WELLS-LAMONT GLOVE WORKERS SETTLE STRIKE

Wages Raised, Strike Ends, Work-Shop Committees Installed

On Monday afternoon the striking workers of the Wells-Lamont Glove Works at 213 K. St., held a meeting which resulted in the acceptance of the settlement proposals of the manufacturers. This action brings to a close the six-weeks' strike of the union members, who were to return to work Monday morning, May 3. The management had asked for this delay in order to have an opportunity to bring the consent of the workers to the settlement proposals. The final settlement, which was worked out last Thursday, provides for wage increases of from 15 to 25 per cent, an additional vacation of seven days, and amended working conditions. The strike has ended without loss of lives or property and with no public inconvenience. No grievances were entered against the workers. The union members were met at the railroad stations by the management and were driven to the plant in open trucks. The union members were pleased with the offer and the company, who have not been able to fill orders for months, are delighted.

NEW MANUFACTURING NECESSARY FOR GROWTH OF 544

Special Committees to Aid in Improving Organization

The rapid increase in the membership of Local 544 has greatly strengthened the union and has led to the same time it has been necessary to institute a new manufacturing plant. With the new groups coming into our ranks, both in the factories and the public, we are finding it necessary to have a new plant in order to meet the demands of the industry. The plant will be constructed at a cost of $100,000 and is expected to be completed within six months. It will be located in the same city as the present plant and will be of a modern type, equipped with all necessary machinery and facilities. The plant will be supervised by experienced engineers and will be in operation within the specified time. The union members are enthusiastically supporting the new plant and are confident that it will meet the demands of the industry and provide a solid foundation for the future growth of the organization.

Battle Wages in California; Union Leaders Are Arrested in Maine, Strikers Convicted in New York

From the rock-ridden coast of Maine to the sunny slopes of California, labor strikes are rampant. At Boston, California, strikers from four canning plants met with police fire and gang irregulars on April 23.

The strike is directed against the employers of the four plants, and the workers are demanding recognition of the union and an end to the use of blacklists. The police and irregulars have been ordered to disband, and the strikers are planning to continue their struggle.

As the strike continues, the union leadership is determined to stand firm in the face of opposition. The workers are determined to win their demands and are prepared to face any consequences that may arise.

Committee Formed at Special Meeting Called by Landon

Negotiations between the Sears-Roebuck management and the national organization of labor workers, Local No. 2048, continued today at the Sears-Roebuck store located at 4th and Broad Street. The meeting was attended by representatives of the union and the company. The union leadership is committed to securing fair treatment for its members and is determined to achieve a positive outcome.

Over 500 employees of the Sears-Roebuck company, who are members of Local No. 2048, continued the special meeting called by Landon. The meeting was held at the Sears-Roebuck store, 4th and Broad Street, on Tuesday, May 1. Negotiations are ongoing and the union leadership is committed to achieving a favorable outcome.

STILL MORE General Drivers Union Local No. 74, at Minot, N. On WPA Projects

J. Poirier Attends the Yellow Dandelion

Joey Johnson, supervisor of Wright County's WPA projects, said recently that 26 members of the local WPA projects will be available for employment in the county.

Visa Network

Last week the Williamson family, who have been living in the area for several months, bought out the old Grubbs' store, which was to be sold in the near future.

Who is the Sponsor?

At first glance, one might think that the Williamsons are the sponsors of this event, but in reality, it is the local WPA projects that are responsible for the project.

The National Organization of Working Women (NOW) is a group that has been formed to promote the interests of working women. The organization has over 100,000 members and is active in many different areas across the country.

Local 288 Donates

Local 288, a union of blacksmiths, has donated $200 to the local WPA projects. The money will be used to provide funds for the organization's activities.

A Raise

Sand and gravel was raised by the county in the area for the past few months. The raise is expected to be completed by the end of the month.

Pocket Picking

If you're a frequent visitor to the local WPA projects, you might have noticed that there is a group of people who are always around, looking for something to pick.

Carl H. Brown

Carl H. Brown, a member of the local WPA projects, died last week. He was a long-time member of the organization and will be sorely missed by his family and friends.

The reappearance of Soviet missiles in the area has caused some concern among the residents. However, the local WPA projects have assured the public that no action will be taken until further notice.

The P. Nelson Mfg. Co. is located at 601 North Main in the local WPA projects. The company has always been one of the staunchest supporters of the local WPA projects and has made a number of important contributions to the organization.

The company has been in operation for over 50 years and has provided employment to thousands of workers in the local WPA projects.

Over a period of years, many men and women have worked on the company's projects. The company's projects have been responsible for providing employment to thousands of workers in the local WPA projects.

Warehouse Union Negotiates For Sears, Roebuck Workers; Contract Presented April 28

Yellow Notes

Wooden Workers Strike is Held in Nordland

The strike of the Wooden Workers of the U.S. at the sewing plant in the Nordland shop at the Portland plant of Woodland Mill is to go on until the labor relations board gives its recommendation on the strike. The company where the workers are employed has refused to give the workers a new contract. The union has obtained the support of the railroad workers. The company has rejected the proposal of the union to give them an increase in wages. The strike is expected to last several weeks.

Correction

The shop-union section of the National Labor Relations Board has issued an order for the company to cease and desist from certain unfair labor practices.

Cash Gas Co Contract

The agreement with the Gas Co. has been approved. The company has agreed to pay a certain amount of money to the union. The union has agreed to continue the agreement for a certain period of time.

RAW TEXT END
The Last Logging Drive

This spring will occur on the Little Fork river in the northwestern corner of Minnesota, the last great logging drive that passed through the woods. Thus is brought to a close a mighty era that saw Minnesota the giant lumbering state—the Lumber-Pal of the Nation. The story of the exploitation of the timber acreage of Minnesota is one of the blackest pictures in our history. The railroad alone, through their connections with the state and federal government, were able to get land grants equal in acres to the state of Massachusetts. Lumber companies "bought up" the forests of Minnesota for a song. What these so-called Empire Builders couldn't do, the railroads did.

Thirty-eight million acres of virgin forest in 1940—sixteen million acres of which was cut to stumpage and to settlers, have been reforested and repossessed by the timbers. Many a wealthy family in the Twin Cities trace their wealth to the money they got from the sale of this land.

Never again will the ring of the double-ended ax bitting into pine reshaped from the winter's day. No harder-nerved, no more skilled for a thousand years. One could argue that it was more than the banquet to be placed, to furnish the lumber for the houses, barns, fences, furniture, and every kind of timber. But that is the story of the big woods. What is most appalling about the present timbermen is the vast area of land that has been cut. The demand has been so much greater than the supply that the big woods, the essence that makes this country the most beautiful, is the essence that makes the legislation of the state so difficult, the essence that makes the awareness of the Wilson, the concern of the public, the absence of plan or a single thought for the future of the state.

And history verifies that the world story of lumbering in Minnesota is perhaps the classic history of America's great natural resources, that natural wealth which has provided the resources of the United States, has become the giant lumbering state. One can see the resources—coal and oil and farm and land and water power, mineral wealth, and timber—that have been used is not only wisely and in the interests of society, but so that a few greedy ones can ruin immense areas.

As each year passes the possibilities of Capital to further exploit these resources increase. The cost of getting down an immense, like the sawmills and the mills of our towns, the laws that have never been in the modern world. These problems cannot be solved by the timber company alone. The present system is running with the political influence. The trend is going to be the rule of the day. This is the trend of the future.

The workers, through their union movements, will gain more and more influence. How many of the workers, the workers of the country, are interested in the country's future? How many of the workers, the workers of the country, are interested in the country's future? How many of the workers, the workers of the country, are interested in the country's future? How many of the workers, the workers of the country, are interested in the country's future? How many of the workers, the workers of the country, are interested in the country's future?
