mussolini's regime—joined other Catholic Church leaders in exhorting the Italians to vote "solidly" for De Gasperi (NYT, 5/29).

While Secy. Dulles told the Asians that the U.S. had "no disposition to meddle in the affairs of others" (NYT, 5/25), the U.S. by sheer coincidence announced exactly a week before the elections that Italy was to receive $22 million in direct economic aid by June 30. New York's Mayor Impellitteri and Cardinal Spellman urged Italians in the U.S. to write to relatives and friends in Italy to "vote anti-Communist" (NYT, 5/29). John O'Donnell (N.Y. Daily News, 6/1) reported that U.S. Ambassador to Italy Clare Luce, "with a private OK from the State Department," was making "political speeches, bearing down on the Italian domestic situation . . . [giving] the direct warning that U.S. dough to Italy will be cut off" if Italians fail to vote for De Gasperi. Arnaldo Cortesi predicted (NYT, 5/29) that Ambassador Luce's statement was "certain to be full of political consequences."
