Employers’ Associations in America

By Stanley H. Koocher

In this last article, a word should be said about the employers association movement throughout the world. Most of the great employers associations have been formed during the twentieth century, particularly during and since the First World War. However, the German employers are even older and better organized than the British and the American. The National Employers Association of Great Britain, organized in 1900, was the first in the world. The German Employers Association was organized in 1903. The American Employers Association was organized in 1904. The French Employers Association was organized in 1905. The Italian Employers Association was organized in 1906. The Canadian Employers Association was organized in 1907. The Swedish Employers Association was organized in 1908. The Dutch Employers Association was organized in 1909. The Belgian Employers Association was organized in 1910. The Spanish Employers Association was organized in 1911. The Portuguese Employers Association was organized in 1912. The Chilean Employers Association was organized in 1913. The Argentine Employers Association was organized in 1914. The Brazilian Employers Association was organized in 1915. The Mexican Employers Association was organized in 1916. The Japanese Employers Association was organized in 1917. The Australian Employers Association was organized in 1918. The New Zealand Employers Association was organized in 1919. The South African Employers Association was organized in 1920. The Canadian Employers Association in the United States was organized in 1921. The Canadian Employers Association in Canada was organized in 1922.

A JOURNEYMAN'S STORY

Monday morning to Boulder.
Meet with union leaders, go over the details of the strike with board members and talk with shop stewards about the contract

The contract that has been in the making for months is now finally here.

And now it's time to celebrate. The workers have won, and justice has been served. The battle is over, and we can all breathe a sigh of relief.

The strike has been a long and difficult one, but the workers have stood strong. They have fought for their rights and have not given in to the company's demands.

Now that the contract is finally signed, the workers can look forward to a better future. The wage increase will improve their living conditions and the benefits will provide them with the security they deserve.

The strike was a hard-fought battle, but the workers have emerged victorious. They have shown strength and determination, and their efforts have paid off.

The workers are grateful to everyone who supported them during the strike. They are also grateful to the union leaders who worked tirelessly to negotiate the contract.

The strike has been a turning point in the workers' lives, and they look forward to a brighter future. They are ready to get back to work and to build a strong and prosperous union.

Thank you for your support. Together we can make a difference. Together we can win.
