Ship Builders Close New York Yard; Thirty Day Truce for Michigan Truck Drivers

A strike called by the Industrial Union Department of the United Workers of America is now in its seventh week. It began on June 14, 1937, when workers in the New York yard of the United States Steel Corporation, at Staten Island, went on strike and has been continued ever since.

The strike was called by the workers to demand an immediate 30-cent-a-week increase in wages, which they say is more than enough to offset the 20-cent-a-week wage cut taken two years ago. The company has offered to raise the wages 15 cents a week, but the workers refuse to accept this offer.

At Newport News, the shipyard owned by the United States Navy, the workers are also on strike for a 30-cent-a-week increase. The company has offered to raise the wages 15 cents a week, but the workers refuse to accept this offer.

The strike has been going on for seven weeks, and the workers are determined to continue until their demands are met.

Warne Oland, who plays the part of Charlie Chan, the Chinese detective, in "Grandma's Garden," is making his second picture. In the first picture, his performance almost made him a star, and now he is back for a much larger role. The picture is a great success, and it is expected to do well at the box office.

However, the new protagonist has always been in the film industry. He was born in 1909, the year of the Great Depression, and his parents were both actors. He made his debut in 1920, at the age of two, and has been in films ever since. He is the son of the legendary actress, Mary Oland, and the late actor, George Oland.

His first major role was in "The Adventures of Don Quixote," which was released in 1921. He played the part of Sancho Panza, and his performance was praised by critics. The film was a box office hit, and it established him as a rising star.

His next major role was in "The Mark of Zorro," which was released in 1924. He played the part of the title character, and his performance was again praised by critics. The film was a box office hit, and it established him as a major star.

Since then, he has appeared in many films, including "The Thief," "The Maltese Falcon," "The Big Sleep," "The Lady in the Lake," and "The Maltese Falcon." He has been nominated for an Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor for his performance in "The Maltese Falcon," and he won the award for Best Actor for his performance in "The Big Sleep.

He is currently working on a new film, "The Adventures of Don Quixote," which is scheduled for release in 2022.
